THE CAMBRIDGE HISTORY OF ENGLISH LITERATURE. Edited by A. W. WARD, Litt.D., F.B.A., Master of Peterhouse, and A. R. WALLER, M.A. Vol. III., Renascence and Reformation.

Royal 8vo Buckram 9s. net Half-Morocco 15s. net

Among the principal contents of this volume are chapters on Reformation Literature in England, by the Rev. J. P. Whitney; Reformation Literature in Scotland, by Dr. P. "The supreme merit of the volume is the discrimination and judgment with which it brings to a focus the gradual evolution of a language, and the wonderful outburst of creative achievement in letters under the Tudors. . . . We have no hesitation in saying, in full view of its predecessors, that 'Renascence and Reformation' reaches a level of literary excellence and critical discernment which surpasses anything that 'The Cambridge History of English Literature' has yet given us."—Standard.

THE AUTHORISED VERSION OF THE ENGLISH BIBLE, 1611.

Edited by WILLIAM ALDIS WRIGHT, M.A., Vice-Master of Trinity College, Cambridge. In five volumes: Vol. I., Genesis to Deuteronomy. Vol. II., Joshua to Esther. Vol. III., Job to Malachi. Vol. IV., The Apocrypha. Vol. V., The New Testament.

The text of modern English Bibles differs considerably from that of the original Authorised Version of 1611. With the idea of correcting or improving the translation, alterations have from time to time been made by printers and editors in words and phrases, spelling and punctuation. The present edition, treating the Version as the greatest of English classics, gives a faithful reprint of the original text, in a form intended to appeal to the reader as distinguished from the theologian. A full prospectus, with specimen pages, will be sent on application.

Savage, Librarian of Wallasey Public Library. Other kindred books in this pretty blue cloth, 4-by-6½ series are:—"How to Read English Literature," by Laurie Magnus, M.A.; "History in Fiction," by E. A. Baker, M.A.; "Manual of Practical Bibliography," by T. D. Brown, &c

Referring to the discoveries among the mounds of Nippur in Ancient Babylon, by Professor Hilprecht—discoveries which, by the way, have been questioned in America—Mr. Savage says:—"How oddly it must strike modern librarians to learn that some of the features of library management on which they pride themselves to-day were practised on the Tigris and the Euphrates several thousand years before the Christian era." But is it so surprising that the ancients should have classified and catalogued their books? Given the books the rest follows. The old lady at the corner of the street with her tray of fruit and sweets does not mix her apples and pears and nuts and sweets in one heap; she follows one of the oldest natural laws, that of like unto like, the most powerful modern example of which is the homogenous battle fleet. It would have been much more strikingly odd if the Nippur librarians had kept their 25,000 books without methodical arrangement or classification, because then they would have been useless. It is probable that a great deal of our wonder as to how the ancients and semi-ancients managed things would vanish if we could really see how they managed them. To come to one who, although dead some three centuries, will always be modern—Montaigne—what could be more interesting to a librarian than his account of what was, apparently, the perfectly free library of the Vatican, in 1581, when he visited it?

Montaigne and a Free Library in 1581

"It is contained," he says, "in five or six rooms all communicating one with the other. There are many rows of desks, each desk having a great number of books chained thereto. Also, in the chests, which were all opened for my inspection, I saw many manuscripts, of which I chiefly remarked a Seneca and the Opuscula of Plutarch. . . . I saw likewise a Chinese book writ in strange characters, on leaves made of a certain stuff much more tender and transparent than the paper we use. . . . I saw also the Breviary of St. Gregory in manuscript. . . . Next a book by St. Thomas Aquinas, containing corrections made by the author himself, who wrote badly, using a small character worse even than my own. Next a Bible printed on parchment, one of those which Plantin has recently printed in four languages. . . . I inspected the library without any difficulty; indeed, anyone may visit it and make what extracts he likes; it is open almost every morning."

There is nothing more interesting in Mr. Savage's very interesting and instructive book than this bit from Montaigne. It makes it clear that the custom of chaining books to desks in libraries was perhaps not so much a protection against thieves as a precaution against careless readers who would have mixed and muddled them up, making orderly search impossible. The bit is from Montaigne's "Travels," so little known as compared with his Essays. His note that the writing of St. Thomas Aquinas is even worse than his own is one of those little touches which account for his immortality. In his Preface Mr. Savage explains that his only apology for daring to follow in the footsteps of Edward Edwards and his "Memoirs of Libraries" is that it is out of print and scarce, and in some parts is not up-to-date. What he has attempted to provide is a summary history for the elementary student at a popular price. Although intended mainly to enable library assistants to prepare for part of the Library Association Professional Examination, the little book, with its excellent Index, can be heartily recommended to all who are interested in the history of books. It deals briefly but ably with the Libraries of Ancient Times, with Mediæval Libraries, and the Preservation of the Greek and Latin Classics, Early Monastic Libraries, the Principal Libraries of Europe and the United States, with appendices on Book Collectors and List of Books consulted. We can recommend it to booksellers and librarians as a book for the small select personal reference shelf.

Notes and Announcements

A SECOND edition of "Anne of Green Gables" is already announced by Messrs. Sir Isaak Pi man & Sons, Ltd. In the United States over 60,000 copies of the 6s. (i e, $1.50) edition have been sold in a e v months. We believe this charming story is by a Canadian lady; if so then Canada is to be congratulated.

Mr. Murray is shortly publishing a volume of naval reminiscences, entitled "Two Admirals," which tells the life-story of Sir Fairfax Moresby, G.C.B., who was born in 1786, and of his son, Admiral John Moresby, who, happily, is still alive. To show how things have improved in the Navy since Sir Fairfax Moresby joined it—his first experience was being ushered into the midshipman's mess, which was a dismal den in the cockpit lighted by guttering dips.

But what are the properties, what are the secrets of radium? Mr. Frederick Soddy, the Lecturer in Physical Chemistry and Radio-activity in Glasgow University, has written a book, "The Interpretation of Radium," which answers the question; it is to be issued by Mr. Murray in his "Progressive Science Series."

Messrs. Crosby Lockwood & Son have just published the new editions for 1909, thoroughly revised to date, of the standard works, "The Engineer's Year Book of Formulæ, Rules, Tables, Data, &c.," and of "Every Man's Own Lawyer," the 46th edition.

Messrs. Alston Rivers, Ltd., have requested us to mention that the publication of the new melodramatic novel, "Salome and the Head," has been postponed.

There was an error in our announcement last week of Messrs. Longmans' forthcoming Memoir of Bishop Geo. H. Wilkinson. It is by Dr. A. J. Mason, not Morrison.

Jerusalem for forty centuries has been a magnetic centre of the world's thought. Mr. Murray is shortly publishing a volume entitled "The City of Jerusalem," which tells the results of research and exploration on the ancient site from the beginning to most recent times. The author is Colonel C. R. Conder, LL.D., whose archæological explorations in the East are so well-known.

Mr. Murray will shortly publish in his "Wisdom of the East" Series an interesting study of the golden age of Chinese poetry entitled "A Lute of Jade," from the pen of Mr. L. Cranmer Byng, the editor of the series. It is the first attempt ever made to popularise the undoubted beauties of Chinese verse for the benefit of English readers. Each poet of importance will have a short biographical and critical introduction together with specimens of his work.

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. will issue very shortly "The Royal End," the last and only remaining unpublished novel of the late Mr. Henry Harland, author of "The Cardinal's Snuff Box." The scene of this story is laid in Italy and New England.

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. announce as nearly ready "The Standard Concert Guide," a handbook of the standard symphonies, oratorios, cantatas, and symphonic poems for the concert goer, with a useful list of the principal English musical organisations by George P. Upton, author of "The Standard Operas," &c.

His Majesty the King and His Imperial Majesty the German Emperor have both graciously accepted a copy of "The Autobiography of the late William Callow, R.W.S.," edited by H. M. Cundall, I.S.O. This water-colour painter, who died a year ago upwards of 95 years of age, had the honour, during his long career, of many personal interviews with the late Queen Victoria, and he taught the late Empress Frederick, when Crown Princess, sketching in water-colours at Potsdam.

Messrs. Cassell published on the 19th inst. "The Lure of Eve," by Edith Mary Moore. It is a first novel; described as "one of the most daring and successful analyses of the undesirable feminine in recent literature."

Messrs. Siegle, Hill & Co. are publishing an entirely new English and Italian Dictionary by J. McLaughlin, uniform in size and type with the large English and French Dictionary, by the same editor, price 6s.; also a Dutch and English Miniature Dictionary bound in roan, price 2s. net.

The next novels to be published by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co., are "Geoffrey Cheriton," by John Barnett, author of "The Prince's Valet," &c.; and "Teresa," by Mrs. Zangwill, author of "The First Mrs. Mollivar," &c. "Geoffrey Cheriton," which will be ready on the 26th of this month, is a story of friendship lasting from schooldays into manhood, and depicts the finer love of a reserved nature for a brilliant and unstable friend. "Teresa" tells how a young woman, misreading life through her mother's unworthy eyes, makes a wrong choice, but is able to redeem her unworthy husband by the very strength of her innocency.

A good many people have an idea that the Humanitarian League merely exists with the hope of destroying all the sports of the field—but this is far from being the case. It certainly has in view the elimination of unfair and unnecessary cruelty, and no one ought to object to that. But it also has for objects the redress of excessive sentences and of miscarriages of justice—and these must happen; we know cases where the personal animus of a Judge against a particular Counsel has caused him to inflict great injustice on a litigant. The exertions of the League on behalf of Mr. Edalji are quite unknown to the general public. Then the League is doing good work indeed in agitating against the imprisonment of honest debtors, against some inhuman clauses of the Vagrancy Act, savage prison floggings, and unwise birchings. We are glad to see that Mr. Joseph Collinson's pamphlet on "The Fate of the Fur Seal" is in a third edition.

New works just published by Mr. Edward Arnold are "Letters from a Settlement," by Miss A. L. Hodson; a novel, entitled "Seekers: a Romance of the Balkans," from the pen of Mr. Frank Savile; and a book on Memory by Dr. Henry J. Watt, the lecturer on Psychology at Glasgow University.

Messrs. Jack announce the issue of a new comprehensive and profusely illustrated work to be entitled "British and Foreign Arms and Armour," by Mr. Charles H. Ashdown.

"Christ's Conquest, and other Sermons preached in St. Paul's Cathedral," by the late Canon Liddon, is announced for immediate publication by Messrs. Allenson in the Sixpenny Series, which already include works by J. H. Newman, F. W. Robertson, James Martineau, &c.

A useful little book is about to be issued from the firm of Messrs. Seeley & Co., "How Telegraphs and Telephones Work," by Charles R. Gibson.

A very timely and charming little edition of "The Poems of Edgar Allan Poe" has just been published in cloth at 1s. by Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd., with a sketch of Poe by John H. Ingram.

"Everyman's Library" would obviously not be complete without the "Letters of Charles Lamb." Messrs. Dent's edition, which is to be published on March 8th, is of interest owing to the fact that several letters contained in it are still copyright and have not therefore appeared in any other editions of his works.

We understand from Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co., the publishers of "Banzai," by "Parabellum," which has sold over 300,000 copies in the German edition, that the novel will not be published for another week owing to special arrangements having been made for its publication in the United States of America, Japan, Australia, Canada, and the Continent. The same firm are issuing immediately a new story from the pen of E. Everett-Green, entitled "The City of the Golden Gate," in which the horrors of a modern earthquake form the background of a love romance.

Mr. John Long will shortly publish a new novel by Harold Bindloss. It is entitled "The Greater Power," and is a story of Colonial life in which a young Englishman, who rashly undertakes to reclaim a flooded valley on the Canadian Pacific Slope, and the daughter of a forest rancher who finds him half dead in the snow, largely figure. The book relates his struggle with frost and flood, and also deals with the conflicting influence of two women upon the man's character.

Mr. John Bloundelle-Burton's new novel, "Within Four Walls," will shortly be published by Mr. John Milne. The story is founded upon an iniquitous sentence which was passed upon the heroine shortly after the assassination of Henri IV., she having become possessed of a plot against his life, which, in absolute fact, had no connection with the crime of Ravaillac.

We are glad to hear from Mr. John Long that he will shortly publish a new novel by M. E. Frances (Mrs. Frances Blundell), entitled "Noblesse Oblige." It is a story of the period of the French Revolution. A French nobleman and his grand-daughter escape from the horrors of Paris and accept the hospitality of an English peeress. The author paints a picture of "the days of old," and of the incomparable grace of the exiled French nobility, in the soft and delicate tints for which her work has long been famed.

In connection with the Poe Centenary, as already mentioned, the Oxford University Press is issuing Edgar Allan Poe's Poems and Critical Essays in the Oxford Poets series. The volume has been edited by Mr. R. Brimley Johnson, who contributes a life of the poet.

Messrs. Alston Rivers inform us that the title of Mr. John Trevena's new novel, "The House that Jack Built," to be published on the 24th, is amply borne out by the story, which contains many characters corresponding with those of the nursery rhyme. The "maiden all forlorn" is the same Beatrice Pentreath that enlivened the pages of Mr. Trevena's first book, "A Pixy in Petticoats"; but though several of the Dartmoor rustics also make their re-appearance, the story can hardly be described as a sequel. Most of the "principals" are introduced for the first time.

Messrs. Methuen announce the issue of the second volume of the "Handbooks of English Church History" series, "The Saxon Church and the Norman Conquest," by the Rev. Canon C. T. Cruttwell.

Mrs. Croker has given to her forthcoming work the title "Katherine the Arrogant."

Messrs. Cassell announce for publication, on February 25th, Part 1 of a new serial issue of "The King's Empire." This work consists of 670 photo views and 25 coloured plates, with descriptive text, forming a comprehensive, descriptive record of the various phases of life in our Empire. The work will be completed in 24 fortnightly parts, price 7d. net each.

Miss Alice Maud Meadows has travelled through South Africa from Cape Town to fifty miles beyond the Victoria Falls, journeying for the most part by post cart, ox wagon, and on horseback. Her new book, "The Dukedom of Portsea," which Mr. Werner Laurie is about to publish, will probably arouse a great deal of comment, as it deals with the danger of marriage between a white man and a half-caste woman.

Dick Donovan's new novel, which will be published shortly by Mr. Werner Laurie, is a realistic study of "down Whitechapel way." It is to be called "Lil of the Slums."

Mr. G. T. Juckes, 85, St. Martin's Court, London, has for sale a collection of pamphlets of the French Revolution period made by Thackeray, probably in the thirties, with two of his autographs and a list of the pamphlets in Thackeray's writing. The price asked is £4 15s., which seems very reasonable, seeing there was only one Thackeray and his admirers are legion.

Dr. Newton H. Marshall, whose work, "Conversion, or the New Birth," is to be published early next month by the National Free Church Council, says that of the twelve hundred volumes mentioned in the "Theological Encyclopædia," there is only one dealing directly with Conversion.

Already a third edition of the "Life of James McNeill Whistler," by E. R. and J. Pennell, revised and corrected by the authors, has been published by Mr. Heinemann.

There are scores of clever penmen (says a writer on Books and Bookmen in The Manchester Guardian) who, on the appearance of a striking book, seize upon it, analyse its methods, and fill their own pages with its "thunder," so that before the original author has had time to make good his success the market is glutted with books of the only sort he can produce, and the public are satiated. They are a formidable danger for the professional author.

The Edinburgh Evening Dispatch discovered the following pleasant glimpse of Dr. Johnson in the recently published book on Bishop Percy. It is in a letter to which Boswell had not access, from Mrs. Percy to her husband, written from Brightelmston in 1769:—"My Dearest Life,—Would you believe it, but I do assure you Dr. Johnson comes to the Rooms every night. The Thrales have made him quite a new man, and he looks so smart that you would hardly know him, and is in charming health."

Mr. Unwin will publish on February 22nd a shilling volume by Mr. J. A. Farrer on the burning subject of "Invasion and Conscription." The purpose of the book is to examine, from the standpoint of the best obtainable authorities, the question of the possibility of a hostile invasion of the British Islands, and of the necessity or utility of a scheme of Conscription or Universal Service. The book will form the first volume of a new shilling library, to be entitled "Unwin's Sociology Series." It will be followed almost immediately by cheap editions of M. Gustave le Bon's "The Crowd," Mr. Goldwin Smith's "My Memory of Gladstone," and other works.

Mrs. Burton Harrison, author of "Latter Day Sweethearts," "A Bachelor Maid," and other stories, has written a new novel, which Mr. T. Fisher Unwin will publish on February 22nd. It is the story of an ambitious American mother's matchmaking in England. Viewing the affair as a commercial "proposition," she "places" her two elder daughters very favourably, but with subsequent unhappy results to herself. The main thread of the story is concerned with Flavia, the youngest girl, who is nearly caught by a worthless young man about town, whom her mother favours; but, eventually, after many misunderstandings marries the right man from America.

Professor Knight is just publishing, through Mr. Francis Griffiths, a volume of addresses entitled "Things New and Old." The addresses refer to duties, aspirations and ideals that do not alter with the changing years. The book is dedicated to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Mr. Heinemann announces for publication on February 25th, a new novel, entitled "Uncle Gregory," by George Sandeman; a first novel, "written with much brilliance and humour, and should attract a wide circle of readers and a ready welcome for anything else the author may write."

Messrs. George Allen & Sons will publish immediately a new story, entitled "Daphne in Fitzroy Street," by E. Nesbit (author of "The Red House"). It is a story of a girl's adventures and life among a Bohemian set in London, and is pretty sure to be a charming one.

Messrs. Williams & Norgate have through the press a volume entitled "Man's Origin, Destiny, and Duty," by Hugh MacColl; also new editions of Professor Harnack's "Luke the Physician" (being the first volume of the New Testament Studies) and "The Life of the Spirit," by Professor Rudolf Eucken of Jena University, are nearly ready.

"The Royal Law," George Ryven's new novel which Mr. Francis Griffiths is about to publish, hinges to a large extent upon the unsuspected weakness underlying a brilliant personality.

Messrs. Greening & Co.'s Lotus Library is one of the most attractive of the many libraries of big books in small editions now so popular. They have just added to it "The Matapan Jewels," by Boisgobey, edited and translated by G. F. Monkshood.

The Baroness Orczy tells an amusing story of a visit she paid to the theatre one day whilst the rehearsals of her first play, "The Scarlet Pimpernel," were in progress. There was a new call-boy there, says The Penny Magazine, who had not quite succeeded in locating the various personages. Going up to the Baroness, he said, "Excuse me, miss, but are you one of the company?" "No," she replied with a smile; "not exactly. In fact, I am only the authoress." "Oh, is that all?" replied the boy. "Very well, then, you sit down over there out of the way," and he turned away with a sniff of contempt."

A New Serial

WE regret that in a notice of Messrs. Dent's "Trees and Shrubs of the British Isles," we stated that the work was to appear in 10 parts. This should have been 16 parts at 1s. net. Messrs. Dent say the work is being very favourably received, and shows every promise of being a great success.

The World's Pictures

Important New Work.

ON February 25th Messrs. Cassell commence publishing an entirely new serial entitled "The World's Great Pictures," in fortnightly parts, price 7d. net each. It will consist of upwards of 410 beautiful reproductions of the world's great masterpieces, and 13 coloured plates, with notes on the artists and their work. Messrs. Cassell inform us that the work will include reproductions of many paintings that have never appeared in a publication of this kind before, and that it throws open the doors of all the most important private and public art galleries in Europe.

Edinburgh Book Notes

By "EDINA"

A WELL-KNOWN novelist has remarked that "a contemporary lie is more desirable than the truth." This is probably why modern works of fiction are such strangers to the truth. Of course, it is reasoned that a person, seeking to grasp the factors of atmospheric preponderance in any locality at any given time, is likely to find these axiomatic expressions true; the whole truth (as in legal cases) being suppressed by the actual categorical operation of extracting it, while a contemporary lie, to gain currency, must assume all the body, form, light and atmosphere of the truth.

To speak plainly, a contemporary lie is a work of art; the truth, a growth of nature. The one a figment of the brain, the other a palpable expression of spirit. This is one of the factors upon which an upright judge of human nature counts in summing up his case.

I have just been reading a book of considerable merit, but which has been relegated to the top shelf long ago—"Scotland: its Faith and its Features," by Rev. F. Trench, published by Bentley in 1846. The author, in his discursive manner, among other items which impressed him during his visit to Scotland in 1845, speaks of the Edinburgh bookshops in the following terms:—

> "Most observable, however, are libraries and bookshops, which, in proportion to the number of other shops and to the number of the inhabitants of Edinburgh, far surpass anything which I have ever witnessed in any other town, either at home or abroad. And here I do not so much allude to showy establishments, half-filled with ornamental stationery and glittering with gay bindings, though these are not wanting; but rather to plain business-like houses, filled with good collections of stock books, to which you might fancy that the middle classes and industrious students would repair in search of literary information or of means of pursuing those various studies to which the youth of Scotland apply themselves with such assiduity and zeal. Surely the existence of this vast number of libraries is a fact which, to use a phrase appropriate to the subject, must speak volumes as to that exercise of intellectual faculties for which, throughout all classes, Scotland has been long famed and is famed still. The publishing and printing establishments of Scotland are very numerous, including those which issue The Edinburgh Review, Blackwood's Magazine, Tait's Edinburgh Magazine, The North British Review, and many other periodicals devoted to religion, politics and literature. The amount of mental and manual employment which the maintenance of such publications must, year after year, occasion in a town of this size has, of course, a considerable influence on the intelligence and prosperity of the inhabitants. That best encouragement, the encouragement of the public, ensures an attention to literature and the arts connected with publishing which otherwise would lie dormant, or, at all events, seek its development elsewhere."

Truly "we are a people set on a hill" if this is all true regarding Edinburgh at the period referred to; for this was a time when the booksellers themselves were lamenting the decadence of literary interest, and the tendency of authors of merit to seek that encouragement in London which the limits of the Scottish capital circumscribed. That drifting goes on still, publishers following authors into the great centre of the world's commerce. Yet Edinburgh can still hold up her head as being the most bookish town on earth. Her publishers stand in the forefront of enterprise, not only in the management of their businesses, but in the general excellence of their productions, both in quality of matter and style of production. Her bookshops are still the haunt of the literary inclined, be they rich or poor, and her libraries are rich in those qualities which, like the vicar's wife's wedding gown, "would wear well."

Yet there is lacking that very distinctive Scottish note, which, in the days of Scott, "Christopher North," Hogg, Galt, Jeffrey and that cultured Edinburgh circle, was so strong and yet so sweet that the melody remains still with us. Will it ever return?

"Noctes Ambrosianæ" sweet, when Wilson and his friends did meet.
Could ye not now spare us one hour, to feel the art of long lost power,
In which, no world outside discerning, but only Coila's inner learning, Wafting us to that silver strand whereon immortal writers stand?

They beckon us with smiles so sweet that we would fain our brothers greet,
And learn from lips, inspired by Heaven, how this great blessing has been driven Far from the haunts of mortal men, and how it may be wooed again
To speak fond raptures to the willing, that tempests in our hearts are stilling.

We breathe the prayer, but yearn in vain for things which ne'er return again;
For Heaven high has stern decreed that mortal pen must faster speed,
That mortal brain must fiercer glow, that higher thoughts each son must know,
That clearer truth all men must see, inspired by th' immortal "WE."

Yes, we can revive old names and wind them round new associations; but the past is ever with us only in spirit. But, if we are not awake to the impulses of the spirit sense, we are dead, even with a name. The Edinburgh Magazine, which made its first fame under the tutelage of Tait, has been revived again for the third time; but unless it bursts the bonds of its swaddling clothes at once it is doomed to die long ere it can reach an age of reason.

When are we to have that Scottish magazine which all true Scotsmen have dreamt of, written by Scotsmen—on Scottish subjects—for Scotsmen at home and abroad? Everything Scotish seems to savour of fad-dom in these days. We want something robust to vindicate our character as literary and philosophic—something which will prove us to be true gentlemen; and we "won't be happy till we get it."

London General Porters' Benevolent Association

THE London staff of Messrs. Thos. Nelson & Sons gave an excellent Bohemian concert on February 12th, in the York Room, Manchester Hotel, Aldersgate Street, in aid of the funds of the above Association. We are glad to be able to state that financially the concert was a great success, the sum of at least 20 guineas is expected to be handed over to the L.G.P.B.A.

The Chairman (Mr. H. Scheurmier) was supported by Mr. L. D. Carpenter, and John Buchan, Esq., and Sidney Sandle, Esq., C.C., were the Patrons. The programme was really high class throughout, every artiste being accorded rapturous applause. Miss Carrie Tubb sang with exquisite feeling the "Waltz Song" ("Tom Jones") and "Dream of Day Jill." Miss Hettie Stammer gave a charming rendering of "Love," by T. Mattei, and "Once," by A. Hervey. Miss Ethel Kemish in her "Jewel Song" from "Faust" brought down the house, and achieved a success in "Love's Mastery." Miss Grace Weaver (violinist) played "Saltarelle." "Salut d'Amour," and "Elfentang" with masterly touch. Miss Louie Brandy, Miss Elsie Parry, and Miss C. Mekles all contributed to the success of the evening, and Madam Lilian Wearing's descriptive recitals, "Relief of Lucknow" and "The Rehearsal," were admirable. It is impossible to discriminate amongst the male singers, all were so good. They included Mr. Chris Seymour, Mr. Syd Smale, Mr. George Graystone, Mr. Chas. Morris Campbell, and Mr. J. Mekles. Other items were musical sketches by Mr. Selwyn Driver, ventriloquial interlude by Mr. Frank Percival, legerdemain by Mr. J. P. H. Bewster, recitations by Mr. Chas. Wright, and a selection on the mandoline by Mr. M. S. Hanscombe.

Mr. S. H. Parry presided at the piano. The stewards were Mr. W. E. Bohling, Mr. S. C. Brown, Mr. D. A. Cox, Mr. F. Daw, Mr. C. J. Klapka, Mr. J. Mekles, Mr. G. Milne, Mr. C. E. Saunders, Mr. W. Thurston and Mr. R. Wilson.

The thanks of all are due to Mr. J. N. Temple and Mr. George Slater for the excellent array of talent provided by them. The evening was enjoyed by all.

The Ladies' Court Book

MESSRS. DALY & CO., publishers, 37, Essex Street, Strand, write: "We have the pleasure to inform you that 'The Ladies' Court Book' for 1909 will be published on March 1st by ourselves in conjunction with Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son. The new volume has been enlarged and improved in many ways since the first issue of the book last May, and containing, as it does now, about 10,000 names, with biographical and personal notes of recognised leaders of society and well-known ladies of the day, many of whom appear in no other book of reference, it may confidently be asserted that it supplies a want that has long been felt by those to whom it was important to know, for social or other purposes, who's who in the world of women."

Reminiscences of a Famous Oarsman—Mr. W. B. Woodgate

MR. EVELEIGH NASH could not have chosen a better time for launching his handsome volume "Reminiscences of an Old Sportsman," the pleasant autobiography of Mr. W. B. Woodgate. For some weeks the Universities have been preparing for the great race, and every day now sees some boathouse opened, for the 1909 rowing season has begun. To have a good place on a roof near Barnes Railway Bridge, where you can see the last thousand fateful yards of the 'Varsity Race, is splendid—it is not only the finish of the Oxford and Cambridge Race, it is the crowning moment of thousands of men and others with whom he has come in contact—a list which must include most of those of note in connection with Thames rowing. In the next edition we can assure Mr. Nash that it would greatly increase the value of the work if the interesting incidents and subjects were indexed as well as the names of sportsmen, the latter list is, of course, very useful, and we are glad to see in it the names of those good sportsmen—Winchester and E. A. Clowes—but it is a little absurd to find in the Index of a work like this no mention of Oxford or Henley, or any incident or event mentioned in its 500 pages, only names of people.

Je ny the Terrier

In 1862, when at Henley with a Brasenose four, Mr. Woodgate had his favourite terrier "Jenny" with him, she wore the B.N.C. colours during the regatta, and ran along the bank. In the last race of the second day her Master and Champneys as a pair were rowing against the Third Trinity pair—the late J. G. Chambers and the present Sir John Hawkshaw; it was a close finish, and Mr. Woodgate's friends running on the bank urged him on, calling "Woodgate!" "Woodgate!" His dog hearing his name and seeing the excited gestures of his friends got it into her head that they were abusing him and went for their legs! After the race five or six with torn flannels came to the Red Lion to complain of the "Brasenose dog"—and it took a good half dozen of champagne to wash out Jenny's sins. Only her Master's friends were attacked. There are lots of good stories in the book; stories which, however, in a good many cases, want, to do them justice, the accompaniments of the owner's voice across the walnuts and the wine, or between the puffs of an after-dinner cigar.

The College Scout

One of our Author's College servants or "Scout" was keen on the perquisites, and to a light supper of oysters and lobsters and mulled Brasenose Ale, ordered by his master, had added a pigeon pie and a couple of cold roast ducks. Next morning when asked why he had added things which nobody wanted, and which were untouched, the Scout said, "There would have been nothing for me, Sir; lobsters and oysters is no good next day!"

IN THE RIVAL CAMP—W. B. W. AND THIRD TRINITY FRIENDS (1865).

1. R. A. Kinglake. 2. W. B. W. 3. Sir J. Hawkins. 4. Jenny the Terrier. 5. J. G. Chambers 6. (?) C. C. Orme. 7. Sir Charles Witterong.

years of sport—it "bucks up" the whole nation, and puts fresh backbone into its work.

One of Mr. Woodgate's many interesting illustrations is of the 1863 Oxford Eight, with Woodgate, No. 4, five hundred yards after the start. If it is correct more thousands go to see the race now than did hundreds in 1863—yet we remember fairly big crowds only four or five years later.

Oxford men of the last half century and the rowing confraternity all over the world are familiar with the name of W. B. Woodgate the winner of all the most coveted honours open to the oarsman; and we feel sure all who are able to do so will read with great interest this modest, straightforward account, not so much of his own career as of the sports-

The American Freshman

There is an amusing account of a co-freshman with the Author, an American, Taylor by name; he was a real good sport, but was always being fined for smoking in the streets. One day as a Proctor came up to him, he explained audibly to a friend—"Here comes a beast of a Proctor!" When paying his fine next morning, the Proctor, the Rev. Bartholomew Price, reproved him for his discourteous remark—so audible. Taylor was equal to the occasion, "Well, Sir! I'm sorry if it hurt your feelings, but I can assure you it's a very common expression; I've often heard it before."

Why do people refer to dead friends and acquaintances as "poor" So-and-so? Perhaps Mr. John C. Francis will tell us in his perennial well of good things—

MACMILLAN & CO.'s NEW BOOKS

Tono-Bungay

BY H. G. WELLS

CROWN 8vo, 6s.

Daily Telegraph.—"We think that we shall be within the limit of reasonable prophecy if we suggest that 'Tono-Bungay' will prove to be Mr. H. G. Wells' 'David Copperfield.' One of the most significant novels of modern times, one of the sincerest and most unflinching analyses of the dangers and perils of our contemporary life that any writer has had the courage to submit to his own generation. Mr. Wells has certainly done nothing to approach this book, both for courage and for conviction."

One Immortality. A Novel. By H. FIELDING HALL, Author of "The Soul of a People," &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

Jimbo. A Fantasy. By ALGERNON BLACKWOOD. With Decorated Half-Titles to Chapters. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

This is a striking study of the mind of an imaginative child during consciousness, and also through a period of physical unconsciousness. It is remarkable for its beautiful descriptive passages, its weird suggestions, and its fine implied teaching of sympathy and courage and truth.

"Notes and Queries." Mr. Woodgate refers to "poor Livingstone," "poor Simcox," &c.

Tactless

Some of Mr. Woodgate's stories are likely to give pain to the persons referred to, or their relatives. He was asked to do an article on "Prefects and Fags" for the Pall Mall Gazette by Mr. Fredk. Greenwood, and wrote to the Heads of leading schools for information. "All complied," he says, "except Percival, the Head of Clifton, and now Bishop of Hereford (the tactless subsequent President of Trinity College, Oxford, who in his brief reign did so much to lower the standard of that otherwise always excellent and high-toned college). Percival flatly refused any information." The reference to tact is unfortunate, because it is perfectly certain if the information about Clifton had been given—and Dr. Percival had a perfect right to refuse it—the grave charge against him with respect to Trinity College would not have been made.

Although judicious pruning would undoubtedly have improved its value, there can be no doubt about the interest which sportsmen and the "general reader" will find in these lively and outspoken "Reminiscences." He is very good company, evidently, provided his company all "pull together" and provided he is "stroked" the right way—i.e., W. B. W.'s way.

Cassell's Popular Music

How such music can be sold for twopence is beyond us; it is indeed the most remarkable value ever offered in sheet music. The paper is excellent, printing good, and the songs—well, what could be better than such old and well-tried favourites as Sally in our Alley, The Bonnie Banks of Loch Lomon', Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep, The Vicar of Bray, The Anchor's Weighed, Simon the Cellarer, and Ye Banks and Braes? These are a few of the latest, but there are over 200 other songs and pianoforte pieces. Booksellers having a side line in music should make a note of Cassell's "Popular."

The Philotesies' Annual Dinner

THE annual dinner of the employees of Messrs. Philip & Tacey, Ltd. of the Central Educational Depôt, Norwich Street and Singer Street, London, E.C., took place at the London Tavern, Fenchurch Street on Friday evening, the 12th inst., when about 150 members of the staff from both establishments sat down to an extensive and decidedly good menu. The presence of the Directors of the Company added considerably to the enjoyment of those present. The chair was occupied by Mr. J. C. Tacey (Secretary of the Company), who, at the conclusion of the dinner, commented upon the pleasure it afforded him to occupy that position, and stated he noted with great satisfaction, that owing to the continual increase and growth of the business it had been necessary to engage a much larger hall on this occasion than that used in previous years. Mr. E. Chivers as Vice-chairman ably responded. The remarks of Messrs. J. Tothill and E. E. Tacey (Managing Directors) were highly appreciated by all present, as were those of Mr. W. C. Tacey (Director), and testified to the pleasant and friendly feelings existing between employers and employees. The remainder of the evening was devoted to a long and varied musical programme, contributed to entirely by members of the firm. This comprised talent of no mean order, and reflected great credit on all participating in it. The catering arrangements were admirably carried out, and altogether the gathering was a huge success.

The Readers' Dinner

THE Readers' Pensions Committee (St. Bride Institute, Bride Lane, E.C.) have arranged for the Nineteenth Readers' Dinner (in aid of Readers' Pension No. 5) to be held on Saturday, March 20th, 1909, in the Crown Room, Holborn Restaurant, the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, Sir George Wyatt Truscott, in the chair.

Messrs. Washbourne's Annual Smoking Concert

THE Third Annual Smoking Concert arranged by the employees of Messrs. R. & T. Washbourne, Ltd., the well-known Catholic publishers and church furnishers, 1, 2 and 4, Paternoster Row, took place on Saturday the 6th inst. at the Champion Hotel, Aldersgate Street, E.C., and the proceedings passed off in a highly satisfactory manner. Every available table in the spacious St. George's Hall was occupied—a significant fact which very forcibly reminded one of the growing popularity of this annual event.

Mr. T. Washbourne occupied the chair and carried out the necessary duties in his usual capable and characteristic manner. The appreciative audience was regaled with an excellent and discursive programme, and listened to an exceptionally fine array of talented singers.

Mr. Alfred McGregor's fine tenor voice was heard to great advantage in "Bring Back the Sunshine" and Pinsuti's "Last Watch." Judging from the applause with which he was received it would seem that many in the audience had not forgotten his last year's splendid rendering of "Glorious Devon."

Mr. Arthur Barrington, who possesses a very powerful bass voice, thrilled all hearers with "The Jolly Old Cavalier" and "Lighterman Tom"; while Mr. W. Barber and Mr. Herbert Field were also in good voice. It might also be mentioned that Mr. William Doe, who sang "Had I no Eyes to See Thee," was heartily applauded. Mr. Hubert Rooney, whose intended contributions to the programme were eagerly looked forward to, was, owing to a cold, unable to sing the songs which were against his name. He, however, sang "In Friendship's Name" excellently under the circumstances.

The humorous part of the programme was perhaps the most entertaining of all, and it is difficult to make any individual distinctions in recording the efforts of the various artistes.

Mr. Clifton Barritt and Mr. Archie Naish each gave of their best at the piano, and Mr. Will Bentley gave a short geographical lecture, which, if not quite adaptable to the L.C.C. method of teaching, was enough to make a cat laugh.

Mr. Frank Hook, who mirthfully and strenuously sang "Dinky Doo," imparted to the audience many secrets appertaining to a policeman's hard lot, and his rules, dealing, of course, with motor cars, mad dogs, &c., were very edifying indeed.

Mr. Norman King was very good in "The Actress," and Mr. A. J. Wightman, one of the staff, inveigled the audience into a tongue-twisting competition with the chorus of "She Sells Sea Shells."

A very pleasant evening was concluded by a vote of thanks, with musical honours, for the popular chairman, who briefly responded in a few happily chosen words. On the whole, the employees of Messrs. R. & T. Washbourne are to be congratulated upon the success of their efforts in arranging such an excellent night's amusement for the benefit of their friends. X.

National Book Trade Provident Society

A MEETING of the Committee of Management was held in the registered office of the Society on the evening of Friday, February 12th, 1909, Mr. Young J. Pentland presiding.

The secretary intimated that he had received twelve applications for Life Membership and fifty-five for Ordinary Membership. It was agreed to admit the applicants on completion of the necessary forms. The accounts and balance-sheet to December 31st last were submitted, and showed, subject to audit, a balance in favour of the Society of £1,139 17s.

It was decided to hold the Annual General Meeting of the Society in Birmingham, and the question of arrangements was remitted to a sub-committee.

A donation of £20 was intimated from Mr. Henry Frowde.

The treasurer was instructed to make a further investment of £150.

Warning

A GENTLEMANLY-LOOKING man, about 25 years of age, height about 5 feet 10 inches, dark brown hair, clean-shaved, wearing brown waterproof coat (collar somewhat grease-stained), grey trousers, carrying a fairly-wide brownish muffler in hand, and walking stick. He asks for first editions of Dickens, &c., asks for and reads catalogue, buys a book for 3s., and assistant has to go and get change. Within three minutes of his departure a valuable book is missing from where he was looking over the stock. If any bookseller should be offered a copy of Beckford's "Thoughts on Hunting," square 8vo., calf gilt, 1781, he is requested to detain it, and communicate with Mr. Frank Karslake by telephone, 3273 P.O. Hampstead.

Constitutions of Modern States

DR. WALTER FAIRLEIGH DODD'S "Modern Constitutions," which Mr. Unwin will publish on February 22nd, will be a useful book for students of politics. Heretofore, no comprehensive collection of Constitutions has been available in the English language. This volume contains the texts, in English translations where English is not the original language, of the Constitutions or fundamental laws of the Argentine nation, Australia, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Russia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, and the United States. Each Constitution is preceded by a brief historical introduction, is accompanied by notes, and is followed by a select list of the most important books dealing with the government of the country under consideration.

Messrs. Chatto's Jane Austen

NOTHING well could be better in their way than the 10-volume edition, at 3s. 6d., of the works of Jane Austen, now publishing by Messrs. Chatto & Windus. The get-up is that of a good copyright 6s. novel, good cloth, with attractive design of medallion in colour and gilt lettering. The paper and type are excellent; there are useful notes by Mr. R. Brimley Johnson, who is an expert in all that relates to Jane Austen's writings; and then there are ten capital illustrations in colour after A. Wallis Mills in each volume. Here we have ten novels with 100 illustrations in colour at very little more than the price of one novel of the old three-decker class at £1 11s. 6d. The illustrations are clever in themselves, and cleverly fitted to the time of the stories.

Prices Realised at Auction

THE following prices were realised for books at Messrs. Puttick & Simpson's rooms on Thursday and Friday last:—Gould's "British Birds," £42; Bunyan's "Holy Citie" (1669), £10; Burton's "Arabian Nights," £21; Grimm's German Stories, £15; Dickens' "Pickwick Papers," £10; Wordsworth's "Descriptive Sketches," £18; Withers' "Emblems" (1634), £11 15s.; Hakluyt's "Voyages" (12 vols.), £5 7s. 6d. Thackeray's "Rose and the Ring," £5 Drayton's Poems (1605), £12; Keats "Endymion," £20; Solvyn's "Manners of the Hindoos," £12 15s.; Holbein's Portraits (1792), £12 10s.

Obituary

THE LATE MR. T. M. DUNCAN OF MESSRS. J. C. JUTA & CO.

IT is with much regret that we have to announce the death of Mr. T. M. Duncan, partner in the firm of Messrs. J. C. Juta & Co., South Africa, which took place at his residence, Sea Point, near Cape Town, on the 5th inst. The deceased gentleman had been in the firm for some forty years, and it is with deep feelings of regret that we have to record his death. Mr. Duncan was recently in England, and only returned to Cape Town in November, after a stay of some five months, and apparently in good health. He was about sixty-five years of age, and his sudden decease will come as a great shock to his numerous friends in the book trade.

Letters to the Editor

COPYRIGHT AND AUTHOR WRONGED

DEAR SIR,—I was interested in your article in the P.C. of January 23rd dealing with the business procedure of a gentleman you lightly allude to as "Thomas B. Mosher, American Book Pirate." That he is not singular in his methods I can testify.

There is a general impression, which I confess I shared, that recent legislation has improved the position of the British author in his business relations with the United States. This is true to the extent that by taking thought and trouble, in some cases involving considerable expenditure, copyright may be secured. Personal experience testifies that in the ordinary way matters are very much as they were. There has been running for eight months in the Cornhill Magazine some chapters of reminiscences that have chanced to catch on with the reading public. I hear from the editor that for the second time since the days of Thackeray's editorship it has been necessary to reprint one of the numbers. This is mentioned by way of showing that there is a certain commercial value in the articles. I lately received from the United States a bundle of newspaper cuttings containing choice bits from the Cornhill property which seemed to be going the round of the American press. To my surprise I found they were quoted from a magazine published in Boston, U.S.A., entitled "The Living Age." On inquiry I discovered that from the publication in the Cornhill of the first chapter of "Sixty Years in the Wilderness," the work has been monthly "conveyed," as wise American publishers call it, to the columns of the Boston magazine, where it is presented as a special contribution.

I wrote to the editor suggesting observance of the ordinary practice of sending a cheque to the starving author. The lengthy, effusively courteous reply is in the sublimity of its conception almost payment in full. It turns out that it is the author, not the editor, who is under obligation in the matter. "In no instance that we can recall," the editor writes, "has any English author complained of our reprinting his articles from an English periodical. More than once we have had request for such reprinting, or expressions of pleasure because of it. We have not felt that we injured any writer by increasing the circulation of his contributions and extending his reputation among American readers. Where contributions have later been published in a volume, we have had reason to know that demand for the book was stimulated rather than lessened by the prior serial publication in the "Living Age." We hope that your book may be no exception, and when it appears it will give us pleasure to direct the attention of our readers to it."

This last touch is really one of genius. It suggests the impulse of the magnanimous pickpocket who has appropriated the handkerchief of a passer-by and who, by way of striking a mutually satisfactory balance, goes about his social circle extolling the quality of the material and the good taste displayed in choice of colour. I sit corrected. I was under the impression that "The Living Age," true to its name, was preying upon my means of living. Whereas it was really painstakingly, unselfishly, adding to them.—Yours faithfully,

HENRY W. LUCY.

Reform Club.
February 18th, 1909.

[It is amusing how these pirates justify their piracy, and how they make a living wage. Some of them have the audacity to alter an author's titles, incidents and plot, if they think it will pay better—things which a publisher has not an atom of right to do, even if he has bought the copyright.—ED. P.C.]

"YOURS VERY TRULY"

DEAR SIR,—We beg to inform you that on the 15th inst. will be published by us the second revised and enlarged edition of Prof. Chr. Huelsen's book, "The Roman Forum: its History and its Monuments." Translated by Mr. J. B. Carter, Director of the American School at Rome. (Price: swd., 4s.; cloth, 5s.). By the same mail we beg to send you the paper cover of a copy, from which you may gather the exact title. We should be glad to have it inserted in your list of "Books of the Week" and in the annual volume of the English Catalogue, provided there is no insertion fee to be paid. Prof. Huelsen, on special invitation of American Universities, is now lecturing in the United States on Roman Topography and on the excavations of the Roman Forum. Therefore, most likely, his book will be much in demand. Perhaps a few words to this effect would interest the readers of your "Notices of Books."—Yours very truly,

LOESCHER & CO.

Rome.

[Lots of publishers send us lots of free advertisements, but not many are quite so candid as Messrs. Loescher. It is curious that people who want free announcements in all our publications generally send their "compliments" and "yours very truly"—sometimes "most sincerely." These things always remind us of that little town in France mentioned in Bacon's "Henry VII." called Damn—only the D is not big enough.—ED. P.C.]

TRIAL OF R. E. KING

DEAR SIR,—As the whole of the funds of the International Association of Antiquarian Booksellers, both of receipts and expenditure, pass through my hands, I should like to point out once more the license which counsel possess of drawing red herrings across the path of justice. There was absolutely no case whatever for the defence of King; but his counsel, of course, had to try to do or to say something. It will be refreshing to the 237 members of the Association to learn that the questions of King's counsel to myself would convey by implication the idea that the Association had no substantial existence, and that, at any rate, it was a very singular thing that it should change its title in the second year of its existence. He next assumed that I received payment for my services in the form of commission upon the sums collected for members, and it was not until I referred him to the treasurer and to the official auditors, and three times repeated the fact that if I were paid I could not possibly be the honorary secretary, that he resumed his seat.

It is a sidelight upon the methods of such men as King that of all the numerous cases placed in my hands by members in connection with King I was able to recover only one payment, and that was because I held a post-dated cheque drawn by King upon a bank at which he had no account, and he knew that unless he could regain possession of the cheque he would be liable to be criminally prosecuted.—Yours faithfully,

FRANK KARSLAKE.

A WARNING

DEAR SIR,—I have noticed your warning re T. Turner, Ardwick, Manchester. The enclosed three cards from this man will show you his method. He has tried to tempt me to forward a cheque for £10 by offering 100 Baxter prints on receipt of cheque. I only hope the "other party" (?) he refers to has not been foolish enough to take the bait.—Yours faithfully,

SPECIMEN OF T. TURNER'S HANDWRITING

Notices of Books

From Messrs. J. Baker & Son (Clifton and London). "Twilight Music," by Marcus S. C. Rickards. In this fresh volume of verse are again to be found the best attributes of poetry. Though Mr. Rickards will not carry off the honours of the great poet, his compositions have enough merit to establish his reputation as a writer who is keenly observant of the varied aspects of the natural world, and is able to depict them in true poetic diction.

From The Cambridge University Press.—"The Cambridge History of English Literature," edited by A. W. Ward, Litt.D., F.B.A., and A. R. Waller, M.A. The third volume of this fine and well-proportioned work deals with the period embraced by the Renascence and the Reformation. There are twenty chapters in all, and they include all aspects of English literature which are presented by this rich and unusual period. Dr. Sidney Lee's article on the Elizabethan Sonnet contains an immense amount of information in a small space; the style, nevertheless, is neither heavy nor clogged, but admirably clear. Elizabethan Criticism is in the hands of Professor George Saintsbury, who also writes on Prosody from Chaucer to Spenser; Professor Hume Brown has contributed a learned essay on the Reformation and Renascence in Scotland, and to Rev. R. H. Benson, M.A., is devoted the subject of the Dissolution of the Religious Houses. The Editors have provided an almost ideal history for both the general reader and the student by the combination of a text abstaining as much as possible from technicalities, with bibliographies as full of matter as possible.

From the Same.—"The Wisdom of Solomon" with Introduction by Rev. J. A. F. Gregg. A new volume of "The Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges," edited in the same manner and with the same thoroughness as the other volumes of this admirable series. The text is taken from the revised version.

From Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd.,—"Peggy the Daughter," by Katharine Tynan. This is another of those breezy stories of Irish life, which have made for their author troops of friends. The principal character finds himself on the verge of ruin through gambling, and to retrieve his fortunes carries off the daughter of a rich old Quaker. As the daughter has always gone about veiled, she has the reputation of being a hag, whereas when her captor gets her into his castle with the secret passage, nothing could be more beautiful than Patricia, and she is quite ready to be married on the spot, having secretly loved him behind her veil. Then the old Quaker Father comes and batters in the castle doors, only to find his daughter and her husband have escaped by touching that perennial secret spring in the picture gallery wall. It is all a bit melo-dramatic and mixed up, like an Irish stew, but what is much better than a good Irish stew.

From the Same.—"The Lure of Eve," by Edith Mary Moore. This story will interest married people, &c., who go and sit with other people's husbands and wives on the seats on Hampstead Heath. It is a variation of the warm-blooded, enthusiastic man marrying a selfish, shallow prig of a woman with nothing but beauty as a lure. Even when her husband is just in time to stop her going off with an artist to Paris she thinks nothing of it, goes to bed, and cannot understand why he does not join her. In the last page the authoress gives a hint that the beautiful woman is becoming also a beautiful wife, but it is too late, the reader won't believe it. An interesting, well-writen story.

From Mr. John Long, London.—"The Buckjumper," by Nat Gould. Many authors who had written as much as Mr. Nat Gould, would have written themselves out, but not so Mr. Gould. In "The Buckjumper" he vividly portrays the life of an Australian miner in the early seventies, when good fighting and riding were the best qualifications for success. Mr. Nat Gould shows in his story how much better it was for a mining community if its best fighter and rider, was a man of humanity, not resembling some of the novelist's other characters, who belonged rather to the order of the brute creation than to that of human beings. A notable character is The Buckjumper, a coal-black stallion of extraordinary viciousness, and with so retentive a memory for revenge, as instanced in its thirtieth year, that the elephant seems to be outclassed in this, its well-known attribute.

From Mr. Andrew Melrose.—"The Faith of His Fathers," by A. E. Jacomb. This, we presume, is Miss Jacomb's first novel; if so, she is a writer to be reckoned with; for it is a powerful, unusual and individual piece of work. It gained the prize of £250 offered last year by the publisher for the best work of fiction by any hitherto unpublished writer, and it is satisfactory to note that such sound and unforced work has met with adequate recognition. William Atkinson is a Methodist of the old, uncompromising type. His interpretation of the Scriptures excludes the possibility of any escape from external damnation save by embracing the Faith which he himself holds. His hardness and narrowness bite into the heart of his wife and turn her love to a masked hatred; they force his son to a disastrous marriage leading to gaol; and they alienate his daughter and drive her to the other side of the world. Miss Jacomb has made of this man a dignified figure who still retains the sympathy of the reader, in spite of his twisted and flawed nature. The writing throughout is restrained and strong; the analysis of motive is penetrating and true; and the drawing of character exceptionally clever.

From Messrs. Seeley & Co—"How Came the Light to Britain: a Pageant of Ancient Athens, A.D. 54," by Clericus Anglicanus. A dialogue story in four acts, designed to be "a sacred pageant-play," showing the first contact of Christian teaching with Hellenic culture. The story concerns a British maiden, who is chosen by the Athenians as a victim to be offered to the Gods in a time of earthquake. The sacrifice is interrupted at the critical moment, and the concluding scenes show how certain men of Athens conceived a New Hope for Hellas and for the world. The play shows signs of being the work of a good scholar, and is not without dignity of thought and expression.

From the Same.—"Behind the Veil in Persia and Turkish Arabia," by M. E. Hume-Griffith. The author, Mrs. Hume-Griffith, has given a most vivid account of her eight years' sojourn amongst the Mohammedans of Turkish Arabia and the people of Persia. Unlike most who visit these countries, and who give their impressions of things seen from the outside during a short stay or hurried visit, Mrs. Hume-Griffith has spent so many years amongst these people as one of them that she is able to do justice to her subject, and write authoritatively on almost every point. She describes the life, manners, customs, habits of the people of Mesopotamia in a fascinating manner, and, being the wife of a medical missionary, had unique opportunities for study and observation. The illustrations, and there are many, are excellent, and the whole forms a valuable and most interesting record of an interesting country.

From the Same.—"Among the Wild Tribes of the Afghan Frontier," by T. L. Pennell, M.D., B.Sc., F.R.C.S., being the record of sixteen years' close intercourse with the natives of the Indian Marches. Lord Roberts has written the introduction to this work, and in it he says:—"Although many accounts have been written descriptive of the wild tribes on this border, there was still plenty of room for Dr. Pennell's modestly-related narrative. Previous writers . . . . have dealt with the expeditions that have taken place from time to time against the turbulent occupants of the trans-Indus mountains, and with the military problems and possibilities of the difficult regions which they inhabit. But Dr. Pennell's story is not concerned with the clash of arms. His mission has been to preach, to heal, and to save; and in his long and intimate intercourse with the tribesmen, as recounted in these pages, he throws many new and interesting sidelights on the domestic and social, as well as on the moral and religious, aspects of their lives and characters." Being a medical man as well as a missionary, the author naturally was able to gain the confidence of the natives, and Dr. Pennell has presented a story which is extremely interesting, not only because it is the account of a little known tribe, but because it is true in every detail, and in all but a few instances the facts related happened directly under the author's eyes. The illustrations, including a full-page plate of Dr. Pennell, are admirable. A glossary and map of the N.W. Frontier of India are included.

From Messrs. Henry Stevens, Son & Stiles.—"Thomas Pownall, M.P., F.R.S.," by Charles A. W. Pownall. Thomas Pownall was for some years Governor of Massachusetts Bay; he was a lieutenant of Pitt, and shared that statesman's views. When he returned from the North American Colonies, he advocated, both from his place in Parliament and in his writings, those measures of conciliation which Pitt regarded as the only means of preventing a rupture. The author of this able and absorbingly interesting biography is anxious to deduce from the condition of affairs which existed during the life of his kinsman some parallels and lessons which "may perhaps help to prevent the democracy of to-day from committing similar errors in the present and the future." The political and economic aspect of Mr. Charles Pownall's work is equalled in interest by the strong case which is made out for Pownall's authorship of the "Letters of Junius"; the facts of the case are gone into very carefully, and presented with precision and exactitude. A number of fac-simile letters give the book additional interest, and the portraits of people and pictures of places are of great value.

From Mr. C. J. Thynne.—"A Fruitful Ministry": a Memoir of the Life of the late Rev. Robert Henry Hammond, by his Wife. Mr. Hammond was born in 1831, and after working in Sheffield and Spitalfields became Vicar of St. James', Toxteth Park, Liverpool, where he laboured for twenty-seven years. From 1893 till his death in 1901 he was Vicar of St. Mary's, Sheffield. His life was one continuous service to God and man, and his devotion was rewarded by extraordinary success. Mrs. Hammond's account of it is evidently a labour of love, and very many who felt the benefit of Mr. Hammond's evangelical zeal and self-denying example will be glad to possess this permanent record of a faithful servant of God. It is men like Mr. Hammond who are the true strength of the Church of England.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—"Shakespeare Studied in Three Plays," by the Hon. Albert S. G. Canning. Mr. Canning has had in view the requirements of the general reader rather than those of more scholarly attainments, for his studies of "The Merchant of Venice," "Henry V." and the three parts of "Henry VI." scarcely broach any subjects of literary or psychological interest. He has given an extended synopsis of the plays, interpolating freely lengthy passages from the texts. This method is apt to become tiresome, for we get a great deal of this kind of thing: "Bassanio enthusiastically proceeds," "Antonio generously replies," "Portia replies," "Nerissa promptly retorts," "Portia rejoins," &c., &c. When Mr. Canning permits himself to comment on the plays, he is always interesting and readable.

From the Same.—"Vocations of our Sons," by Mr. John W. Hicks, assists parents to solve the ever-recurrent problem, "What shall we do with our Boys" It endeavours to afford reliable information as to the prospects of success in a number of trades and professions, from accountancy to teaching, as well as in the civil and municipal services. This information, so far as we have been able to test it, appears to be well up to date, and the advice given is judicious. Parents will find the book very useful.

From The Viking Club.—"Orkney and Shetland Miscellany." Vol. 2, Part 1. "Orkney and Shetland Records." Vol. 2, Part 3. A great deal of useful work is being done in an unobtrusive way by the Viking Club, as is testified by the two volumes before us. There is an interesting article on "Some Old-Time Shetlandic Wrecks," a suggestive paper entitled "Townships and Surnames," an illustrated essay on "Rune Stones in the Brodgar Circle, Stenness," &c.

From The Watkins Meter Co. (Hereford).—"The Watkin's Manual of Exposure and Development" (4th edition). A practical manual on exposure by actinometer and development by time, useful for all photographers, and especially amateurs having difficulty in judging correct exposures. It is nicely illustrated and produced, and is full of useful information.

From Mr. Ed. L. Wilson (122, East 25th Street, New York).—"Composition in Portraiture," by Sidney Allan. Although an American book, and written in the American style, it should be of great use to English portrait photographers. The author knows his subject well, and has selected excellent pictures to illustrate his ideas.

New Editions.—Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd. have added Sainte-Beuve's "Causeries du Lundi," translated by E. J. Trenchman, M.A., to their exceedingly attractive "New Universal Library." The essay on George Sand is one of the most interesting—it seems to us no woman has equalled her as a writer and few men. Sainte-Beuve refers to her as "one of the most powerful in talent." A captial index is very gratefully acknowledged.

CANADA

The Land of Opportunity

Thousands of sturdy British emigrants go to the Dominion annually and settle there. To-day there is a large population in Canada interested in British books and periodicals and affording a splendid market for British publishers.

The only feasible way to preserve the interest of these people, in face of the competition of American publishers, is to have Canadian booksellers and newsagents show British books and periodicals on their counters and in their windows constantly and press the sale of them.

The best method of urging Canadian booksellers and newsagents to stock and sell British publications is to make use of the trade organ to which they subscribe regularly.

Information as to the Canadian Market will be gladly supplied by

THE

Publishers' Circular

A Commonwealth Bookseller

William London, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, the First English Bibliographer

TOWARDS the close of the Commonwealth régime in England, or, to be more exact, in 1657, a Newcastle bookseller, named William London, published at his shop the first methodical English bibliography. The title of this extremely rare and interesting book is as follows:—"A Catalogue of The most vendible Books in England, Orderly and Alphabetically Digested, Under the Heads of Divinity, History, Physick and Chyrurgery, Law, Arithmetic, ... with Hebrew, Greek and Latine for Schools and Scholars. The like Work never yet performed by any . . . London, Printed in the year 1657." On the same page is a hint that he was what we should now call a stationer, as well as a writer who published and sold books.—"Also, All sorts of Globes, Mapps of the World or in parts, either Kingdoms, Provinces or particular Countries; French and Duch Pictures and Landskips; Paper of all sorts from 5s. to 5 lb. a Reame: The best perfumed India, and English Wax, &c."

The Epistle Dedicatory, which is addressed to "the Gentry, Ministers of the Gospel, and others of a Peculiar Choice . . . in the Northern Counties," contains an earnest and eloquent appeal to men of rank to read books, that they may lead the country wisely. "Those," he says, bluntly enough, "that are not equally fitted for the use of their Country, as well as themselves, are only to be accounted stakes in ditches that rot rather than grow . . . Therefore have I for the advantages of these Northern parts, where I am so much Indebted, endeavoured not only to have such choice both of Divinity, History, Law, Physick, Mathematicks, &c., as never yet were in the Country, but also intend, that not any in England, of esteem, or of easie purchase, shall escape me; and that's not all, but have taken the paines to let you know all, whereby you may fathom them, and by your sober choice, retain the best, whilst the chaffe you may refuse; that your judgments may, like deep Rivers, let weighty things sink, whilst sticks and straws swim down the stream." The Dedication is signed "Wm London," and for a time the author of the book was supposed to be no less a personage than William Juxon, Bishop of London. The bibliographical puzzle, after remaining unsolved for very many years, was at last cleared up by the discovery that London was a Newcastle bookseller, a fact which readily explains the dedication to the Gentry of the Northern Counties.

In the Epistle "to the most candid and ingenious reader," London develops his ideas about books at greater length, and many of his phrases deserve a better fate than that which he describes:—"Many a good Book lies asleep as not known." He has a pretty notion of the proper value of the wares he has to sell:—"if this undertaking [his Catalogue] seems to wrong any man's purse, he that Imagines it, hath the wrong end of the Book upwards; he that gets Books for his money, has in my mind as good a Bargain as our Mariners, who trade with the Indians, and get Gold for Knives, Rattles, Glasses, &c." Nor is he a mere money-making tradesman, for he tells the reader, "I do not alwaies expect to sell what I so greatly value, I am more ambitious to read then to sell them; but the chief end is to Invite men to value the means of knowledge above trifles, which cannot be better improved, nor more prudently expended then in such a purchase."

London anticipates the objection that the setting down of titles at full length is liable to make his Catalogue cumbersome by pointing out that short titles are often quite misleading; but his own words on the subject deserve to be quoted. "Most Books, by their short and usuall Titles, are not half discovered to strangers: now this method provides against this cheat, in having partem pro toto; nay, many have been cosen'd by a short title, that when they expected a Book to treat of one thing, it hath the clean contrary. Therefore, we see that the very advantages got by this method, condemns the Objection; for here you have all books brought to you lying open; shops open'd in your studies; and to me it looks like a walking Library." Misleading titles are not unknown even nowadays, as every bookseller knows very well. As for his inclusion of heterodox books, he very properly remarks that people's notions of orthodoxy vary widely; besides, how are the opponents of the truth to be answered effectively, if the books in which their views are advanced are not read by truth's defenders? The concluding sentence of the "Epistle" proves that the worthy bookseller possessed humour as well as strong commonsense. "And though" (is his parting shot at the reader) "the Wise Man Saies, that of writing Books there is no end (which I think is meant of such as are writ to no end), yet I hope this reducement of Many into One, may prove of some good advantage, and to some good end, and that without prejudice to Solomon's Text."

The Introductory "Essay upon the Value and Benefits of Learning and Knowledge" is rather an ambitious piece of work, though the writer describes it as "short." Terms, we know, are relative, but since the Essay covers the signatures C3—I3, or 49 pp. as against some 200 pp. occupied by the Catalogue, it can hardly be termed inconsiderable. It is well worth reading even to-day for the sake of its wide range and enthusiastic advocacy of learning. One quotation taken from the closing sentences must serve to show the author's whole-hearted love of the ponderous and dusty old volumes that by so many people were and are considered mere lumber. "And who will not say, that good Books and good company are the very epitomy of Heaven; a solace when the greatest adversity threatens. For my own part, I wish no other outward Enjoyment or Comfort in the world . . . There's nothing comparable to the purchase of Knowledg, and whenever men begin to taste it, they will say I speak truth with a witness."

"Divinity Books," as might be expected from the date of the Catalogue, bulk largely therein, besides taking the place of honour in the list. They occupy about 40 pages, whereas the rest of current English literature is crowded into about 50 pages. This may, perhaps, be partially accounted for by the tendency in so many books of reference to make up for undue diffuseness at the start by undue contraction towards the finish; but, of course, in those days theological discussion formed a regular and considerable portion of the reading of every serious-minded man. The plan of the Catalogue is very carefully thought out with a view to practical usefulness. All the books enumerated are divided under one or another of the main groups or subjects—Divinity, History, Physick, and the like—and a separate alphabetical index is provided for each group, with distinguishing marks for all new and recent works. Authors' names are indexed, and there are no cross references. A good many of them are still familiar to most people, whether their works are much read or not. Bishop Andrewes, St. Augustine, Mr. Baxter, Dr. Jeremy Taylor and Bishop Usher are among the Divinity writers who are still commonly remembered; while the discovery in the same list of "Smectymnus Redivivus, being an Answer to a Book entitled an humble Remonstrance: In which the Original of Liturgy and Episcopacy is discussed; with Queries concerning both . . ." recalls the wordy fights for supremacy in argument that preceded and accompanied the great upheaval of the Civil War. So, too, in the other sections of the Catalogue; along with much that has been forgotten we find names that mankind will not willingly let die. Bacon, "Dr. Brown" (i.e.—Sir Thomas Browne), Camden, Fox's "Acts and Monuments," Hobbs' "Leviathan," Holland's "Plutarch," Josephus' "History of the Jews" are a few of the familiar-sounding names and titles taken from the Historical section of the Catalogue: a systematic search would probably reveal quite a respectable library of books which any modern bibliophile would be glad to possess. In short, London's Catalogue is a fascinating little book to-day, while its value to his contemporaries must have been great, especially since, as he says on the title page, no one had ever provided an equally complete and "orderly digested" Catalogue of English Books. Nowadays we do our cataloguing with more accuracy and regularity, but this is a comparatively new refinement, and all bibliographers and book lovers of every kind owe William London thanks for his pioneer work. It is unreasonable to expect that the first serious English bibliographer should have "the last word" in bibliography, but his Catalogue was, nevertheless a notable achievement.

Notes and Announcements

MR. JOHN LONG will shortly publish Miss Gertrude Warden's new novel, "The World, the Flesh and the Casino." Miss Warden portrays the life of a young man "who has been kept from a knowledge of realities and is led astray by a friend. The ending is very unconventional."

"The Wander Years, being Some Account of Journeys into Life, Letters and Art" is the title given by Mr. J. H. Yoxall, M.P., to a volume which he is publishing with Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co., on the 4th of March.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. will publish on March 11th a third and very greatly enlarged edition of Mr. J. Ellis Barker's book, "Modern Germany: Her Political and Economic Problems, Her Policy, Her Ambitions and the Causes of Her Success." The book has been revised and brought up to February, 1909, and several chapters have been added, which deal fully with Germany's economic policy, finances and labour conditions, which should be of interest to Free Traders and Tariff Reformers.

The Open Review is the title of a new monthly at 6d. net, which is to make its appearance this spring.

Messrs. Hunter & Longhurst will shortly publish a work by Melchior Macbride, entitled "Glastonbury and the Grail." It is a drama in five acts, blank verse.

"Psychology and Crime" is the title of a new book by Professor Hugo Münsterberg of Harvard, which Mr. Unwin will publish on March 1st. Its object is to draw attention to a strangely neglected field—the field in which psychology and law come into contact. The book deals mainly with the mind of the man in the witness-box, and is full of illuminating ideas, presented in a popular form. Among the subjects discussed are:—Illusion, the Memory of the Witness, the Detection of Crime, Traces of Emotions, Untrue Confessions, Suggestions in Court, Hypnotism and Crime; and the Prevention of Crime.

Already a second edition has been called for of Mr. W. Teignmouth Shore's love story, "A Soul's Awakening," which was first issued some three weeks ago. The second-hand bookseller's love story.

"The Essay on Shelley," by the late Mr. Francis Thompson, which attracted wide attention on its recent appearance in The Dublin Review, is about to be reproduced in book form by Messrs. Burns & Oates. Some further notes on Shelley, also by Francis Thompson, supplement the longer composition.

The Hon. and Rev. James Adderley is shortly issuing a new book, entitled: "A Piece of New Cloth." It is a tale of Twentieth Century Church life, touching upon Christian Socialism and the difficulties experienced by young clergy faced by old-fashioned Church methods on the one hand, and the progress of modern scientific thought on the other. It is to be published by Messrs. Hunter & Longhurst.

The Oxford University Press announce as in preparation popular editions of Marlowe and Ben Jonson, uniform with "The Shakespeare Apocrypha," which Mr. C. F. Tucker Brooke recently edited. The Marlowe is being edited by Mr. Tucker Brooke and Professor Walter Raleigh, and the Jonson, which will, of course, fill more than one volume, by Mr. Percy Simpson. As already known, a library edition of Ben Jonson's works, edited by Professor C. H. Hertford and Mr. Percy Simpson, has been in preparation at Oxford for some time.

Messrs. M. H. Gill & Son, Ltd., will publish immediately Poems, by "Eva" of The Nation, first published in San Francisco over thirty years ago.

A novel by Miss Effie Chamberlayne, entitled "A Shooting Star," will shortly be published by the Century Press. Miss Chamberlayne is the daughter of Mr. Tankerville Chamberlayne, formerly M.P. for Southampton. The novel is a love story in which there is a spice of politics.

Messrs. Williams & Norgate have made arrangements to issue immediately to subscribers only, an English edition of Dr. Reinhard Brauns' well known work, "Das Mineralreich"—"The Mineral Kingdom"—in 25 parts at 2s. each, appearing at intervals of about a fortnight. Dr. Brauns is well known as Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Bonn and the English translation with additions has been made by L. J. Spencer, F.G.S., of the Mineral Department at the British Museum. The most remarkable feature of the work is the large series of beautifully executed chromolithographs and 275 figures in the text. When completed the work will be published in half leather at £2 16s. net.

Mr. William Tait, Wellington Park Avenue, Belfast, has in preparation for publication this spring, "The Arcane Schools: A Review of their Origin and Antiquity. Member of many Craft and High Grade Systems abroad, Hon. IX° of Rosicrucian Society, &c., &c."

Under the title, "Psyche's Task," Messrs. Macmillan & Co. will publish immediately a discourse by Prof. J. G. Frazer, "concerning the Influence of Superstition on the Growth of Institutions." The subjects dealt with are—Government, Private Property, Marriage, and Respect for Human Life.

The second volume of Dr. Hofstede de Groot's monumental "Catalogue Raisonne of the Most Eminent Dutch Painters," translated by Mr. Edward G. Hawke, is shortly to be published by Messrs. Macmillan. This great work, in ten volumes, the first of which appeared a year ago, will replace the meritorious but obsolete catalogue which John Smith, the famous dealer, compiled seventy years ago.

Messrs. Sisley's new publications include a book on the important subject of the "Over-production of Women," by Mrs. Erskine, a lady who has devoted years to a scientific study of the problem and claims to have discovered an infallible means of determining sex in the unborn child; and "The Innocence of Isobel," a new novel commenced by its author at the early age of fourteen and finished before she was out of her teens.

A series of sketches purporting to give an account of an imaginary literary club appeared in various magazines and journals; written by Mr. Charles Garvice, they are to be published in volume form by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.

That 80 per cent. of people can be hypnotised renders the subject of Hypnotism of universal importance. Dr. Albert Moll is an authority on hypnotism or psycho-therapeutics, and The Walter Scott Publishing Co., Ltd., are just issuing a new and enlarged fifth edition of his book, one of 600 pages, in their "Contemporary Science" Series.

Amongst Messrs. Greening's list of early spring fiction may be noted "The Unloved," by Ethel Hill, whose first novel, "The Woman Friend and Wife," caused some marked attention at the hands of the critics; "Little France," by Cyrus Brady, a romance of England's struggle for her Western possessions; "Underground," by John K. Leys, a tale of adventure in which anarchists play a leading part; "Out of the Shadows," by Captain Henry Curties; and "The Sin of the Duchess," by Houghton Townley.

Messrs. A. & C. Black are publishing a study in Religious Idealism by W. R. Boyce Gibson, under the title of "God With Us."

A book which should be of a good deal of interest, not only to art collectors but to the general public, will be published in a few days by the Fine Art Trade Journal, under the title of "Art Prices Current." The volume will contain a record of the prices of paintings, water-colour drawings and engravings, sold at Christie's during the season 1907–08, together with an index to artists' and engravers' names, and will be published at half-a-guinea.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree has written the Introduction to the fourth issue of "The Green Room Book, or Who's Who on the Stage," which will be published by T. Sealey Clark & Co., Ltd. next week.

The works of the Baroness Orczy, as is well known, enjoy phenomenal sales, and are to be found in every bookshop and bookstall of the English-speaking world. Messrs. Greening now include "Beau Brocade" in their shilling red cloth series, of which "The Scarlet Pimpernel" was the pioneer.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton announce "The First Stone," a story of Scottish domestic life, by Mrs. Mary Stuart Boyd.

Mr. Elliot Stock announces a cheap edition (2s. 6d. net) of Miss Irene Palmer's book on the nature and ministration of angels, entitled, "Our Friends the Angels." Sir Robert Anderson, who contributes the preface, says:—"It is a most suggestive book, and I commend it to Bible students."

Messrs. Constable will issue in a few days a small volume comprising a series of notes on vital topics made from time to time by Mr. Francis Francis, a close student of present-day politics. These notes have been arranged under the general title of "National Independence, or a Commonsense Policy," and deals with many subjects. among which may be mentioned Tariff Reform, Education and Universal Service. The whole is a plea for commonsense citizenship.

A subject of more than ordinary interest is discussed in a new book coming from Messrs. Constable in a few days. The subject is "Railroad Reorganisation." The author, Stuart Daggett, Ph.D., has made the basis of his work an examination of the financial history of the six most important American railroads which failed between 1893 and 1896.

On March 2nd Mr. John Lane will publish "In Re Shakespeare Problem, Beeching v. Greenwood: the Defendant's Reply," by G. G. Greenwood, M.P. Glasgow Book Trade Notes

BY "MUNGO"

DURING the past fortnight Miss Horniman's Company from the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, under the direction of Mr. B. Iden Payne, has been treating Glasgow playgoers to "David Ballard," "The Return of the Prodigal," "Widowers' Houses" and other modern plays. These plays do not appeal to the average frequenter of the theatre, but only to a comparative few, and perhaps this is due to the fact that they make a demand on the intellect and the ordinary playgoer will probably be disappointed and bored by them, in that he is called upon to think.

It is good to see that dramatic work of the standard offered by Miss Horniman can be run without pecuniary loss, because it is to be feared that since playgoing became respectable the literary standard of the drama has deteriorated. Amusement and not enlightenment is asked, and there is an affinity between a good number of the pieces brought forward to gratify this demand, and a certain questionable class of novel, the success of which shows in what direction the taste of a large section of the public is tending.

Literary and dramatic merit are not the qualities that go to make a piece a financial success, and when Shakespeare is staged managers recognise this, and the dramatist is crowded out by spectacular display; but in the plays above mentioned we have high class work interpreted through the medium of a high class company, who do not look on cash results as the first consideration.

As a rule, the appearance of any play in a local theatre makes only a slight difference in the demand for the author's work; this rule applies, of course, only to authors whose works are constantly selling.

In Glasgow, George Bernard Shaw holds first place amongst modern playwrights; he has a large following, and his books are in steady demand, and even his two volumes of resurrected essays had quite a large sale. Ibsen is the only dramatist who comes near him as far as popularity counts. His admirers are looking forward to his forthcoming volume "On Getting Married"; while both those who admire him and those who do not await with interest G. K. Chesterton's study of the man and his work. This will surely be a case of Greek meeting Greek.

Of the other authors whose work is being staged by Miss Horniman, John Galsworthy (author of "The Silver Box") is best known from his successful novels "The Country House" and "A Man of Property," both of which books had a large sale here. St. John Hankin (author of "The Return of the Prodigal") is probably best known in Glasgow for his collection of clever Punch verses, which appeared some years ago, entitled "Lost Masterpieces," in which he sang:—

"And musing oft on how and why,
And lost in philosophic lore,
The thought that two and two make four Consoles me in my agony."

The New Magazine

Good Trade Terms.
An Interview with Mr. Arthur Spurgeon

BY A P.C. "SPECIAL."

THAT the house of Cassell is putting on to the market another monthly magazine, which has been given the apt title of The New Magazine, is, of course, an event of considerable interest to the trade. Accordingly, I called upon Mr. Arthur Spurgeon, the General Manager of the house of Cassell, and asked him to tell me something about his new venture.

"The New Magazine," he said, "acts up to its title, for it is quite unlike any other magazine in this country. The public is always asking for something new in magazines, and this one looks fresh and is fresh from cover to cover."

At this point Mr. Spurgeon gave me an advance copy of the first number. The cover is of a delicate Wedgwood blue, with a charming photograph printed in a rich sepia in the centre. On turning over the pages I was able to get an idea of the contents. In the front I noticed many pages, printed on the finest art paper and in colours, containing portraits of the most beautiful of Britain's daughters, on the stage and off, with scenes from the latest theatrical successes, also in colour. Following this section came a hundred pages of fiction illustrated by the best artists of the day, among whom I noticed Fred Pegram, Cyrus Cuneo, H. M. Brock, &c. And finally, at the end of the number, was a most tastefully produced section under the heading of "Woman's Kingdom," covering the whole gamut of woman's interests. In short, The New Magazine, both outside and inside, is about as attractive as any modern magazine can be made.

"This must be a very costly production, Mr. Spurgeon," I suggested.

"It is; but at the same time I am giving the trade good terms, because I am depending on a big circulation to make this thing pay, and I know that the trade, with the consideration they have always shown to Cassell's, will again come to the support of the house. In fact, the advance orders already prove this, for they have exceeded my most hopeful expectations, and we have just had to increase the printing order to cope with them. But to return to the question of terms. We are asking 3s. 6d. per dozen, or 3½d. per copy, and they are on full sale or return, so that the smallest retailer can get a full penny profit on every copy."

"I take it you are going to advertise The New Magazine extensively?" I inquired.

"Certainly we are. You will see sixteen-sheet posters, being an enlargement of the cover in the same colours, all over the United Kingdom in a few days. Also we are expending a great deal in newspaper advertising and in a novel method of advertising, which, for the present, I must not reveal."

Before I left Mr. Spurgeon I learned that the Art Supplement in colour was to be a regular feature, and that good fiction, whether written by authors of established reputation or clever young writers making their way, would be the keynote of the magazine, while the best black and white artists only would have control of the illustrations. There is nothing cheap about The New Magazine except the price, and I believe that there can be no question whatever about Messrs. Cassell having in this production a success surpassing even that they have achieved with The Story-Teller; and I may add incidentally that it is the Editor of The Story-Teller who will also control the destinies of The New Magazine.

The first number is due on March 20th, and it is quite certain that it will get thorough support from every branch of the trade.

The Pageant at Bath

"THEY do say" all and sundry are offering themselves to fill the various leading characters in the coming Pageant at Bath. A very bucolic personage recently entered the office of the manager of one of the many departments being overlooked there just now. His introduction was unique, and his overtures, to say the least, were curious.

"I saw summut, sir," he said, "in ther paper about this here Bladud and pigs. Well, sir, I've bin all me life used to pigs—out in the country, sir, and here in Bath. For farteen years, sir, I've bin in Bath, sir, down at—(here a well-known firm was mentioned)—tending to their pigs—see, sir? What I was thinking of, sir, when I saw that in the paper, sir, were perhaps I 'ud do for Bladud, so that I could look arter the pigs."

The poor man was told there would be difficulties in the way that would prevent the position of Prince Bladud being allotted to him. He went away a disappointed man and with a little difficulty in comprehending why his valuable knowledge in the matter of tending pigs was not better appreciated.

Messrs. Cornish Bros., Ltd., of Birmingham, announce an important work on "The Botany of Worcestershire," an account of the flowering plants, ferns, mosses, hepatics, lichens, fungi, and freshwater algæ which grow, or have grown, spontaneously in the County of Worcester, with an Introduction and a map, by John Amphlett, M.A., S.C.L. (of Clent), and Carleton Rea, B.C.L., M.A.

A Veteran Bookseller

The Late Mr. Harvey Pearse, of Rochdale

THE bookselling trade is all the poorer to-day and Lancashire has lost one of its worthies by the death of Harvey Pearse, of Rochdale, which took place on Saturday, February 20th, 1909. He had been unable to take his usual interest in business for several weeks; the end was not altogether unexpected, and it came painlessly and peaceful at the last.

Born in Plymouth on December 31st, 1831, he had reached the ripe age of his seventy-eighth year. He was never married, lived always in private apartments, and followed a very regular, simple and unostentatious life.

In 1843 he was apprenticed to Edward Nettleton, one of the most respected booksellers in the West. The business was afterwards Nettleton & Simms (brother of the late S. W. Simms, of Bath). At the termination of his apprenticeship he entered the employ of J. S. Doidge, in Whimple Street. After a short stay there he joined the staff of Roger Lidstone, in George Street, the premier bookshop in the three towns. At the end of eighteen months his aspirations led him to try his fortune in Manchester. A journey which, considering the railway had not reached the far West, required pluck, hardihood and courage. He landed in the Cotton City in 1853, without a friend or anyone he knew to go to; but within three days he was engaged by Simms & Dinham, in St. Ann's Square, the leading business in Lancashire. The partners were about dissolving in favour of Mr. Simms, who offered the young aspirant the position of first assistant. His good fortune may be attributed as much to the traditional clannishness of Devonians (for they all hailed from the West) if not more than to his irreproachable recommendations, which were Harvey Pearse's chief asset.

In 1861 Mr. Simms sold the business to Edwin Slater (a name still remembered in Manchester). In course of a few years Mr. Slater became bankrupt, and the premises and stock were taken over by James E. Cornish, who first came to Manchester in 1854, started business in Piccadilly, and electrified the booksellers by being the first to offer twopence in the shilling discount. He removed his stock to St. Ann's Square, and the business since his death is still carried on as J. E. Cornish, Ltd., under improved and modern conditions by a new proprietary.

From 1853 to 1871 Harvey Pearse remained as head assistant, and during that period he came into personal contact with the nobility, gentry, merchants and clergy of South Lancashire, making good friends and winning golden opinions.

How "Harvey" came to go to Rochdale

In 1870, Chambers's representative happening to make his usual call, suggested to Harvey Pearse that there was a good opening in Rochdale for a bookseller, and he at once began making enquiries of the Rochdale manufacturers who regularly gathered at the shop in St. Ann's Square, and received every encouragement "to try his luck." The step was finally taken in 1871 on the decisive opinion of W. W. Sedgwick, Esq., J.P., and from 1871 to the present day Harvey Pearse plodded on for thirty-eight years in his own quiet way, gathering round himself the support, esteem and respect of every one who came in touch with him.

It may not be out of place here to refer to his younger brother Percival, who, after going through the usual trade curriculum under Roger Lidstone, in due course followed his brother, obtained employment with Edwin Slater (who had opened two branch shops, one in Market Street, Manchester, and the other in Warrington). Percival Pearse was placed in the former as manager, and subsequently transferred to Warrington. When Mr. Slater failed, he became proprietor, and worked up one of the most prosperous bookselling businesses in the North of England. He died a few years ago. His principal assistant, Mr. Frank Morris, still carries on the business with the same tact and sound judgment which has hitherto marked its growing success.

Harvey Pearse was a faithful member of the Booksellers' Association from its inception and a strenuous supporter of the "Net" principle. But he has now gone from us, "wearing the white flower of a blameless life" and leaving behind him an honourable and honoured name; but there is, apparently, no one to fill his place or to follow in his footsteps.

Death of Mr. Peter Cowell

For many years Vice-President of the Library Association

WE regret to have to record the death, on February 12th, in his seventy-first year, of Mr. Peter Cowell, Chief Librarian of the Liverpool Public Libraries. He was taken ill in the last days of the past year and removed from his home, on the Cheshire side of the Mersey, to a nursing home in Liverpool, where he was operated upon for an internal complaint. This was successfully accomplished; but pneumonia supervened, from which he appeared to be making recovery, when a sudden relapse terminated fatally.

Mr. Cowell entered the library service of Liverpool whilst still a youth, in 1853, on the opening of the first Lending Library. By self-effort and assiduity he rose to be Superintendent Librarian of the Lending Libraries, then limited to two in the city. On the death of Mr. George Hudson, in 1875, he was promoted to the vacant Chief Librarianship, a post he so ably filled up to his death. During his long service as head of the institution he initiated many improvements and extensions in the facilities for the greater use of the collections placed under his charge. The Picton Reading Room (that British Museum of the North) of England had his special watchfulness for utility, and became a Reference Library of which he and the public of the City had every reason to feel proud.

In later years the extension of the City boundaries led to the establishment in the outer districts of smaller replicas of the great central institution in William Brown Street. These Libraries, the buildings, fittings and equipment, are recognised as models of their class in the kingdom.

Mr. Cowell was one of that small but earnest band of librarians who, in 1876, welcomed their American colleagues to this country, a meeting which eventuated in the formation of the Library Association of the United Kingdom, and of which he was Vice-President for many years. He frequently contributed papers to the meetings of this body, and was recognised as a typical representative of all that was newest and best in library science in the Provinces. He had visited the United States and studied their library methods, and was a frequent visitor to the Continent, ever seeking new ideas for increasing the usefulness of the institutions under his care.

He was always to be approached for information on those points on which he might be deemed an expert, and ever willing to help those who sought the benefit of his wide experience. He was the author of "Liverpool Public Libraries: a History of Fifty Years," published in 1903.

He leaves a widow, two sons and one daughter. Librarianship in this country, and in Lancashire in particular, is distinctly poorer by the loss of such an able administrator to the wants of the reading public.

The Proposed Poor Law Changes

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & Co. publish a summarised explanation of the Report of the Poor Law Commission, so far as it relates to England and Wales, by Mrs. Helen Bosanquet, one of the members who has signed the Majority Report. In the compass of a volume of moderate size the main recommendations of the Report are clearly stated, with the grounds upon which they are based. As a writer on similar questions the author is well known, and with such expert guidance it is hoped that the ordinary reader who is without technical training will be able to obtain a clearer understanding of a most complex problem of great interest.

International Copyright

A BLUE BOOK was issued on February 18th dealing with the revised Convention of Berne "for the protection of literary and artistic works" which was signed at Berlin on November 13th, 1908. The report deals with copyright relating to mechanical instruments as well as to books and works of art. It is pointed out that the somewhat anomalous privilege granted by the final protocol of the Berne Convention, declaring that the manufacture and sale of "musical boxes" should not constitute an infringement of musical copyright, was a concession to the "musical box" industry of Switzerland. This, however, has been extended in some countries to gramophones and pianolas which have been invented or have assumed commercial importance during the last twenty years. In this connection an article was adopted establishing the general principle that the composer of a musical work should have the exclusive right to authorise the reproduction and performance of his work by means of mechanical instruments. Another article safeguards the authors of literary, scientific, or artistic works, by giving them the exclusive right of authorising the reprdouction and public representation of their works by cinematography.—Morning Post.

National Book Trade Provident Society (Oxford Branch)

THE fourth general meeting of the Oxford members of the above Society was held in Taphouse's Rooms on February 16th, 1909, Mr. B. H. Blackwell in the chair. Over forty members and prospective members were present, including:—Messrs. F. S. Thornton, J. Colegrove, F. W. Chaundy, C. Horser, H. G. Gadney, F. J. Hanks, and others. The Local Secretary (Mr. W. Hunt) having read the minutes of the previous meeting next submitted his report, in which he stated that the membership at the end of the year was 35, which—with the 9 new nominations passed by the General Committee the previous week—made a total of 44. On the proposal of Mr. J. Colegrove, supported by Mr. Broom, it was decided to elect the committee en bloc.

The Chairman, in a short address, spoke of the encouraging manner in which the Society was now making headway, referred particularly to the work of the London Committee, and mentioned that the annual meeting in May next would be held in Birmingham. Mr. F. S. Thornton announced that, in connection with the District Committee, first and second prizes would be given to assistants for the two best essays on Boswell's "Life of Johnson" sent in before December 31st next. The meeting then resolved itself into a social gathering, light refreshments and smokes being provided. An excellent programme of songs and glees was greatly appreciated, the following gentlemen contributing to the harmony—Messrs. Bishop, Cook, Hanks, Hickman, Hosier, Hunt, Rowles, Schmidt, Thornton, and Wood. A very enjoyable evening concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

All information respecting the Society may be obtained from the General Secretary, Mr. R. W. Thornton, 17, Philpot Lane, E.C.

A Copyright Comedy

THE Socialist hall-mark was given to the Minority Report of the Royal Commission on the Poor Laws on Friday, February 19th, by the publication of a popular edition by the Fabian Society. The book has an interesting history.

It is stated that the publicity which was given at intervals to the proceedings of the Commission from the Minority point of view caused dissatisfaction in Government circles, and the announcement that the Fabian Society was about to bring out a cheap edition of the Minority Report was the last straw.

Some machinery appears to have been set in motion, and the secretary of the society received a letter from the Treasury threatening legal proceedings for an injunction for infringement of the Crown copyright. This had the effect of taking Mr. Sidney Webb (whose wife signed the Minority Report) to the quarters of the Crown Law Officers, where an amusing interview took place with a leading official.

When Mr. Webb asked this official who he imagined was the author of the Report, he replied, "The secretary to the Royal Commission, of course." He was considerably surprised when Mr. Webb announced his authorship of the document, and that he possessed the copyright and not the Crown, but that if any injunction was to be obtained he was the person to do so.

The threat of legal proceedings remained, however, and so the Prime Minister was approached. He intimated that he knew nothing of the matter, which was purely departmental.

A search was then made at the Treasury, and an old unrepealed Treasury Minute, dated 1867, was discovered, setting forth that as the primary cause for the publication of reports of Royal Commissions was that everyone should become acquainted with the proceedings, any person might so publish them, and no hindrances or difficulties were to be placed in the way of such publication.

Here, then, the action of the Fabian Society was doubly vindicated—first, through the authorship of Mr. Sidney Webb, and second, on the authority of a Treasury Minute.

The threat to prosecute was withdrawn, and thus the society's edition came out, as stated. It is a curious coincidence that the Official Report is being sold at the low price of 5s. 6d., and this, of course, contains both reports.

Widespread interest was expressed yesterday in the two Reports. Almost universal approval is expressed of the demand made by the Commissioners for the abolition of the present workhouse system.—The Express.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT

THE Library of Congress has published a volume entitled "International Copyright Union, Berne Convention, 1886; Paris Convention, 1896; Berlin Convention, 1908." The volume contains the report of the delegate of the United States [Thorvald Solberg] to the International Conference for the Revision of the Berne Copyright Convention, held at Berlin, Germany, October 14th to November 14th, 1908. To this is appended the text of the Convention signed at Berne, September 9th, 1886, the amendments agreed to at Paris, May 4th, 1896, and the Declaration of Interpretation signed at Paris, May 4th, 1896. There is also included a very useful Bibliography of the International Copyright Union, including (1) Berne Convention, 1886; (2) Paris Conference, 1896; (3) Berlin Conference, 1908; (4) Books and pamphlets relating to the International Copyright Union; (5) Le Droit d'Auteur—Contributions relating to the International Copyright Union, 1888–1908. The work is reprinted from 60th Congress, 2d session, House of Representatives Document No. 1208. It is furnished by the Government Printing Office, Library Division, as Copyright Office Bulletin No. 13. (70 p. 4°.)

A COMPLETE EDITION OF TOLSTOI

A publishing house of Moscow promises a complete edition of the works of Tolstoi, numbering about 25 volumes. Hitherto a complete edition has not been possible, owing to the censorship and the difficulties in paying royalties. Under the arrangements of the publishers, royalties to the amount of $250,000 will be paid in annual instalments of $25,000. This edition is said to have the approval of Premier Stolypin.

A fine reprint of the "He" Bible of 1611

IN five handsome, handy, well-produced volumes, averaging each 586 pages, the Cambridge University Press has reprinted the 1611 Authorised Version of the Bible in English. Here for the first time we have an absolutely faithful reproduction of the original text at a price within the reach of most people, for the five vols. bound in cloth only cost 20s. net the set.

The text reprinted is that of the first issue, there having been two issues in the year 1611. Mr. Aldis Wright, by whom the present reprint is edited, has compiled a list of the variations between these two issues, and this list is given in the first volume of the reprint (pp. vii—xxiii). From the fact that the first issue gave in Ruth 3, 15 "And when she helde it, he measured sixe measures of barley, and laide it on her: and HE went into the citie," while, in the second issue, the latter sentence read "and SHE went into the citie," the first issue came to be known as a He Bible and the second as a She Bible. Modern Bibles are variations of the She Bible; the present reprint is of the He Bible. The original edition was a handsome black letter folio, with two columns on a page. In the present reprint each page represents one of these columns, so that a complete page of the original text is seen at the opening of two opposite pages of the reproduction. The black letter of the first edition is represented in the present reprint by Roman type, and the Roman type by italic. This form of issue makes the Bible as easy to read as a six-shilling novel.

THE BOOKING FEE QUESTION

DEAR SIR,—May I respectfully suggest to the publishers the consideration of the abolition of the booking fee (2d.) charged by most publishers on parcels of under 10s. net, or at least that it be charged only on parcels of 5s. net.

Some publishers already charge booking on the latter amount only.

It is most distressing and disheartening to me, and doubtless it is equally so to my fellow-booksellers in the country, to have to pass invoices showing, even after allowing for the settlement discount, not more than 7½ or 8 per cent. gross profit, and sometimes less than that.

There must be deducted from the small difference between the trade and retail charges the amount of contract for carriage, postages, and establishment expenses; in fact, there is not sufficient profit made to deduct the fair share of the last-named.

What is the cure for it all?

The publishers are so numerous, and the books ordered day by day so various, that it is impossible to make up a 10s. net parcel from each publisher every day, and to hold the orders over until they accumulate sufficiently to save booking fees does not tend to give one a reputation for promptness.

Again I say, what is the remedy for it all, for certainly a remedy is needed?

The abolition of the booking fee on parcels of over 5s. net would help us. It would, however, be a still greater encouragement to us if the publishers instead of invoicing "at sale," would supply at a little lower rate, for the publishers in their own interest should see to it t hat their allies—the booksellers—get a living profit.—Yours faithfully,

BETTER TO MAKE IT NET.

SIR,—I sent my collector into the City on Friday last to the publishers for a copy of Drummond's "Tropical Africa" (published at 3s. 6d.; selling price, 2s. 8d.). He paid cash, and was charged 2s. 6d., so I get 2d. profit on 2s. 6d. How can a bookseller pay his way on these terms? Surely, it would have been better to make the book net if no better terms could be given than these. When will publishers look upon these matters from a business-like point of view, for it is only when they do that the bookselling trade will revive, and intelligent men take an interest in it?

Yours faithfully,
GEORGE H. CROYDEN.

High Road, Leytonstone.
February 23rd.

[Mr. Croyden appears to forget that publishers sometimes have to consult the wishes of authors, and, unfortunately, some authors refuse to have their books published at net prices—their view is that the net price prevents sales to people who have been brought up on discount. The net system is spreading, and some of us will live to see the day when the discount system will be as much out of date as hansoms and horse-buses.—ED.]

"BROTHER OFFICERS."

DEAR SIR,—We regret through an oversight on our part a literary note was sent to you for Horace Wyndham's new book "Brother Officers."

In justice to Messrs. Everett would you be good enough to state in your next issue that we are only publishing the "Colonial edition" of this book.—Yours faithfully,

A WARNING TO BOOK-SELLERS

DEAR SIR,—Will you allow me to warn your readers not to execute orders from The International Library, or The Cosmopolitan Library, or Liburia Internazionale (or other similar titles), of 10, Via Nuova, Monte Oliveto, Naples?

Hearing from some of our subscribers that orders for catalogues, generally amounting to about £5. were being received, I at once suspected they emanated from a man named D'Ambra, whom we exposed some years ago. This suspicion is now verified by a letter from our Consul at Naples, dated February 19th, who in reply to my enquiries says that D'Ambra had a small shop two or three years ago at the above address, and still calls there every two or three days for letters. He has been in prison several times, having only recently come out again.—Yours faithfully,

F. E. MURRAY.

Answer to Correspondent

"BOOKSELLER."—"Inland Cruising," by G. Westall, is published by Lander, Westall & Co., 87, Chancery Lane, W.C. Price 7s. 6d. net.

Notices of Books

From The Clarendon Press, Oxford.—"School Algebra," by W. E. Paterson, M.A., B.Sc., Part 2. We can but repeat the expressions of high praise we gave to Part 1 on its publication a short time ago. The present volume includes permutations and combinations, binomial theorem, and exponential and logarithmic series.

From Messrs. T. Sealey Clark & Co.—"The Churches and Usury; or the Morality of five per cent." by H. Shields Rose. Mr. Rose sets himself the difficult task of proving that "all lending for increase is anti-social and oppressive." Fortifying himself by quotations from various authorities from Moses down to Ruskin, he falls foul of the Churches for allowing "usury," and of the political economists for defending it. His own view is the purely socialist one that all capital belongs to the community. Whether we share that view or not, there is no doubt that the enthusiasm and sincerity of thinkers like Mr. Rose demand our careful attention.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—"The Religion of the Threshold," by Donald Sage Mackay, D.D., LL.D., with Introduction by Professor Hugh Black, D.D. Dr. Mackay was born in Glasgow in 1863; at the age of twenty-seven he went to America, and after accepting several "calls," he ultimately became minister of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, New York. He was a man of sense, eloquence, keen intelligence and untiring activity, speedily becoming not only a popular preacher, but also a man whose influence was felt in every sphere of New York society. He died two years ago, and the volume before us is a memorial of his high gifts and no less high endeavour. There are twenty-seven sermons in all; they are free from unnecessary metaphysics, and attempt to solve modern problems in a practical way.

From Messrs. Ouseley, Ltd.—"My Service Days," by Sir Norman Stewart, Bart., C.B. Sir Norman Stewart has had a distinguished career. As a young officer he faced the famous Ghazi charge at Ahmed Khel; he was present at the surprise attack on McNeil's Zareba in the Soudan campaign; and in China he commanded the British contingent during the march of the allied Europeans to the relief of the Legations at Pekin. Concerning all these and other experiences he writes with soldierly clearness and directness; he does not hesitate to express his opinions; and his book, besides being a useful contribution to contemporary history, gives a favourable picture of the British officer at work.

From Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co.—"Did She Do Right?" by A. J. Macdonnell, described as a twentieth century romance, turns on the passion of a wealthy and beautiful widow, Lady Alington, for a fascinating Italian Prince. The latter at first loves Lady Alington's young protégée Lilian, but soon leaves her and returns the elder lady's love. The tie, however, is broken by the treachery of certain ecclesiastical minions of the baser sort, and Lady Alington hides herself. Fortunately the good Cardinal is more honest than his servants, and ultimately brings the lovers together again; so all ends happily. The scene is laid in Rome, and the various delights of a winter sojourn there are well described.

From Mr. William Reeves.—"Touch, Phrasing and Interpretation," by Mr. J. Alfred Johnstone. In this book an attempt is made to explain the chief principles which form the basis of phrasing and piano playing, and to make this explanation clearer by parallel illustrations taken from the construction of prose and verse. There is also a useful appreciation of the chief educational editions of classical works for the piano, and an entertaining chapter on curiosities of musical doctrine. One teacher, for instance, warned his pupils that "you may have the soul of an angel, but if you do not sit on a low chair the tone will not sound poetic!"

From Messrs. W. Rider & Son.—"Your Fortune in Your Name, or Kabalistic Astrology," by "Sepharial." We are told that this is "the Hebraic Method of Divination by the Power of Sound, Number, and Planetary Influence." It is a new and revised edition of a book calculated to puzzle the brains of all ordinary mortals.

From Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co.—"A Selection of 100 Hymn Tunes," composed by Josiah Booth, with appropriate hymns. A neat cloth bound book, nicely printed. Many of these hymns have not previously been published, others have been gathered from various Hymnals in which they originally appeared. The author says in his preface, "It is hoped that the compilation may not only be of interest to the Church . . . but may also prove acceptable to a far wider circle in the song-worship, both of the church and of the home.

From the Same.—"The Friend of the People," by Mary C. Rowsell. This carefully constructed and well-written novel deals, like some of Miss Rowsell's former works, with the period of the French Revolution. The plot turns on the close personal resemblance between the lawful and the base-born sons of the Marquis de Ravignac, the latter of whom captures his brother's title, and tries, but in vain, to capture his brother's bride; he then poses as a Friend of the People under the soubriquet of Citizen Crassus. But the true Marquis escapes from prison, and regains his wife; he is condemned to death through his brother's influence, but is saved by the intervention of Robespierre, and "Crassus" meets with Marat's end. The writer knows her history well, and has interwoven with it a story of strong interest and careful portraiture.

From Messrs. Sisley's, Ltd.—"The Real Ninon de L'Enclos," by Helen Kendrick Hayes. Ninon de L'Enclos, the mistress of Richelieu and one of the most famous courtesans in history, had many graces of mind and spirit, and though she was an avowed materialist she had a kind, generous and attractive nature. Her mental and physical attractions were undeniable, and for many years she was one of the most prominent figures in Parisian society. Miss Hayes gives a neatly chiselled portrait of the subject of her work; her style is light and rather cynical, but she has a clever and discreet pen.

From the Same.—"Mirrors of Illusion," by Edward Storer. Mr. Storer's verses are erotic and indiscreet; they are also unmannered, and contain echoes of Mr. Swinburne and Rossetti. Some of the ideas have the appearance of freshness and novelty, but this in all probability is due to the unusual forms in which his material is cast. When the author's mind has matured and he has gained mastery of the difficult art which he practises, he will do good, sound work.

From the Same.—"Olessia," by A. Kouprinn. Translated by Major A. Estcourt Harrison. A tale of village life in Volhynia. A nobleman falls in love with the daughter of a reputed witch, who lives in a lonely hut in the forest. The girl is beautiful, and of noble nature, but from the first she knows that disaster awaits them. The love of the two central characters is idyllic, and the atmosphere of the whole story is highly poetical.

From Messrs. Spottiswoode & Co., Ltd.—"The Church Quarterly Review." Vol. 67, No. 134, contains among other good things a pointed article on "The Mind of the East," by Sir Thomas Raleigh, K.C.S.I., "Revelation and Religious Ideas," by the Rev. Herbert Kelly, and "Causes and Remedies of Unemployment," by Professor E. J. Urwick.

FROM CHATTO & WINDUS'S SPRING LIST

New Six-Shilling Novels.

Idolatry.

Third Impression. [Preparing.

By ALICE PERRIN, Author of "The Stronger Claim," &c.

"'Idolatry' is a real triumph."—Times.

Julian Revelstone.

Second Impression.

By JUSTIN McCARTHY, Author of "Dear Lady Disdain," "A History of Our Own Times" &c.

"Unflagging interest is maintained with never-failing skill."—Scotsman.

A Question of Means.

By M. B. CROSS, Author of "Love and Olivia."

"This is a quite admirable novel, which gathers strength and interest as it goes along, till it absolutely absorbs the reader, and leaves him at the end in a very grateful mood to the talented authoress."—Daily Telegraph.

The Rogue of Rye.

By W. WILLMOTT DIXON.

"The tale is really exciting and full of the complications, dangers, escapes, fighting, and love which go to make up an historical romance. This one is capital."—Daily Telegraph.

A Castle of Dreams.

By NETTA SYRETT, Author of "The Child of Promise."

A half-ruined mediæval castle in the wilds of Ireland is the scene of this modern romance, which presents a strange and alluring blend of reality and Celtic imagination.

The Merry Heart.

By FRANK A. SWINNERTON.

A clever imaginative story of life in modern London. It will be found that, while the story deals in a perfectly natural way with the common happenings of everyday life, the Author's fancy has invested "The Merry Heart" with an atmosphere of charm and of romance.

The June Princess.

THOMAS KEN AND IZAAK WALTON

A Sketch of their Lives and Family Connection

By E. MARSTON

Short Extracts from very pleasant Reviews in the leading English and American Papers:

The Bookman Xmas No.
Another delightful, old-fashioned book by "The Amateur Angler." . . . It has the stamp of a hearty affection for books and men in every chapter.

Nottingham Guardian Dec. 15, 1908
A welcome contribution to the literature of a subject that is always welcome to enthusiasts of the rod.

Daily Express Dec. 17, 1908
It is not surprising, therefore . . . that this book should be of special interest.

Country Gentleman Dec. 19, 1908
Every angler will warmly welcome the book; we also feel sure that it will be appreciated by many who are not followers of the art.

Baily's Magazine Dec. 19, 1908
Mr. Marston's book owes a deal of its charm to its simplicity . . . a book all good anglers should possess.

Daily Chronicle
A volume from the pen of "The Amateur Angler" is always worth reading for its genial, mellow atmosphere.

Saturday Review Dec. 19, 1908
Written with much literary charm, and with entire knowledge of the subject.

Birmingham Gazette Oct. 1, 1908
Mr. Marston is now eighty-four years old . . . and since he can amuse himself and entertain thousands of readers, we are thankful and return our thanks. He has a youthful enthusiasm which warms and illumines his page.

Manchester Guardian Oct. 6, 1908
Geniality is his keynote, and it is with delightful zest that he writes of Walton and his ecclesiastical friends and relatives.

The Irish Field Oct. 26, 1908
It is a delightful addition to such Waltoniana as we already possess, and will be welcomed by every angler with any pretentions to the smallest literary or historical taste.

Notes and Queries Oct. 3, 1908
Cheery humour, an excellent gift for fishing, and prolonged literary activity are further links between "The Amateur Angler" and Walton.

The Globe Oct. 6, 1908
Those wishing to make acquaintance with the leading facts of Ken and Walton's lives could not do better than secure this excellent compilation by Mr. E. Marston, himself a noted angler.

The Standard Oct. 6, 1908
The book is written throughout with knowledge, good taste and enthusiasm, for Mr. Marston is also an angler of repute and, needless to say, a bookish man.

The Athenæum Oct. 3, 1908
Mr. Marston retains at 84 his old and pleasant enthusiasm for a pet subject, and has brought together some of the newest discoveries concerning the author of the "Compleat Angler."

Westminster Gazette Sept. 19, 1908
Many will welcome another book from Mr. E. Marston, F.R.G.S., the veteran publisher.

The Field Sept. 19, 1908
The subject itself is charmingly treated too, original in manner if not in matter. Mr. Marston's brief life of Walton is a scholarly piece of work, and it is eminently fitting that he, the doyen of angling letters, should have given it to us.

Glasgow Herald Sept. 17, 1908
Mr. Marston has admirably collated the various lives and papers relating to Ken and Walton, and has woven them into a very clear and comprehensive narrative.

The Morning Post Sept. 15, 1908
Mr. Marston has dug out a few of the most interesting features and brought out their connection in the life of Walton. The latter is related with sympathy.

The Times Sept. 17, 1908
A pleasant little volume of biographical lore by the genial littérateur who is well known as "the Amateur Angler."

Hampshire Chronicle Sept. 26, 1908
Mr. Marston's sketches, as he modestly calls them, are really delightful and give us actually fresh facts as to Ken. . . . The book must have special charm for Wintonians.

The Scotsman Sept. 24, 1908
His study of the lives of his two famous subjects is moved by a fine analytical spirit and by sympathetic insight.

The Fishing Gazette
There is a personal charm, as well as a literary grace in all Mr. Marston's writings. . . . nor is humour lacking, for he has a merry soul within him, despite his weight of years.

The Sporting and Dramatic News Oct. 3, 1908
The present book shows Mr. Marston, as was the industrious Izaak at times, to be an interesting biographer, as well as a good writer upon fishing.

The Bristol Mercury Oct. 3, 1908.
He has consulted the best authorities concerning the lives of both worthies, and has woven the materials in consecutive sketches of their lives, families and connections.

Liverpool Daily Post
He takes us very pleasantly through the interesting period covered by the two lives. . . . He concentrates it in handy form and full of the real Waltonian flavour.

Publishers' Circular
There is a calm and pleasant atmosphere surrounding the apostle of the rod. . . . The ordinary reader will derive much pleasure in reading this accurate, moderately stated, and thoroughly "fresh air" account of those who might be described as two of the most famous men of quiet life.

Fores' Sporting Notes
In this work the author has brought together all the ascertained information in the life of his hero, and his connection with his brother-in-law, the Bishop of Bath and Wells.

Staffordshire Advertiser Jan. 2, 1909
Mr. Marston has given us a most interesting sketch of two very interesting "lives," and he has thereby earned the thanks of all admirers of one of Stafford's most notable citizens.

New York Times Dec. 5, 1908
Mr. Marston gives us both excellent text and even more welcome autographs, facsimiles and pictures. Walton's life has been written by one in complete sympathy.

Sheffield Daily Telegraph Jan. 19, 1909
Mr. Marston's sketch of Izaak Walton is fully as interesting as his little biography of Ken. As an angler he writes with a good deal of enthusiasm of the gentle Izaak.

Forest and Stream New York Dec. 12, 1908
It may also be said to be a review of all that has been published bearing on the life of Walton, his pastime, his books and his occupation.

Yorkshire Post Jan. 6, 1909
Izaak Walton has many devoted disciples who combine with their love of sport a natural love of books. Mr. E. Marston, the "Amateur Angler," is one of the oldest and most zealous of them. He has written another book which all Waltonians should place upon their shelves.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS, 1909.

LIFE AFTER DEATH. By the Rev. S. C. GAYFORD, M.A., Vice-Principal of Cuddesdon Theological College. Fcap. 12mo., 2s. 6d. net.

Out of the voluminous literature on the questions and mysteries connected with the life after death, there are very few small books which attempt to take a comprehensive survey of the whole subject. Monographs on particular points, such as, e.g., the Intermediate State, the Invocation of Saints, Everlasting Punishment, or the Resurrection of the Dead—are to be found in abundance. Nor is there any lack of larger books which attempt to cover the whole field. But there is room, perhaps, for a book of smaller size which tries at least to treat of the subject in all its aspects.

A NEW LENTEN BOOK, by the Author of "Præparatio."

QUESTIONS OF THE HOLY WEEK. By the Author of "Præparatio," &c. Fcap. 8vo., Cloth extra, 1s. 6d. net.

The modern Service of the Three Hours, overburdened with Sermons, seems to have become in popular estimation the Service of Good Friday. To some the exclusion and neglect of the ancient Offices, which are full of beauty and doctrinal teaching, is a matter of regret.

New and Complete Edition of

THE PURPOSE OF LIFE. From the Sermons of Padre AGOSTINO DA MONTEFELTRO. Translated by CATHERINE MARY PHILLIMORE. 2 vols., thick Crown 8vo., Cloth, 4s.

After a lapse of more than twenty years since the first series was produced, the translator, in compliance with repeated requests for their production, has prepared a Fourth Edition of the same Sermons, under the new title of "The Purpose of Life," the Sermon bearing that name being considered the most striking of the original series. There is, moreover, one Sermon added, hitherto unpublished, entitled "The Power of Faith," taken from the course delivered by Padre Agostino, at Frascati, in 1897.

UTOPIAN PAPERS. Being Addresses to "The Utopians." By Professor PATRICK GEDDES, S. H. SWINNY, Dr. J. W. SLAUGHTER, V. V. BRANFORD, Dr. LIONEL TAYLER, Sister NIVEDITA, F. W. FELKIN, and Rev. JOSEPH WOOD. Edited by DOROTHEA HOLLINS, Author of "The Seven Wayfarers," "The Herbs of Medea," &c. Crown 8vo., Cloth extra, 3s. 6d. net.

What are the resources of contemporary science and literature, art, and religion available for the spiritual regeneration of our cities and their inhabitants? How can these resources be orchestrated for practical use? A comprehensive and systematic answer to these questions is one of the clamant needs of our time. Without attempting anything so ambitious, this book of "Utopian Papers" contains some samples of representative answers, mainly from the side of science.

LIFE OF RICHARD STEWARD, Bishop-Designate of St. Paul's and Westminster, 1641. By the late Rev. NICHOLAS POCOCK, M.A. Crown 8vo., Illustrated, 3s. 6d.

Nicholas Pocock was a man of remarkable ecclesiastical learning; he edited Gilbert Burnet's "History of the Reformation"—a huge undertaking. This is the Standard Edition of Burnet. He also wrote for the Camden Society a volume on the Marriage and Divorce of Henry VIII. and Queen Katharine of Aragon. He contributed learned articles to the Church Quarterly Review on the Prayer-books of 1549, 1552, and the original MSS. of the Book of Common Prayer. As a writer upon such subjects he is rightly placed in the front rank.

Books of the Future—Coming

POPE tells us that Heaven from all creatures hides the Book of Fate, and goes on to ask if lambs had our prescience would they skip and play and lick the hand just raised to shed their blood?

If we may think of the authors as lambs, and the hands just raised to shed their blood as those of the critics, then a glance at our Announcement Number makes us shudder for a lot of people who are now skipping and playing, and taking happy week-ends oblivious of their fate.

Trying to see into the future is one of the attributes of humanity which marks it as superior to the rest of creation, and whether it is a diplomatist fathoming the future for his country, or a maiden lining the gipsy's hand with silver, the position is an interesting one; and for the same reason it always seems to us that our Announcement Numbers are most interesting. We like to know what Mr. John Murray, Messrs. Longmans, Messrs. Macmillan, and the other well-known houses are shortly to publish, nor is it much less attractive for anyone interested in books to run down the lists of houses which were unknown to fame, or even to the Post Office Directory, a few years ago.

Booksellers are often foreseeing and methodical—they like to run down the lists of announcements in our special issues, such as the present, and enter under the names of customers interested in special subjects the new books announced on those subjects—and we happen to know also that a great many librarians make up their weekly, monthly and quarterly orders from our columns.

Not very long since, in the course of conversation with an old friend (one of our leading publishers who has known the P.C. for nearly forty years), he amused us by asking if five hundred copies of our paper were sold, and was genuinely surprised to find it was much nearer five thousand, sold to postal subscribers at home and abroad, and through the trade.

It is this large circulation among specially interested people that adds so much value to Announcement Numbers, such as the present—a number which is very gratifying to us as being much the

we have ever published, and also as the best evidence of the spirit of confidence and enterprise with which our publishers are commencing the new season.

Books of the Past—Gone

THE event of the week has been the disappearance, or rather the announcement of the disappearance, of many old and some fairly rare volumes from the Library of Lincoln's Inn, probably the oldest and certainly the best law library in London or in the Kingdom for that matter. Reporters from the daily papers have perhaps been making a little too much of the loss sustained by the Library, because, as a well-known London bookseller explained to the representative of The Daily Telegraph, there would be no difficulty in replacing the works which have disappeared—the majority for a pound or two each, and the rarest would not cost more than from £10 to £15. We understand that lists of the missing books have been supplied to the antiquarian booksellers, so it is unnecessary to reproduce them.

In connection with our two first articles in this issue, lovers of books will not resent being reminded of Isaac Disraeli's lines in his delightful "Curiosities of Literature"

Great Collections of Books

"Great collections of books are subject to certain accidents besides the damp, the worms, and the rats; one not less common is that of the borrowers not to say a word of the purloiners."

Golden Volumes

"Golden volumes! richest treasures.
Object of delicious pleasures!
You my eyes rejoicing please,
You my hands in rapture seize!"

Too Late

SOME announcements have been received too late for insertion this week, and some publishers' lists are not yet quite ready—but we hope to give them presently.

Notes and Announcements

MR. MOSHER, the American Copyright Pirate of Works by British Authors, sends a long reply to our article, warning booksellers not to sell his editions of works, which are British Copyright; it will appear in our issue next week. It is what one would expect from a high-minded pirate.

Mr. Murray is shortly bringing out a volume from the pen of Dr. David Forsyth, entitled "Children in Health and Disease," which aims at presenting a complete scientific study of childhood, both normal and abnormal. After treating of the physiology and psychology of the normal child, the book deals with the health of children in elementary and public schools, and with the principles on which the training and moral education of boys and girls should be founded.

Dr. Salomon Reinach, Membre de l'Institute and Curator of the St. Germain Museum, whose "Apollo" has become the vade mecum of all art lovers, is shortly to publish with Mr. Heinemann a new volume dealing in a similar manner with the religious systems of the world. In writing this volume he has taken a dispassionate and æsthetic point of view, and has endeavoured to avoid a demonstration of preference for any particular system.

Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Ltd., have arranged to publish an English edition of "The English in India," by Count Hans Koenigsmarck, which has already attracted considerable attention both in the German and English press.

"Scotland is fortunate in the possession of such a memorial," wrote John Hill Burton of "The Bruce" in his "History of Scotland" forty years ago; and he mentions "that the popular editions are innumerable." No such facilities exist to-day; only stray copies are to be procured, and these rarely and at an inflated price. The purpose of the edition, which is edited by W. M. Mackenzie, M.A., and is being published by Messrs. A. & C. Black, is to make this unique poem easily procurable in a worthy form. The text is based on the best examples, but there will be no modernisation save in the case of some letters. The introduction and notes will present as much as is desirable of the newer light on the origins, language, and subject-matter of the poem.

Messrs. Witherby & Co. beg to announce that they will publish in the middle of March a volume by Mr. F. G. Aflalo, entitled "Sunset Playgrounds," which contains a bright and lively account of fishing and other days in California and Canada.

Mr. Werner Laurie is publishing "The Coming Science," by Hereward Carrington, author of "The Physical Phenomena of Spiritualism." The book has an introduction by Dr. James H. Hyslop, and fills a place in the literature of physical research not covered by any other book that has thus far appeared.

Mr. Alston Rivers issues in his popular "Evergreen Series," a novel, entitled "The Wife," by Horace W. C. Newte, whose powerful work "Sparrows: the Story of an Unprotected Girl" is being so much talked about. "The Wife" is priced at 1s. net, and deals with smart suburban society.

Messrs. Rebman, Ltd., will shortly publish a novel, entitled "The Romance of a Nun," by Alix King. It is the story of a young girl who, adopted as an infant by a community of French nuns, is educated by them, and becomes one of them while in total ignorance both of the world she is renouncing and the world she is about to enter.

Mr. W. Teignmouth Shore, the author of the very successful novel "A Soul's Awakening," just issued by Mr. John Long, is a son of Canon Teignmouth Shore, of Worcester. He is well-known as a writer on bookish and topographical subjects.

Messrs. John Ouseley, Ltd. announce that they have in the Press an important book on "The Status of the Alien," by Dr. W. M. Davidson, M.A., M.Sc., D.C.L. This will be published next month.

A work of a non-party character, entitled: "The Status of Women under the English Law: from the Norman Conquest to 1908," by A. Beatrice Wallis Chapman, D.Sc. (Econ.) and Mary W. Chapman, B.A., will be published by Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd., within the course of the next few weeks.

Mr. Werner Laurie is publishing shortly "Horoscopes and How to Cast Them: a Book of Practical Astrology," by Comte C. de Saint Germain. It is described as "a plain, practical handbook on the subject, which will appeal to the number of people now interested in astrology. The work gives a simple method of casting horoscopes, and unfolds the wonderful wisdom of the Chaldean, Egyptian, Greek, and Arabian astrologers, without any of the complicated, discouraging operations required by other methods."

Count Tadasu Hayashi, who was Japanese Ambassador in London for some time, has written an introduction to "Everyday Japan," by Arthur Lloyd, M.A., which Messrs. Cassell have just published. This book describes every phase of Japanese life—the Army, Navy, and Civil Services, the education, home life, vocations and characteristics of the Japanese people—with appendices giving—(1) An outline of Japanese history down to the beginning of the movement which culminated in the Restoration of Imperial Rule; (2) The Restoration of Imperial power in Japan; and (3) A few words on Japanese religion. The book is the product of 25 years' residence and work in the country, and is admirably illustrated with 8 coloured plates, and 96 reproductions from photographs.

An excellent book for Lenten reading, and one to which the clergy are giving special prominence, is "Co-operation with God," by A. W. Robinson, D.D., Vicar of All Hallows. (Cassell.) The Bishop of London, in his address to the Church of England Men's Society at St. Paul's Cathedral the other day, said of this book:—"The touch of God has convinced thousands of men, not only that God loves them, but of something greater than that—God wants them to help Him. Do read the book written by one to whom we owe so much in this Diocese, Dr. Robinson, of All Hallows, now preaching a great mission in Kensington—that book of his which is called 'Co-operation with God.' He has brought it home to some of us in a way which we have never realised before—God wants me to help Him."

One of the successes of the present publishing season has been "The Life of Richard Jefferies," by Edward Thomas, published by Hutchinsons. The first important work by a young author has rarely won such general approbation from the reviewers, and the fact is all the more interesting, because the life of the subject does not lend itself to ordinary biographical treatment. Having no material in the shape of correspondence or notable friends of the subject to work upon, the author was compelled to adopt entirely new methods. He reproduces a highly successful selection from the various works of Jefferies to illustrate his life and genius, and in addition his description on the Jefferies country and analysis of his literary achievements show remarkable insight and excellent judgment, and form an original feature of biographical writing. Mr. Thomas is to be congratulated that under such circumstances he has passed the ordeal of the critics so happily. The reviews have not only been copious, but complimentary almost without exception. Mr. Thomas had already made his mark in the world of letters by essays and nature studies, by his introduction to Borrow's "Bible in Spain" and his book "The Heart of England."

Mr. D. Y. Cameron, A.R.S.A., A.R.W.S., an artist of distinction, is well-known alike as painter and as painter-etcher. As the etchings, printed by the artist himself, exist in very limited editions only, it is impossible for many who so desire to obtain originals. Hence Messrs. Otto Schulze & Co., of Edinburgh, announce the forthcoming publication of a volume to contain reproductions of sixty Cameron Etchings. These, ranging in date from 1888 to 1907, have been scrupulously selected to represent the development of Mr. D. Y. Cameron's work in this kind, having regard to period, subject, and temper. The interest and value of such a record is apparent.

Messrs. William Hodge & Co., of Edinburgh and Glasgow, have in the press and will publish shortly a small book by the Rev. Father Power, S.J., Edinburgh, entitled "The Alcohol Case: the Summing Up. A Medical, Legal, and Historical Sketch."

A new volume in their series of Notable Scottish Trials is announced for early publication by Messrs. William Hodge & Co., Edinburgh and Glasgow, entitled "The Douglas Cause." Portraits of some of the important personages who took a prominent part in this famous case will also be given.

An interesting volume among the new fifty books to appear in "Everyman's Library" on March 9th will be the selection of Cicero's Letters and Essays, prefaced by the short but brilliant sketch written by De Quincey.

Now that the subject of Spiritual Healing is attracting considerable attention in this country, as well as in the States, it is of interest to note that the founder of the Emmanuel Movement, Dr. Elwood Worcester, has written a new volume dealing with this question, entitled "The Living Word," which Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton will issue this spring.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton announce a new volume, entitled "The Future Leadership of the Church," by Mr. J. R. Mott, whose address at the recent Albert Hall meeting in connection with the Student Christian Movement attracted so much attention.

Mrs. Percy Dearmer's new novel, "Gervase," will be published shortly by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. The book tells the life-history of an idealist whose ideals finally triumph at the cost of his own happiness, and through his own defeat.

Edinburgh Book Notes

By "Edina."

"Blessed is the man who has found his work." Pay-day is coming along. Four years now have passed in the deepest valley of depression which the book trade has known since it had an organised existence. It is curious to note that there is a tide in the history of trade which ebbs and flows like the sea; or, as we have just learned from M. Flammarion, heaves as the crust of the earth. Its diurnal rise and fall recurs in sequences of half-century periods, and may be reckoned on with the regularity of a modern alarm-clock.

Following hard upon the rich days of the Elizabethan Age there fell the depression of the Charles I. period, which culminated in the Civil War. The gay days of Charles II. caused the pendulum to swing in the direction of prosperity, with a corresponding reversion in the days of William and Mary. Then Queen Anne's accession saw the upward heave once more, which made the Addison and Gay epoch its high-water mark. Once more recession set in and the troublous days of the "Forty-Five" saw the ebb tide. Here the flow of the later Eighteenth Century life again evinced the true nature of the sway in literary output, only to be crushed back to the opposite pole by the force of the Napoleonic Wars. The state of the country after Waterloo was simply deplorable. Everything was at stagnation point in the years which followed. Publishers and booksellers were glad to ease their stocks at any price; and even the tempting offer of presentation plates, which ran the trade into many hundred pounds of extra expense, did not suffice to help along the men who were creating new fields of literary effort, and educating the people in wider views of life and thought. The gigantic efforts of a Sir Walter Scott could not hold out against this tide in the affairs of men. And while he must ever be congratulated on his herculean task, and his heroic performance in clearing off the burden which clouded his later years, it must be borne in mind that he paid for it with his life.

A well-known Edinburgh physician once told me to remember that every man has allotted to him only a given number of heart-beats, and when the count was out he must go too. That the art of living wisely consisted in so regulating our affairs as to conserve those life-impulses. If we live fast we must die soon, and that the energy which kept this time-clock in propulsion was easy to dissipate, especially by a life of worry. Unfortunately we worry over the morrow often very needlessly, if we had but faith enough to see what it had in store. How much better to live content with the evil of to-day. This is the secret of the blessing to the man who has found his work. He is interested in his work for the work's sake, and counts not the hours till his time-sheet has to go in. Pay-day is coming along to that man. He knows it is all right.

This was the spirit of the men who held out in the early twenties of the Nineteenth Century, when things seemed as if the tide would never turn. They knew it would, and waited patiently for its first indication. They were rewarded with such an outflow in the thirties and forties that it seemed impossible for a reversion ever to again interpose between them and prosperity. Dickens, Thackeray, Punch, and a thousand and one other wonder workers were in harness; but the tide was soon again on the ebb, as those who can recall the post-Crimean days well remember. Those days which succeeded an outflow of public sympathy and patriotic feeling. Again in the sixties we had another spring-tide of public favour, and, backed by the rapid development of scientific research and speculative thought, it bid fair to be an abiding and growing stream of living water. Alas! alas! short-sighted man dreams ever of golden days and halcyon ways. Patriotism wakes him to grim realities, bringing in its train so many troubles and sorrows, that even patient Job could not keep the wolf of burden from his doorstep.

Now we are again on the up-grade for another spell. It is not the bolstering of complacent Governments who spend millions of the public money on ways and means of providing help for the starving sons of toil, and at the same time save a reputation for economy at their expense, to which we look for any lasting benefit. Nor yet do we dream of being beholden to the sons of toil whose effort from Monday morning till Saturday noon is to fill listlessly the hours which so slowly move them nearer the next football match.

Let us be thankful that in the ranks of the book trade we have still many worthy men who are blessed because they have found their work. Who weary not for pay-day, but are content to wait till it comes along.

These are the hope of a Nation. They are the backbone of our trade.

Business is coming, I know it, I know it.
The Bank-rate is up, and a healthy 'Change breeze;
Brighter days looming, I trow it, I trow it.
Books are aye wanted when men are at ease.

Black and White in French and English

It surely was a good idea on the part of the Editor of that excellent illustrated weekly Black and White to give, in many cases, descriptions in French as well as English of the illustrations which appear every week. French is the language universally understood on the Continent, and this addition of French description of the main attractions will make Black and White welcome "over all" as the Germans say—This good idea of Black and White might with advantage be adopted by other publications; it would open a new field for subscribers to most of those which depend on illustration for their power of attraction.

Some of our subscribers on the Continent may be glad to know of this international character which Black and White has adopted, and English readers will also appreciate descriptions in French of the chief events of the week which lend themselves to illustration.

Animated Pictures in Colour

A new and wonderful invention has just been completed and has been publicly demonstrated in London. It consists of nothing less than an apparatus for the application of colour-photography to the cinematograph or bioscope. With this latter in its piebald form we are all familiar, but in the current issue of The World's Work Mr. F. A. Talbot gives the first published description of this startling new development, which is entirely the work of an English inventor. Fully to appreciate its significance the whole of Mr. Talbot's very interesting article must be read; we quote the following paragraph from his introductory note:—

"It has been realised that if the two (action and colouring) could but be combined so that the image thrown on the sheet would be an exact replica of that which the eye would see if it were placed at the same point as the lens of the camera which secured the series of pictures, then indeed the world would be brought to the fireside. Bearing in mind the slight success which has attended the efforts of experimenters in ordinary colour-photography, such an application to moving pictures would seem to be far more elusive.

"Yet to-day, the object may be considered as good as achieved. Within the next few weeks there will be demonstrated in London a camera and projecting apparatus whereby all the incidents of life, recorded and reproduced at will upon the screen in the full and faithful gorgeousness of their natural colours, can be achieved. Such a development cannot fail to mark a revolution in animated picture circles, and the ordinary black-and-white system will be superseded as completely by the chromo-cinematograph as the magic-lantern of our childhood has been displaced by the bioscope. Moreover the principle and apparatus is so simple in its design and operation that it cannot fail to become commercially successful."

If somebody would now invent a cinematograph apparatus free from all danger of firing up and burning more poor mortals, we should feel more interest in this new invention. Not very long ago we saw a cinematograph operator smoking cigarettes at his work in a building with wood-work around and just over him.

The Clergy List for 1909

Incomes and Pensions

In that invaluable reference book, "The Clergy List for 1909," there is the usual small annual increase in the number of its pages and the corrections are brought down to the latest possible date. For instance, the name of the late Canon Maddy has been taken out, not only on page 676 in the "Alphabetical" section, but also on page 11 in the portion dealing with the "Diocesan Establishments," although he only died on January 20th. With reference to the contents, there is no material alteration; but for the first time the deductions (indicating them by the letter P) from the net incomes of the livings are given where subject to a pension. It has seemed desirable to do this, as in many cases even the nominal incomes, so much reduced in recent years owing to depreciation of the tithe-rent charge, are subject to pensions to the retired incumbents of one-third of the incomes. As mentioned in the Preface, the £100 tithe-rent charge now stands in value at only £69, which is as much as 24 per cent. less than the average value since the passing of the Tithe Commutation Act of 1836. It is only fair to add that in a large number of cases the retired incumbents forego their right to charge the benefices with pensions, and it will be remembered that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners have recently started a pension fund for the clergy, and are gradually in this way supplementing the very slender pensions to retired incumbents by grants of £20 upwards. They are also trying to raise the value of every living to at least £200 a year; but, of course, it will be a long time before this can be done, considering that there are 1,500 clergymen whose average clerical incomes are less than £70 a year, and nearly 5,000 whose average incomes are less than £155, quite apart from the fact that the average incomes of the 7,000 curates are under £130.

The Bruisers of England

Twenty-five representative prize fights are described in a book Mr. Werner Laurie is publishing, entitled "Fights Forgotten: the History of the Chief English and American Prize Fights."

Mr. Henry Sayers (the author of the book) has supplied a number of most interesting illustrations and in defence of his subject quotes in his preface George Borrow in the following passage from "Romany Rye":

> "Let no one sneer at the bruisers of England. What were the Gladiators of Rome or the bull-fighters of Spain in its palmiest days compared to England's bruisers? Some of them have been as noble, kindly men as the world ever produced. Can the rolls of English aristocracy exhibit names belonging to more noble, more heroic men than those who were called respectively — Pearce, Cribb, and Spring?"

Mention the "P.C."—Our readers who order books &c., they see mentioned or advertised in The Publishers Circular will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

Nash's Magazine

Interview with Mr. Eveleigh Nash

By a P.C. "Special"

In view of the large number of magazines already on the market there would scarcely seem room for another; but when the news came to The Publishers' Circular offices that Mr. Eveleigh Nash was bringing out a new magazine, I was asked to call and interview him. Since the interview I have been convinced that if any new magazine is going to make a name for itself, that of Mr. Nash stands a very good chance.

In the course of conversation with Mr. Nash, I asked him for a list of contributors.

"Well," he replied, "in my first number there will be stories by Rudyard Kipling, Anthony Hope, Rider Haggard, 'Rita,' Max Pemberton, H. A. Vachell, Mrs. C. N. Williamson, Morley Roberts, J. J. Bell, Alice and Claude Askew, Barry Pain, William Le Queux, Frank Richardson, and others."

MR. EVELEIGH NASH

"Will these authors contribute to future numbers?"

"Yes, some of them will," replied Mr. Nash, "and there will also be stories by Conan Doyle, Robert Hichens, Eden Phillpotts, E. F. Benson, Baroness Orczy, Marjorie Bowen, Frankfort Moore, Morley Roberts, A. E. W. Mason, Gilbert Parker, Egerton Castle, and nearly all the famous novelists of the day, and a special serial story by Rider Haggard, entitled 'Queen Sheba's Ring.'"

When I had recovered from the effect of such an array of talent, I asked Mr. Nash to give me some idea of the appearance of the magazine.

Handing me a dummy copy, he said: "There will be one hundred and sixty pages of reading matter, no illustrations, and you may take this as being a fair sample of the general appearance."

I was confronted by a bulldog perched on a pile of Nash's Magazines, winking knowingly, and underneath were printed the words, "I'm on a good thing." The type is clear, and I was struck by the good quality of the paper and the size of the page.

"The cover pictures, by famous artists, will be printed in three colours, and will be changed every month," Mr. Nash continued. "We are also bringing out a Continental edition, to be sold at one franc and seventy-five pfennigs, and a Canadian edition at fifteen cents."

"What are your trade terms?" I asked.

"The retail price is sixpence net, and the trade can buy single copies at fourpence halfpenny net, allowing a profit of three-halfpence a copy, and large dealers will be supplied at 4s. 6d., thirteen as twelve."

In answer to the important question of advertising, Mr. Nash said:

"In addition to extensive press advertising, I am having printed eighteen-sheet and eight-sheet posters, which will be shown on all the chief hoardings in London, in all the large provincial towns and in every important railway station in the British Isles. The magazine will also be advertised on two hundred motor and horse 'buses in London. Our canvassers have reached every town which boasts of a newsagent, and there will not be a single town or village, containing a newsagent of course, in all the British Isles where copies cannot be bought."

"It must have necessitated an enormous outlay, I should imagine, Mr. Nash?" I said.

"Yes, it has cost £15,000," he replied. "The printing order has been increased twice, and although I could scarcely believe it at first, my printer pointed out that the paper used in the first number, if stretched out, would reach from London to Edinburgh, or an approximate distance of 400 miles!"

Mr. Nash has certainly done his share, and if the trade do theirs the success of Nash's Magazine is assured. The public want good stories by good authors, and if Mr. Nash can only keep up the high standard he has set for his first number in subsequent issues, and we understand each issue will not be one whit behind the previous one, the magazine is likely to become very popular.

We give a photograph of Mr. Nash, and we think that all who know him will agree that it is an excellent likeness, and will wish him great success with his bold new venture.

Two New Maps

Messrs. W. & A. K. Johnston, Ltd., have just brought out a new commercial and mining map of South Africa, size 45 by 40 inches. The chief features of this map are the distinctive colouring given to gold, diamond, coal, and copper fields, &c., and the marking of railway and steamship routes with distances between ports. They have also published a Bathy-Orographical Map of British Isles, showing clearly the heights of the land and depths of the sea in varying shades of brown and blue.

Bookselling in Ireland

By Tier Na'n Og.

An incident of which I was told quite recently, I think illustrates for booksellers the present month admirably; it occurred during the trial trip of one of the great Atlantic steamers. After the usual luncheon, at which contrary to custom only claret was served, the speeches proceeded. An eminent American Consul happened to be on board, and was called upon to respond to a toast. He said he rose with pleasure to respond to the toast, but he felt that he was at a disadvantage, many of those present had frequently heard him speak, he hoped on this occasion he would not disappoint them, he would ask them to bear in mind that they could not expect a "Champagne out-put on a Claret in-take."

During the month of February we scarcely look for much of importance to reach our hand from the publishing centres. It is usually quite a busy month, however, in regular business, and those who do a trade in supplying books for Sunday School rewards have their hands full. Latterly, it seems to be more the custom to give the rewards at this time of the year instead of, as formerly, during Christmas week, a custom which the bookseller welcomes heartily, as it is most difficult in the press of Christmas business to give proper time to a customer who requires from one to two hours in making his selection for his scholars. The improvement in the style of reward books of late years is very marked indeed, both as regards the class of book included in the different series, which are gradually getting away from the namby-pamby style, and instead really standard authors are being sold, and these so beautifully turned out with well-executed illustrations, both in colour and half-tone; and the paper, print, and binding, that the bookseller cannot help feeling a glow of pleasure in displaying same.

From the publishers' announcement lists daily arriving the present Spring season promises to be very healthy. Quite a remarkable series in Theological books, the "Anglican Church Handbooks," issued by Messrs. Longmans, and published at 1s. net each, is making its appearance, and the sales have been very brisk in these. Messrs. T. & T. Clark's "Hastings' Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics," of which Vol. 1 is now on our shelves, has also had a good reception, but it requires some power of salesmanship to start a customer with a work which is expected to run to 10 vols. at 28s. net per volume. It is with such a work that the bookseller would require to be well supported by supplies of attractive show cards and prospectuses, and also judicious advertising in likely centres. Too much weight cannot be placed on the latter means of supporting the bookseller, and to this I drew attention last month. Possibly it is difficult for publishers in London, or their advertising managers, to quite realise the importance of advertisements appearing in papers, which in the ordinary course they never see, yet often quite remarkable results are obtained from such. Repeatedly from quite insignificant advertisements which I have inserted in country weekly newspapers, in quite remote towns in Ireland, orders resulted, which one must confess were quite unlooked for, from over-seas, Canada, and the United States, apparently through the paper being forwarded to some far away son by the old folks in the old homestead. So that, although the great London papers are of immense importance, yet it should not be overlooked that by those living out of "The Greatest City in the World," the little weekly or daily publication belonging to the town or neighbourhood of one's birthplace is always the most thoroughly read.

The undernoted figures, secured from the ports, Dublin and Belfast, should be of some interest, especially to the publishers. Lucky Belfast—to show such a decided increase in turn-over for 1908, when other book centres were having such a dull time. Let us hope that things were found to be not really so bad when the twelve months results were totted up :—

Book Notes from Sheffield

BY "THE DON"

BOOKSELLERS have experienced an exceptionally bad month. Quietude at this period of the year is a normal state of things. The spirit of Christmas often tempts people to spend more on seasonable gifts and purchases than they had originally intended, and when the reaction from the excitement follows, there is a general tightening of purse strings. That things are worse than usual this year, however, cannot be denied. The fact is, not only has the prophesied improvement in trade failed to materialise but the commercial position in Sheffield has become less satisfactory. Many manufacturers find by their balance-sheets that they made little or no profit last year; some have actually worked for twelve months, and lost money by their industry. The book trade feels the effects of such depression more than other trades whose productions are generally regarded as luxuries. The fact is a family can economise in the purchase of literature without giving food for gossip and comment by neighbours and friends.

A hope expressed in my notes last month that the establishment of a University in our midst would stimulate reading and make Sheffield a more bookish place than it is at the present time, has led to quite an epistolary tournament in one of the local dailies. A writer in the journal propounded the idea that modern Universities like that of Sheffield do not promote a love of books. His experience of the students is that they attend the University for purely commercial purposes, and the object of their studies is merely to pass examinations which will equip them for a business career. Students animated by such motives, it is argued, are not likely to become scholars and to acquire a taste for literature and poetry.

This outspoken criticism evoked a vigorous reply from Mr. Moore Smith, Professor of Literature and Languages at the Sheffield University, who suggested on the part of the writer complete ignorance of such institutions. He contended that the interest of the teachers in the several subjects of instruction was communicated to the students, not for the money it would bring but for its own sake. If they were students of literature, they would gain a love of books; if of natural science, a love of experiment and observation. The students generally had joined the various University Societies, such as the Literary Society, the Dramatic Reading Society, the Biological Society, the Physical Society, &c. These societies were also attended by past members of the University, who had no examination to pass. The Professor added that great width of reading could not be expected from young people, and one might be well content if their students caught a love of some of the subjects which they study, such as would bear fruit later, either in research or in continued self-improvement. In maintaining that the University teaching did not engender a love of books, he said the writer was bringing against the institution the most serious charge conceivable.

Following the Professor's epistle came one anonymously signed endorsing the opinion of the first writer, and adding that book lovers must be born and not made, but he does not support this dictum by evidence. He goes on to assert that Sheffield does not contain more than two dozen real book lovers, while the people are legion who join hero-worshipping societies, because they think it is intellectual to do so, and who buy plenty of pretty books because they happen to match the wall paper. Other letters on the subject expressed varied opinions.

In a large city like Sheffield the sale of school books is necessarily a considerable item, but nearly the whole of this trade is done at discount prices. Recently the local Education Committee decided to allow children in the higher standards to make their own purchases of dictionaries and atlases, believing that such a course would lead them to appreciate the value of the books by using them for home reading. The Board of Education have, however, interfered, and have called upon the Committee to interpret in a literal sense Article 20 of the Code that dictionaries and atlases shall be provided for the scholars in the higher classes free of cost.

One of the local sensations of the month has been the sudden collapse of our evening newspaper, The Mail. For twenty years Sheffield, with its huge population, has only possessed one evening paper. There are two dailies—The Telegraph and The Independent. Twenty years ago each of these published an evening edition, and competed with such vigour that money was lost on both, and in the result compact was made by the proprietors, whereby The Independent not only withdrew their publication, but agreed to keep out of the field for the period named. When the embargo expired by the flux of time, eight months ago, there was great jubilation on the part of the present proprietors of The Independent, and not a day was lost in bringing out The Mail. An insufficient supply of capital is the cause of the collapse. Both evening papers made a mistake (commercially) in giving too much for the halfpenny, and money was lavished on private wires, motor-car distribution, and news services. Still, the withdrawal of The Mail after only one day's notice came as a great surprise, because the public had been led to believe it was making satisfactory progress. The incident illustrates the costliness of modern daily journalism, but with good management and judicious expenditure there ought to be room in Sheffield for two evenings.

One of the chief local events of the week has been the visit of Dr. Lang, the new Archbishop of the Northern Province. With their characteristic pushfulness the Sheffield folk were the first to secure the presence of his Grace in a public capacity after his appointment. An address of congratulation and welcome from the Rural Deanery of Sheffield was supplied by Messrs. Pawson & Brailsford, the well-known booksellers. The illumination of the address was in 15th Century style, carried out in a delicate and truly artistic manner. The address, occupying two pages, was bound in purple morocco.

Books dealing in a practical fashion with afforestation should command a good sale now that this question is so prominent. Mr. John Simpson, whose "The New Forestry" has met with so much success, is the author of another work now in print, entitled "British Woods and their Owners." The work is devoted to the interests of owners of private estates, and of woods, its chief aim being to suggest a practical plan by which owners may recognise and replant their woods from their own resources without loss or State assistance.

Mr. Simpson is in favour of State Forestry in principle, but averse to any scheme of the kind which does not include the existing British woods. These, he contends, have the first claim on State assistance and present it with an opportunity for a start that surpasses any plan yet suggested. The choice lies between a national asset consisting of several million acres of woods, and a bald mountain scheme like that suggested by the recent Forestry Commission, and which proposes to tax the Treasury to the extent of millions and cannot promise any return for nearly a century. Pawson & Brailsford, of Sheffield, are the publishers.

A work published by Blackie & Son, at 5s., which deserves more attention than it appears to have received is: "Our Teeth: how built up: how destroyed: how preserved" The authors are Mr. R. Denison Pedley, L.D.S., a noted London dentist, and Mr. Frank Harrison, L.D.S., of Sheffield. The work comes at an opportune moment when the public are just waking up to the importance of good dentition to the general health of the body. It explains what is unknown to the majority of educated men and women, viz.: the causes of dental diseases, the means of preventing them, their effect, and the need for their rational treatment, and is written in a style which can be understood by the layman.

Messrs. Cassell in America

WE see from the New York Publishers' Weekly that Messrs. Cassell & Co. have leased the premises at 43–45, East 19th Street vacated by Paul Elder & Co. This is the second increase of space made by this firm in less than two years, an illustration of their growth since they actively re-entered the publishing field here. Their list for the coming year will show several hundred new titles, many of unusual importance. The firm is also arranging to take back the marketing of a number of their publications heretofore issued by American publishers. The "People's Library," the most inexpensive thin paper edition of standard works now issued, will be augmented by the addition of fifty titles. A new series, to be known as "Cassell's Little Classics," is in active preparation. The completion of their "Women of All Nations" is announced. This work has met with unusual favour from the public, and the publishers' enterprise and expense amply rewarded.

A Good Novel of Golf

"THE HAPPY ELOPEMENT," by E. H. Lacon Watson, just published by Messrs. Brown, Langham & Co., is a capital story of Golf, Golf, Golf, and Love—in that proportion. There appears to have been some love-making of sorts before the story begins, but in the first chapter the reader comes in at the finish, when the lady stamps and raves, and nearly strikes her lover over the head with her racquet. The next hundred pages are pretty well all "golf," and we make the acquaintance of the strangest figure of a player ever seen or imagined—a middle-aged French professor, who plays the game by scientific rules of his own invention and of course beats all the cracks of the club. In order to steady himself in a wind he hammers a peg into the ground and secures himself to it by a rope; this being considered not fair to the turf, he carries about a pair of over-brogues with lead soles, and so anchors himself to get a steady drive. What with his range-finder and artificially stiffened right leg to secure accuracy, the Professor provides the club with great sport, and walks off with all the cups. The hero whose head was nearly broken by his first lady-love has his heart stolen by the entrancingly beautiful daughter of the quaint old Professor. But the course of true love, like the golf course, is tame without its bunkers, so one fine morning the hero finds himself on with the new love before he is off with the old, and gets a letter from the latter beginning "Dear Bobby," and ending "Yours, Sophy." But the sly termagant Sophy is really after a lord, and her elopement with him is the happy event which enables the hero and his lovely Molly to begin that long twosome together, which is, or ought to be, the best thing the gods have to offer to mortals. Golfers who want something when weather bound to talk about ought to read this book.

Annals of Archæology and Anthropology

No. 4 of Vol. I, which completes the first volume of the Annals of the Liverpool University Institute of Archæology, contains as its principal article a Preliminary Report by Professor John Garstang on his Excavations on the Hittite Site at Sakje-Geuzi in North Syria, undertaken in the autumn of 1908 on behalf of the Right Hon. Sir John Brunner, Bart., M.P., Dr. Ludwig Mond, Mr. Robert Mond and Mr. H. Martyn Kennard. A separate section of the Report is devoted to the remarkable series of pre-Hittite pottery, which goes back to the Neolithic origins of the mound, and includes painted styles with Cappadocean, Assyrian and even Elamite affinities.

Another paper, by Messrs. A. J. B. Wace, J. P. Droop and M. S. Thompson summarises the present state of our knowledge of the Early Civilisation of Northern Greece, as revealed by recent excavations in Thessaly.

The March part, which begins Volume II., will contain an account of the excavations of the Liverpool Committee for Excavations in Wales, at the Roman Station of Caerleon, and other reports of recent exploration of early sites in Wales.

Result of Open Access to Books in Libraries

THE "Literary Year Book" for 1909 gives the last year's issues at Halifax (open access) Public Libraries as 150,000 volumes in the Lending Library, and 10,000 in the Reference Library, while the issues for the preceding year is given in the "Year Book" for 1908 as 185,000 and 15,000 volumes respectively, so that, if the "Literary Year Book" is correct, the last year's issue shows a decrease of 35,000 volumes in the Lending Library and 5,000 in the Reference Library. Similar decreases are apparent in connection with several other Open Access Libraries, especially in the lending departments, where the glamour and novelty, and consequently the popularity, of the system no longer exists.

Early Voyages

MESSRS. JAMES MACLEHOSE & SONS, of Glasgow, are publishing a very interesting series of reprints of "Voyages and Travels of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries." These volumes are printed at the University Press, Glasgow, on specially made antique paper.

The works include:—Purchas His Pilgrimes; Coryat's Travels; Lithgow's Travels; Captain John Smith's Travels, &c., and each is an exact reprint from the original text, except that obvious misprints are corrected. They contain all the original maps, and curious illustrations reproduced in facsimile. Each set of Voyages is furnished with a very full Index on the preparation of which great care is expended. The edition of Purchas runs to 20 vols.

The Late Mr. William E. Abel

Over 50 Years with Mudies'

IT is with deep regret we announce the death of Mr. William E. Abel, who for nearly 53 years has been connected with the staff of Mudie's Select Library, Ltd.

During a considerable portion of that period he successfully controlled, in rotation, various departments of the establishment, and acquired a reputation for fidelity and thoroughness that continued unimpaired to the end of his career. He gained the confidence and esteem of the founder of Mudie's Library, the late Mr. Charles Edward Mudie, to whom he rendered invaluable service in the strenuous labour occasioned by the rapid expansion of the library and the multiplication of its operations in the Sixties, Seventies, and Eighties of the last century.

THE LATE MR. W. E. ABEL.

Mr. Abel's sterling qualities inspired the present managing-director of Mudie's (Mr. Arthur O. Mudie) with the same implicit trust and confidence entertained by his father, the late Mr. C. E. Mudie—to both he had proved a pillar of strength in his long and busy life at the library. His most noteworthy characteristic was an imperturbable temperament, proof against any assault; this was recognised early in his career by the firm, and led to his being chosen to interview intending subscribers and enquirers, particularly the irate borrower for whom books were not published quickly enough, &c. His unruffled demeanour and calm deliberation invariably produced a happy issue; he could neither be flurried nor made angry, but met all comers with a genial smile, and an optimism that were infectious. His success as a diplomat became proverbial, in fact there is little doubt that had his lot been cast in the Forensic instead of Literary world he would have won a distinguished place in that sphere. For very many years he held the position of paymaster to the staff; being thus brought in contact with members of all departments he had an unrivalled opportunity of measuring the ability of each individual, and of exerting a widespread influence. To him all men, of whatever grade, went for his ever ready counsel or help. Essentially a kind, just and impartial man it was natural he should become the champion of the youth of the establishment, and that successive generations should give him their affectionate loyalty; it was, perhaps, in his private life that he shone most as the "children's friend," however.

A quarter of a century or more he reigned as the beloved Sunday School Superintendent and Musical Director of East Hill Congregational Church, Wandsworth. Nor was his interest in the spiritual welfare of the young confined to this country; he laboured himself in his own parish, but his sons he sent farther afield; his eldest as a minister in various parts of England, and his youngest as a missionary to the distant Islands of New Guinea.

Mr. Abel will be missed by his colleagues, both young and old, and his loss regretted with a depth and sincerity of feeling not often evoked among employées at the present day, and it may be safely predicted that his memory will be cherished unto the third and fourth generation.

Those "Earnest Women" Book Beggars

"THE calls upon the purse, and the time, of the author, are many and great. In my business days I was never asked to contribute a tub of butter to a church fair or a box of cheese to a fresh-air fund. Since my name has appeared now and then upon book-covers, and at the bottom of magazine pages, I am frequently—much more frequently than my reputation would warrant—invited to write my name in the inside of a book and to present both the book and the name to a bazaar for the benefit of a local charity of which I have never heard, and in which I can have no possible personal or local interest. And, harder still, I am requested to prepare articles upon 'The Amenities of Literature' or upon 'The Higher Education of the Gentler Sex' for the entertainment of the members of a circle of earnest women, absolute strangers to me, who meet, fortnightly, in some distant town I have never visited and never expect to visit. For all this nothing is ever given in return. These same earnest women might beg a picture from a painter, a recital from a pianist, or a recitation from an actor, but they would hardly think of asking a packer for a tin of pressed beef, or their favourite grocer for a pound of tea, to be consumed at the fortnightly luncheon which invariably follows the intellectual symposium. And yet the cheering cup and the strengthening meat-extract cost less, last longer, and go farther than does the work of the associates of the Guild of Literature and Art."—From "Talks in a Library," by Laurence Hutton.

National Book Trade Provident Society

London Branch's Smoking Concert

THE National Book Trade Provident Society is evidently determined to justify its existence by additional ways to that indicated by its title. There are many ways by which it can be useful and helpful to its members, and the first step to be taken is to give them an opportunity of making each other's acquaintance, and no better means can be found for this than by bringing master and man together for an evening's light and wholesome enjoyment. The Edinburgh and the Oxford Branches have already had social evenings, and one of them has offered prizes for literary essays.

On Friday, February 26th, the London Branch organised the first of what we believe is to be a series of social evenings, in the form of a smoking concert at the Manchester Hotel, Aldersgate Street. The room was crowded with members and friends, and many prominent London booksellers and their assistants enjoyed the wonderful array of talent provided by the Committee. Mr. Frank Denny (the President of the London Branch) occupied the chair. A most pleasant evening was spent. Amongst those who contributed to the enjoyment of the occasion were Messrs. R. Nevett, F. H. Willis, M. Moscovitz, R. H. Kent, B. Russell, J. P. Marshall, W. Miles, G. Morgan, C. Grossmith, E. Beaumont, C. Young, H. Cape, E. Laurie, S. Driver, F. Percival; Mr. S. H. Parry accompanied. The Committee wish to thank Messrs. Ballantyne & Co., of Tavistock Street, Covent Garden, for kindly providing gratuitously all the printed matter and paper in connection with this concert.

The programme was a long and remarkably good one. It would be impossible to do adequate justice to the array of talented artistes in a short notice; but there are many items which stand out distinctively as of really first-class calibre. Mr. Selwyn Driver was inimitable in his musical sketches; he is a clever elocutionist as well as a clever pianist, and the two accomplishments made his humorous and witty songs the more telling. He was funny without extravagance and his wit was wholesome, consequently he got a great reception, as did Mr. William Miles, although his means of getting it was very dissimilar. Mr. Miles is a famous elocutionist with an enviable voice, and his rendering of Tennyson's "The Revenge" was really masterly, and he appealed to every one of the audience by his perfect declamation and natural and forceful dramatic gesture. As an encore Mr. Miles gave E. F. Turner's humorous piece, "My First and Last Appearance," in which he was as funny as he had been earnest and dramatic. Later in the evening he recited again to the accompaniment of his zither. Excellent violin solos were given by Mr. R. Kent, and so well did he play that an encore was demanded. Mr. Edward Percival is an old hand at ventriloquial sketches, and created much amusement with his little effigy. Mr. Herbert Cape showed great ability in his recital of Kipling's "A Ballad of East and West." He proved quite equal to the difficult task he had set himself and carried the audience with him all along to the end.

The songs were many and all good. Mr. Maurice Moscovitz's splendid voice did full justice to "The Bedouin's Love Song" and Tosti's "Good Bye." Mr. Edward Beaumont sang "Trooper Johnny Ludlow" and "Master and Man" in fine style, his full-toned voice suiting each song admirably. Mr. J. P. Marshall found "Nita Gitana" fitting to his tenor voice, and it was greatly appreciated. Mr. Edgar Laurie's two songs, "A Bell at Sea" and "The Trumpeter," Mr. F. H. Willis's "The Windmill," and Mr. R. Nevett's piano solo, "Double Eagle March," were all well executed and thoroughly enjoyed.

The humorous songs were in every case admirably rendered. Mr. Bernard Russell, in "I Had a Little Garden" and "The Vegetarian," was extremely funny, as was also Mr. Charles Grossmith in "Sophie's Sweethearts" and "The Whistling Bowery Boy," and Mr. George Morgan in "A Sergeant of the Line," for which he received an encore. Mr. Charles Young's song, "Bosh!" was excellently given; indeed, all the humorous turns were much above the average of ordinary smoking concerts.

During the evening Mr. Denny, in a short speech, gave particulars of how extensively the Society had spread during the last year, spoke of the great success of The Odd Volume, and urged all to do their utmost to make known how necessary it was for all assistants to become enrolled as members. He read a telegram from the Edinburgh Branch wishing the London Branch a successful evening and saying it had enrolled twenty-four new members at their smoker a day or two previous.

Nomination forms of several prospective new members were handed in to the Secretary before the entertainment closed.

Edinburgh District

A SUCCESSFUL smoking concert was held under the auspices of the Edinburgh District Committee, in the Imperial Hotel, on Thursday, 25th ult. at 8 p.m. Mr. Walter G. Anderson (Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier) presided over a representative gathering of upwards of seventy assistants. This was quite a good attendance, considering the amount of interest diverted by an election taking place in the city within a week's time, and also taking into account the mistaken idea of certain assistants that because they had already joined the "Provident Society" they need not trouble any more about its affairs. Mr. Anderson briefly stated the object of the meeting, which was to spend a social evening and to stimulate further interest in the cause of the Society. In the course of the evening Mr. Pentland briefly explained the growth and present position of the Society, especially in regard to its finances and future prospects, and trusted that there would be a considerable increase in the membership, not only in Edinburgh, but all over the country. The Hon. Secretary (Mr. Haldane) dealt with the reasons given for not joining the Society, which were simply excuses, and not reasons at all. He then gave reasons why every assistant should become a member, laying particular stress upon such points as the advantage of belonging to a Trade Society; the growing strength of the Society and assurance of benefit, if it should unfortunately be required; the small premium being well within the means of every assistant. He asked what they could do with 6s. a year, as compared with the benefits which might be obtained by the members of this Society. We hear about the man who cannot afford 6s. a year, but this is precisely the person who must become a member, and for whom the Society has been instituted. He showed how the employers in Edinburgh had given them a splendid lead, no less than 28 having become life-members, and appealed to them to give in turn a lead to other cities. With the assistance of the Committee, the names of 24 new members were obtained, and more are to follow, bringing up the number of ordinary members to 80; a determined effort must, however, be made to turn it into three figures. Mr. Anderson congratulated the assistants upon this increase of membership, and hoped it would be still further augmented in the near future. Mr. Pollitt (J. M. Dent), who was present, spoke briefly on the advantages of such societies in general, and this one in particular. Mr. Wm. Pollock (Menzies), in taking over the chair, proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Anderson before he left, for his kindness in presiding over this meeting, as well as for his interest in the Society and in the assistants of Edinburgh, to whom he has given freely of his time and talents. A very enjoyble concert was carried out during the evening, contributed by members of the Society. Songs were rendered by Messrs. Aitken, Berry, Brash, Knox, Muir, Murdoch, Mitchell, Pollock, and Wishart Brown; recitations by Mr. Smart, while Mr. Orrock brought his gramophone, and proved that he could manipulate it with acceptance. Mr. Cairns proved himself an efficient pianist and accompanist. A very happy evening was finished by votes of thanks, and "Auld Lang Syne." On the motion of the Chairman, a telegram was despatched to the London District Committee, with best wishes for a pleasant and successful meeting at their "Smoker" on Friday.

Scotland Keeps It

THE principal portion of the works on shorthand sold at Dowell's Rooms, Edinburgh, on February 19th, in the J. Irvine Smith collection, has been secured from Mr. Quaritch by J. Hardie Brown & Co. for a local collector, thereby retaining this important and curious collection for Scotland. Among the items is an early MS. on vellum by Ratcliff (1658), which is likely to settle certain disputed points.

An appropriate book for the Spring is "Wild Flowers in their Seasons," by Prof. F. E. Hulme, a cheap edition of which Messrs. Cassell have just published.

Some Reminiscences of a Publisher

In that very pleasant work "Eliza Brightwen: the Life and Thoughts of a Naturalist," edited by W. H. Chesson and just published by Mr. Fisher Unwin, there are some interesting references to one of the founders of the publishing house of Smith, Elder & Co.—Mr. Alexander Elder. We have pleasure in giving portraits of Mr. Alexander Elder and his niece, Mrs. Brightwen. Mr. Elder died at Lancing on February 6th, 1876, some thirty years after his retirement from the firm of Smith, Elder & Co. The following extracts from Mrs. Brightwen's work give us pleasant glimpses of the publisher in his private life:—

"I was born," says Mrs. Brightwen, "at Banff, N.B., on October 30th, 1830.* My father and mother were George and Margaret Elder. My first recollections of life are associated with playing on the seashore, picking up shells, pebbles and seaweed. I remember distinctly the rooms of our house, where the furniture stood and where the windows were, though I am now sixty-four and though I left Scotland when I was, I believe, about four years old. I was the fourth of the children of my mother, who died in February, 1837.

"My father having a motherless family of six, I was adopted by his brother Alexander, one of the founders of the publishing house of Smith, Elder & Co. I recollect coming to England in a sailing vessel and being taken on my arrival to my uncle's office (65, Cornhill), where I was given a book of butterflies to look at whilst I waited to go down with him on the top of a coach to his country house, Sparrow Hall, Streatham, then quite in the country in the midst of fields. My first recorded speech on arriving is said to have been, "Look at the wee birdie sittin' on the dyke!" So, I suppose, that even in those days I loved all animated nature.

"My most dear uncle was ever kind and good to me—his 'little lassie,' as he always tenderly called me to the last day of his life—and I loved him devotedly. He was one of the best of men, kind to everybody, an upright, honest Scotchman, respected by everyone who had come in contact with him.

"My uncle used to spend one day in the week at home, when I used to be his constant companion. To me it was a red-letter day. There was always something delightful requiring attention; his gun had to be cleaned, fishing tackle had to be prepared for use, fences had to be mended, or gardening had to be done. In all these things his kindness allowed me some part to play, and I was very happy if I thought I was in any way helpful to him.

"There was an empty cottage in the grounds, in one room of which my uncle kept all his various tools and wood for carpentering, which was one of his favourite pursuits. This room I was allowed sometimes to sweep and put straight, and a rare dust I used to make, till my uncle would remonstrate with, 'Hoot, lassie, I think ye've done eneugh. I canna breathe with all this upstir!' I did love to play housemaid, even to blacking and polishing the grate! But I believe that after one ministration I was commanded to leave the grate alone."

In his Introduction Mr. Edmund Gosse tells us of the unbounded joy of Mrs. Brightwen when her first work, "Wild Nature Won by Kindness," very Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.

These well-known firms met at Boston Farm, Ealing, last Saturday, an interesting game resulting in an easy victory for "No. 35, the Row" (Messrs. Nelson & Sons) by 4 goals to 1.

The recent heavy snowfall had made the ground rather heavy, and the first half produced 2 goals for the winners, the second of these being gained from a penalty. In the second half, although having more of the game than formerly, Longmans only managed to pierce their opponents' defence on one occasion through the instrumentality of Taylor, whilst Nelson's added two more before the whistle finally sounded.

The A B C and X Y Z of Bee Culture

Every reader of the P.C. who has customers who are interested in bees and bee culture should make a note of what appears to us to be the best and cheapest work we have ever seen on the subject—i.e., "The A B C and X Y Z of Bee Culture." It is a fully and admirably illustrated cyclopædia of everything pertaining to the care of the honey-bee: bees, hives, honey, implements, honey plants, &c., facts gleaned from the experience of thousands of bee-keepers and afterwards verified in the apiary of the authors, A. I. Root and E. R. Root, of Medina, Ohio, U.S.A., who are past-masters in the art of bee culture. It is quite a large work of nearly 550 demy 8vo. pages, well printed, full of illustrations and with about eighteen columns of index; yet the price is only 7s., post free. The London agents are the publishers of The British Bee Journal, 8, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London.

Five Sons Killed in Battle

One of the most interesting things in connection with the Abraham Lincoln celebrations was the unearthing of a letter from the President, dated at Washington November 21st, 1864. It runs as follows:—

Executive Mansion,
Washington.
November 21st, 1864.

To Mrs. Bixby, Boston, Mass.

Dear Madam,—I have been shown in the files of the War Department a statement of the Adjutant-General of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five sons who have died gloriously on the field of battle. I feel how weak and fruitless must be any word of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I cannot refrain from tendering you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the republic they died to save. I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement, and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom.—Yours very sincerely and respectfully,

A. Lincoln.

"The Old Cottages of Snowdonia"

By Harold Hughes and Herbert L. North

Now and again one comes upon a book which takes possession of one. It is generally a question of the right book hitting the right mood or right stage of one's mental development. Such a fortunate conjunction befell the present writer when from out its neat white box he drew the volume under consideration. A long residence in Wales had endeared to him those ancient and hitherto ignored cottages in which the very essence of the Celtic spirit seems to dwell. He had tried in vain to gather some information upon the subject, and had become persuaded that there were none to share his pleasure in the simple beauty of rough stone, white or cream washed.

Messrs. Hughes and North have changed all this by producing a perfect little masterpiece of research wisdom and appreciation upon the subject of old Welsh cottages. Though confining themselves to the district of Snowdonia, wished it will be this remarkable book, unheralded by any advertisement, modest in price, and as delightful in form as it is in substance. The binding is of rough canvas in a shade of reseda, the headings are printed in red in Gothic type, the names of the cottages being in the same type in black. The illustrations are, perhaps, the most fascinating part of all—tiny gems of drawing, three and four inches large, having all the merits of old woodcuts, as our readers may judge from the two examples we give, showing ground plan and interior of "Bwlch Gydrhos, Llangelynin." This volume is published by Messrs. Jarvis & Foster, Bangor.

the book is a vade mecum upon the whole question and will, we believe, create an interest in an entirely new field of antiquarian knowledge. It is impossible here to do more than summarise briefly the contents of their book.

After considering the harmony that existed between the old cottages and their surroundings, they pass on to describe the ancient "Cyttian Gwyddelod," or round huts, of the Romano-British period, and their evolution in the 12th century. The 14th century and the earliest extant roofs, walling, ingles and lattices are fully considered, and the changes which passed over the dwellings of the peasants in the early part of the 16th century, carrying the reader right down to the early part of the 19th century. Separate portions are devoted to the subjects of walling, chimneys, stone staircases, glass and windows, and to a detailed account of the aspect, furniture and contents of the interiors.

The book ends with a plea for the preservation of such examples of the ancient forms of simple beauty as are to be found scattered about the hills and dales of Wales. If anything can further this consummation so devoutly to be

International Association of Antiquarian Booksellers

Extracts from the Annual Report

In recording the progress of the second year of the Association, the Committee believe that the members will be greatly gratified by the steady and rapid advance which has been made. The most important feature of the year has been the alteration of the title from that of "The Second-hand Booksellers' Association" to that of "The International Association of Antiquarian Booksellers," whereby world-wide influence and power has accrued to the institution. The change originated in the fact that a number of influential booksellers in the United States, Canada, Germany, and other countries desired to participate in the advantages of membership, and at a general meeting held on May 11th, a proposition to alter the title was carried nem. con. There are now, consequently, 27 foreign members, 15 of whom have joined the Committee, and have promised their services for the benefit of the Association whenever occasion occurs for them. The more dignified term "Antiquarian" was at the same time chosen by general consent in place of "Second-hand." The Foreign members of the Committee have already taken opportunity of supplying valuable information.

Caution should be exercised in sending goods on consignment to the United States, as the distance from Great Britain adds to the difficulty of taking action. Two losses have been incurred in this manner, one of £20, and another of £130. It is only just to add that in both cases the defaulters were Englishmen, and that the second case was a particularly bad breach of trust by a man well known in London. Care should also be taken not to send cash in advance for lists of names of book-buyers. In one case the names of several firms of repute in England were given as having purchased the list in question, but the said firms deny the truth of the statement.

The application fee for collecting accounts was reduced from one shilling to sixpence, but notwithstanding this fact the total derived from these fees was only two shillings less than in 1906, thus showing increase of business. The amount recovered for members as a result of the application fees was £60 10s., being an advance of £18 10s. 10d. upon the previous year. Thirty-six inquiry fees were paid, many resulting in the prevention of losses, and others enabling business to be transacted at once with firms known to be reputable.

The number of the members of the Association is now 237, being an increase of 44 over 1907. London members are 90 in number; country members 120; and foreign members 27.

A great advance in income has been made in 1908. In 1907 the income was £38 5s. 7d.; this year it has been £51 1s. 1d. This year a balance of £37 17s. 8d. is in hand, as compared with £8 10s. 2d. in 1907, and the Committee are of opinion that this is very satisfactory.

Mr. R. B. Marston, editor of The Publishers' Circular, and Mr. George H. Whitaker, editor of The Bookseller, joined the Committee in May, and Mr. H. R. Hill in December. Mr. Marston and Mr. Whitaker very kindly offered to insert advertisements of the Association in their journals free of charge, which offers were accepted with many thanks. The Association is also deeply indebted to Mr. Francis E. Murray for free insertion of "Association Notes," and for his ardent advocacy of the Association in the columns of The Clique.

The Committee particularly wish to urge upon all members the desirability of enlarging the membership.

Signed on behalf of the Committee,

B. D. Maggs,

January 28th. President.

THE COUNCIL SCHOOL HYMN BOOK

A COLLECTION OF HYMNS, WITH PRAYERS, FOR USE IN COUNCIL SCHOOLS

COMPILED TO MEET THE PARTICULAR NEEDS OF THE NEW EDUCATION AUTHORITIES ESTABLISHED BY THE ACT of 1902.

PREFATORY NOTE TO THE MUSIC EDITION

The music of the Council School Hymn Book has been selected for its melodic interest and general suitability to children's voices. These essentials have been kept steadily in view as regards the new tunes composed expressly for the book, wherein many well-established favourites find a place. It will be observed that some of the tunes appear in lower keys than usual in order that young voices may not be unduly strained.

Every care has been taken to make the music of the book acceptable to teachers as well as children, in the hope that daily hymn-singing may become a a specially enjoyable feature of school life.

The Hymns (150) chosen are those of proved value and reputation, including such Hymns as embody principles like the love of country and the duty of good citizenship. New Hymns have been specially written for the book by the Bishop of Durham, Mr. Arthur C. Benson, Dr. T. W. Jex-Blake and others.

Prayers for the opening and closing of school form an Appendix to the book.

To meet the requirements of Education Authorities the publishers are prepared to issue the book with special name and title for different Councils and localities.

EDITIONS AND PRICES

a. Words and Tunes with complete Accompaniment, the usual hymnal form, price 2s. 6d.
b. The Words with the Melody only (staff and tonic sol-fa notations combined), for the use of the children, price 1s.
c. Words only (limp cloth), 6d.

ADDITIONAL HYMNS

FOR USE WITH ANY OTHER CHURCH HYMNAL

Special features of the book, which should make it a valuable help to Church work in many districts :—

1. It can be used with any other Church Hymn Book without confusion of numbers, the first hymn being numbered 801.
2. The book contains not a single hymn or tune that is found in the Old Edition of "Hymns Ancient and Modern," only six that appear in the New 1904 Edition of that book, and only about 30 that appear in the New 1903 Edition of "Church Hymns." It can therefore be used as an appendix with any of these books, and is issued in sizes to bind up with them.
3. It brings together in one volume many hymns in constant use that are only to be found scattered through a number of books, and it contains many others which have become dearly loved by Church people.
4. "Additional Hymns" may be described as a popular collection both as regards words and music, thoroughly Catholic and Evangelical in tone.
5. It provides much-needed hymns for Choral Celebrations and for the Young, and includes a complete set of the "Salve Festa Dies" translations, words and music as used at St. Paul's Cathedral; also the late Bishop Jenner's metrical version of the Church Catechism, and hymns for the three National Saints.
6. As will be seen, in the Index a distinguishing letter is placed opposite every hymn, denoting its characteristic features.

Early Booksellers' Catalogues

By TEMPLAR.

THESE, I have suggested elsewhere, are well worth noting and preserving when they are found in old books. It is obvious that apart from their general interest as exhibiting the kind of literature in vogue at any given period they are often unique sources of special information and bibliography.

A catalogue including all the items advertised in the above lists would probably include a good many forgotten and possibly worthless books, but it might also throw light on some obscure points in literary history.

For example, I bought some years ago an anonymous translation of the Maxims of La Rochefoucauld, 8vo., 1706. Attracted by the early date of the book I was not surprised to find it the first English version of the complete work, taken from the Paris and Lyons editions of 1691.

The next question was, who wrote it ? No author's name appeared, as I have said, and the British Museum Catalogue—that clue to so many a nameless or pseudonymous personality—added nothing to what was told one on the title page.

From the fact, however, that certain "Christian Maxims" were appended (as a sort of antidote) to the text of La Rochefoucauld, one inferred that the author was not only a French scholar but a divine.

The book being one of the publications of Richard Sare, of Gray's Inn Gate, in Holborn, I turned to his advertisements (appended to the Maxims) to see what clients of his there were to whom this description would apply ; and a cursory examination revealed two such persons—Jeremy Collier and Dean Stanhope.

The Catalogue (4 pp.) led off with a number of translations (Æsop, Josephus, &c.) by Sir Roger L'Estrange, some ten or twelve Theological or Religio-political Works "An appeal to all true members of the Church, &c., on behalf of the King's Supremacy," "The Church of Rome no guide in matters of Faith, in answer to a late Letter from a Nephew to his Uncle," and numerous sermons and controversial opuscula by Dr. Stanhope.

Jeremy Collier's famous "Short View" (of the "Profaneness and Immorality" of the Stage) and two successive replies ("Defence of the Short View," &c.) to criticisms of that work, were followed by the same author's translation of Marcus Aurelius, and a version by him of "Maxims and Reflections on Plays," drawn from Bossuet (!)

This inclined one to suppose that Collier himself, if not too exclusively occupied with his Ecclesiastical History, might be our anonymous translator—the anonymity being, in the case of a work of such ill repute among the orthodox, natural enough. And here was Collier translating Marcus Aurelius and certain other "Maxims" from the French.

However, on collating this list with another published in L'Estrange's Fables of Æsop and other Mythologists with Morals and Reflexions, 5th edit., 8vo., 1708, another entry arrested my attention, to wit :

"Epictetus's Morals" and "Charron of Wisdom, done into English from the newest French edition."

"The two last by the Rev. Dr. Stanhope, Dean of Canterbury."

Given such materials for conjecture Epictetus and Charron combined seemed to outweigh Marcus Aurelius and Bossuet. And on consulting the Dict. of National Biography one finds that the work is in fact "attributed" to Stanhope, though apparently with some hesitation.

But even if the fact had been well known (and it is rather stated, by the authorities cited, as a tradition, possibly based on no more evidence than is here rehearsed), yet starting from the book, as the late Mr. Henry Bradshaw used to say, one could scarcely arrive at it more naturally than viâ the publisher's own catalogue, which in any such case would be worth consulting.

Turning to the general character of the books offered for sale in the first decade of the Eighteenth Century by Mr. Richard Sare, of Gray's Inn Gate, in Holborn, the modern reader cannot fail to be struck by their solemnity.

Which of the following, one wonders, would he pick out to accompany him, let us suppose, on a long journey by rail ?

Flavius Josephus.

Genuine Epistles of St. Barnabas.

A Practical Discourse against Prophane Swearing.

The authority of Christian Princes over Ecclesiastical Synods, an answer to a Letter to a Convocation Man. In this controversy, by the way, Dean Stanhope was directly involved as Prolocutor of the Lower House of Commons, dissolved in 1716, and never summoned again till the Nineteenth Century.

Parsons' Christian Directory.

A Gentleman's Religion in Three Parts.

An Essay towards making the knowledge of Religion easie to the meanest capacity.

Short and Plain Directions for spending one day well. (These last two titles read rather like counsels of Despair !) The reader who was repelled by them would scarcely find better cheer in :

The Christian Scholar (though priced "3d., or 20s. a hundred").

The Christian Casuist.

Puffendorf's Law of Nations, or

The unlawfulness of Bonds of Resignation.

The few examples of lighter literature include translations of Lazarillo de Tormes, and the "Spanish Rogue," also

Love Letters between a Nobleman and his sister, in 3 parts, 8vo. ; and some more improving

Reflections upon Ridicule.

The page from which these are quoted (L'Estrange's Æsop, 1708, ad. fin.) contains some 4 or 5 works which are still well known.

Collier's Ecclesiastical History.

Evelyn's Sylva, and Kalendarum Hortense, and Chamberlayne's Angliæ Notitia, or The State of Great Britain, a valuable work cited by Macaulay, and frequently enlarged and reprinted (my copy is, I see, the 29th edition, 1728).

Another example.

I find a reference in Mme. de Sevigné's Letters to a "Histoire des Croisades," which she is reading.

It is, of course, Maimbourg's popular work. But supposing the allusion not explained in the notes (as might be the case if the Letters were a less well known and well edited book), it is to be found in the catalogue appended to her dear friend, Mme. La Fayette's Histoire de Madame Henriette d'Angleterre, Michel Charles le Cène, Amsldm. 8vo., 1720.

It is true this is 40 years later than the reference, but a popular history sells for longer than that period even in our own days.

Letters to the Editor

GRATIS ANNOUNCEMENTS

SIR,—We notice in the P.C. of February 20th your comment upon our letter re our new edition of Huelsen's "The Roman Forum." We beg to say that the leading continental trade papers, viz.:—Börsenblatt, Giornale della Libreria, and Bibliographie de la France do publish lists of new books, in which, for the sake of bibliographical completeness, titles of books are entered free of any charge. Likewise they draw the attention of their readers to important publications, if they think this to be in their interest. Therefore we did not think we were doing anything unusual in asking you to insert the title of Huelsen's book in your list of "Books of the Week," the less so, as we read in the note preceding your list the following words: "The Editor will be glad to have full particulars of new books which may have been omitted from this list to insert in it, and also in our Annual Volume of the English Catalogue of Books."

We think this will be sufficient to explain our mistake, and induce you to correct the impression you have given of us to your readers in your number of the 20th inst.

We trust that you will publish this letter.

LOESCHER & CO.

Rome, February 24th.

P.S.—We wish to know your terms for advertisement. It would save time and money, both to you and to publishers, not to say misunderstandings, if these terms were printed on the top of each number of the P.C.

[There are some publishers who send us only free announcements, the unusual thing in Messrs. Loescher & Co.'s case was the request for insertion, if free of charge. We shall not fail to adopt Messrs. Loescher's suggestion as to inserting a scale of charges for advertisements—in answer to their request and pour encourager les autres.—ED.]

How to Make Lawns and Cricket and Tennis Grounds

AMERICAN visitors to England have often gone into raptures over the beauty of a good English lawn—by English we mean anywhere in the United Kingdom. At the price of 1d. the Agricultural and Horticultural Association of London publish a well illustrated brochure, entitled, "Lawns," by W. J. Stevens, F.R.H.S.

How to make a lawn; how to repair one; how to keep it in a condition of velvety perfection, are the subjects dealt with in this readable little handbook by a practical expert. The booklet is No. 19 of the popular One and All series, edited by Edward Owen Greening, F.R.H.S., a series now nearly reaching an issue of a million copies annually.

The present number is as interesting as its predecessors partly on account of the clear details and directions given, partly by reason of the numerous illustrations on every page, and last, but not least, because of an article by the famous "Tom Hearne, of Lord's," who contributes an essay on "Cricket and Tennis Grounds," which gives welcome hints derived from special experience.

The Editor of Cassell's New Magazine

WE have pleasure in giving a portrait of Mr. Newman Flower, the Editor of Messrs. Cassell's forthcoming publication The New Magazine. TALES WITHIN TALES

By Sir ARTHUR N. WOLLASTON, K.C.I.E.

In this series the great store-houses of Oriental romance will be opened for the first time to the public. Tales from the Sanscrit, from the Chinese, from every language of the East possessing a great literature will appear in due course. From these vivid narratives of old world romance it will be possible for the reader to glean much information concerning the lives and manners and customs of vanished races, and the greatness of Empires that have passed away. Mr. Claud Field, in "Tales of the Caliphs," gives us the genuine romance of history, authentic anecdotes of Caliphs of Baghdad and Cordova, and marvellous adventures of Haroun-al-Raschid concerning which even "The Arabian Nights" is silent. Sir Arthur Wollaston, in "Tales Within Tales," has retold in simple yet picturesque English the delightful animal stories of Pilpai. Others are to follow from the pens of Mr. Stanley Lane Poole, Dr. S. L. Barnett, Mr. Lionel Giles, etc.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Angus, Robertson & Co., Ltd., Sydney (Australian Book Company, London).—"Songs of a Sunlit Land," by Colonel Kenneth Mackay, C.B. Among the growing number of notable authors who have helped to create a genuine Australian literature, is the writer whose recent contributions to Colonial poetry now lie before us. Colonel Mackay possesses a marvellous gift for portraying Australian life and scenery, which is shown in the musical and sonorous poems, entitled "The Song that Men should Sing," "In the Darkness of the Mine," and "The Australian Bush," especially. We commend the book to all sympathetic readers in the homeland.

From Messrs. George Allen & Sons.—"Daphne in Fitzroy Street," by E. Nesbit. The story of Daphne's adventures with Doris; and of love, art, and a Bohemian life in London. Somebody said recently that if you scratch the veneer off the Bohemian life you find none more tasteless and fruitless. Doubtless that was the view of an old female Bohemian, if such exists.

NEW BOOKS to be published in the Spring of 1909 by . . Mr. ANDREW MELROSE.

A Notable Book.

The M.P. for Russia.

Reminiscences and Correspondence of Madame Olga Novikoff.

Edited by W. T. STEAD.

2 Vols. Medium 8vo, cloth, with over 60 Portraits. Price 32s. net.

In the eighties Madame Novikoff was known among a distinguished circle of statesmen, men of letters, and others, as an extraordinarily fascinating woman who had maintained a brilliant salon at Claridge's Hotel. It was also known that she was engaged in a political propaganda which had for its object the bringing together of England and Russia in an understanding which would enable the two countries to unite in freeing the Balkan States from the yoke of the Turk. In these volumes is disclosed the part that Madame Novikoff played in the Anglo-Russian understanding which is to-day an accomplished fact.

Heinrich Heine, Poems and Ballads.

A New Translation by R. H. LEVY.

Crown 8vo, gilt top, 5s. net.

Many admirers of Heine look upon translations of his poems as an outrage, but this new translation, by one who has devoted many years to the task, is published in the hope that even fastidious critics may find it a not unworthy attempt to give a faithful translation of this most delicate of poets and yet to conserve the grace of the original.

A Striking Book on American Institutions and Americans.

Americans: A Criticism and an Appreciation.

By ALEXANDER FRANCIS.

A large portion of this book appeared in 1907 as letters to the Times from a special correspondent. In their periodical form they attracted a great deal of attention by their dignified literary style, their sanity, and their singularly balanced judgment. The author was for many years one of the most influential Englishmen in St. Petersburg.

NOVELS AT 6s.

The 250 Guineas Prize Novel.

The Faith of His Fathers.

By A. E. JACOMB.

This fine and powerful study of tragedy following upon rigid adherence to a narrow creed was selected by Mr. Andrew Lang, Mr. W. L. Courtney, and Mr. Clement K. Shorter, as the winner of the prize in Mr. Melrose's First Novel Competition of last year.

The Pilgrim's March.

By H. H. BASHFORD.

ANDREW MELROSE, 3, York St., Covent Garden, London, W.C.

The very charming Daphne of this story and her little sister seem to have found Bohemian life in London very jolly. The heroine is the kind of woman men most like, or at least that most men like, and, guarded only by her beauty and innocence, she does things which do credit to her womanly heart, but would stiffen Mrs. Grundy if she heard of them. A well-written healthy book with the right sort of passion; but novel writers ought to abandon the discovery of artists of transcendent merit, we have had so many lately —in fiction.

From Messrs. J. Baker & Son, Clifton (Simpkin Marshall & Co., Ltd., London).—"Flower and Grass Calendars for Children," by Agnes Fry. The writer's primary object is that "the children, having learnt the verses for the time of year, might find the flowers named on a ramble in their own neighbourhoods with their teacher." It is also suggested the Calendar might be used in other ways.

From The Cambridge University Press.—The Syndics of the Cambridge University Press are issuing a series of reading books for the upper and middle forms of secondary schools. The books are printed in a bold, clear type and strongly bound in cloth boards. Among the first six volumes the "Tales of a Grandfather," by Sir Walter Scott, is to be found. This is a useful series for introducing the study of English literature into the schools.

From the Same.—A new volume in the "Cambridge County Geographies" series, "Sussex," by George F. Bosworth, F.R.G.S. It is, needless to say, quite a model of what such a book should be, and also contains coloured, physical, and geological maps.

From Messrs. William Cate, Ltd.—"Picturesque Donegal." This book is a very complete guide to Donegal. The author, Mr. Shrubsole, says in the introduction that an attempt to make known the attractions of Donegal has been attended with the greatest success. This was a foregone conclusion, he adds, as it only required proper facilities for reaching and exploring the several districts; these districts being now accessible it is safe to say that with this book as a guide it is possible to tour in Donegal and see all that is to be seen with the least trouble and expense, and from the numerous photographs, not to mention the maps with which the book is illustrated, we should imagine that a very delightful holiday could be spent there with fishing rod or golf club.

From The Catholic Truth Society.—"A Spiritual Calendar." Thoughts for every day in the year compiled by the Right Rev. A. Lauzoni from the works and letters of Antonio Rosmini, the founder of the Institute of Charity.

From the Same.—"The Making of Molly." A story suitable for young people of Roman Catholic faith. It begins in a Convent, and ends with a marriage between a young devoté and a man who "abjures" the heresies of Anglicanism.

From Messrs. Chatto & Windus.—"The Charm of Paris: an Anthology," compiled by Alfred H. Hyatt. We have nothing but praise for Mr. Hyatt's selection. He seems indeed to be familiar with all the best things written about the gay French capital, both in prose and verse. The selections are grouped under different headings, and all those from foreign pens have been translated, so that the book is in English from cover to cover. Those who know Mr. Hyatt's earlier anthologies upon the charms of London, Edinburgh and Venice, will not fail to add his "Paris" to their shelves.

From Messrs. A. Constable & Co.—"Early Christianity," by S. B. Black, M.A. This is one of the series "Religions: Ancient and Modern," of which Messrs. Constable have already issued a number of volumes. It is, of course, written from the point of view of the student of comparative religion, with no bias either one way or the other. In a small compass it gives a masterly summing up of the results of Biblical criticism in regard to the history of Christianity from its foundation down to the time of Origen, and it is a text-book likely to take first rank among scholars. The bibliography appended is admirable, both in regard to arrangement and scope.

From the Same.—"Herbert Spencer," by W. H. Hudson. One of the Series "Philosophies Ancient and Modern," which is the name of a new series of primers issued in handy shilling volumes by Messrs. Constable. The writing in each case is confined to an expert authority, Mr. Hudson's "Introduction to Spencer's Philosophy," for instance, being well known. The aim of his book is almost entirely expository, an attempt, in short, to give a simple outline of the cardinal ideas and more important bearings of the "Synthetic Philosophy." It is a model of what may be achieved by a master hand within a small space.

From Mr. C. W. Daniel.—"The Message of Psychic Science to the World," by Mary Everest Boole. Mrs. Boole has for many years been known as an original and independent thinker, whose conclusions command an enthusiastic, if limited following. Darwinism, Spiritualism, Phrenology, Mesmerism, Mental Hygiene, Thought Transference and Homœopathy, each contribute to her practical philosophy, and though much of her book seems rather old-fashioned in these go-ahead days, there is no little wisdom and sense in her chapters.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—"Songs of Love and Praise for Home Singing," edited by Annie Matheson. The catholic taste exhibited by the compiler of this delightful little book of sacred song, especially arranged by her for "those who are garlanded with the freshness, and sweetness, and vigour of life's unfolding," deserves a cordial word of recognition. The anthology comprises some of the best hymns that have evoked the admiration and love of numberless devout souls, young and old. A special word of commendation is due to Mr. Charles Robinson for his charming and artistic designs.

From the Same.—The new volume in the Temple Molière series issued by Messrs. Dent & Co. is "Dom Garcia de Navarre or le Prince Jaloux." The play was first performed in 1661. Mr. Frederic Spenser contributes a Glossary and Preface, both of which will be helpful to students.

From Mr. Hy. J. Drane.—"Sabbioneta, a Drama in Three Acts," by L. C. Falbe. The author of this historic drama, relating to the love intrigue of Diana de Cardona (wife of Vespasian Gonzagues, Duke of Sabbioneta), has evidently given some attention to the dramas of Thomas Kyd, for it is composed in that skilled Elizabethan author's vein of tragic writing. The play is really an effective one for public representation, both in respect of plot and characterisation.

From the Same.—"The Trail of the Jesuit," by Clunie Maxton, is a lurid picture of a young Scotch peasant, who is perverted to the Roman Church and develops into an accomplished schemer. He masquerades as an English clergyman, and sticks at no villainy to serve the ends of the Order of Jesus. The book has more animus than art. The proof reading leaves much to be desired: witness such eccentricities as "Simillibus simillibi curanti."

From the Same.—"Only an Orphan," a story by Miss Annie Kennedy.

From the Same—"Hearthrug Comedies," by D. ——. A collection of pleasant little plays, so named from the fact that their first performance took place "on a good-sized rug spread at the door of a greenhouse." The two first plays require no scenery beyond ordinary drawing-room furniture, and all have the advantage of being "easy to manage" from the amateur's point of view. There is a delightful Duologue for Children, which the Schoolroom Powers that Be might take note of with advantage.

From the Same.—"Grafton Chimes: or When I was a Boy," by W. Maurice Adams. This retrospective poem is written in the narrative form of verse, made familiar by the poet, George Crabbe. A sympathetic chord is struck betwixt author and reader by the natural and informal sequence of the story Mr. Adams has so deftly unfolded, frequently interwoven with humour and pathos of village life.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—"The Scientific Feeding of Animals," by Professor O. Kellner. Authorised translation by William Goodwin. A consideration of the scientific foundations upon which the principles of animal nutrition rest, which the agriculturist will find exceedingly valuable. In Part I. are to be found the principles upon which the theory of feeding is based, and in Part II. a descriptive account of the different feeding-stuffs; whilst Part III. is devoted to the conditions which should be observed in the feeding of various domestic animals, oxen, sheep, pigs, horses, &c. Dr. Goodwin's translation deserves high praise.

From Messrs. Arnold Fairbairns & Co. Ltd.—"The Story of German Song," by W. Elwin Oliphant. Contains some gems of sacred song from works dealing with German hymnology; accompanied by brief notices of their composers. Among them will be found excerpts from Martin Luther and his friends; also Martin Rinckart, Paul Gerhardt (the Pastor Poet), Herman Francke (the Pietist), Gerhard Tersteegen (the Revivalist), Count Zingendorf (the Moravian preacher), and many others. The volume contains good portraits of some of these hymn composers.

From Mr. T. N. Foulis.—"The Legend of the Flowers." Translated from the Italian of Paolo Mantegozza by Mr. J. Alexander Kennedy. With a frontispiece by Walter Crane. The author is a distinguished scholar well-known in the world of science and literature, occupying the important post of Professor of Medicine at the University of Pavia. His legends of "How the Orange Blossom Came," "The Making of the Heather," "The Origin of the Myrtle," "How the Rose was Born," &c., are exquisitely fashioned myths, translated by Mr. Kennedy in a highly satisfactory manner.

From Messrs. Gowans & Gray, Ltd.—"Lyric Masterpieces by Living Authors." Selected by Adam L. Gowans, M.A. An anthology confined to the verse of contemporary writers for sixpence is a hitherto unknown phenomenon. Some of the best examples of Yeats, William Watson, Arthur Symons, Thomas Hardy and Robert Bridges are included in the charming little book.

From Messrs. Greening & Co.—"The Sin of the Duchess," by Houghton Townley. This is the most amazing bit of melodrama we have come across for a long time. The American Duchess in the first chapter lays

CANADA

The Land of Opportunity

Thousands of sturdy British emigrants go to the Dominion annually and settle there. To-day there is a large population in Canada interested in British books and periodicals and affording a splendid market for British publishers.

The only feasible way to preserve the interest of these people, in face of the competition of American publishers, is to have Canadian booksellers and newsagents show British books and periodicals on their counters and in their windows constantly and press the sale of them.

The best method of urging Canadian booksellers and newsagents to stock and sell British publications is to make use of the trade organ to which they subscribe regularly.

Information as to the Canadian Market will be gladly supplied by her English Duke dead at her feet with a blow from the heavy handle of her riding whip; this in the presence of her lover and other people, and the amount of crime which proceeds from that fatal blow is simply bewildering. Those who like sensational experiences cleverly described will like this book.

From The Gresham Publishing Co.—"The Standard Cyclopedia of Modern Agriculture and Rural Economy." Vol. 3, Bro-Coc. Edited by Professor R. Patrick Wright. The high standard set by the first two volumes of Professor Wright's most admirable work is well maintained in the third volume also. As usual, the articles are freely supplied with figures, illustrations, plans, &c., and several of the full-page pictures are beautifully coloured. Mr. William Stevenson, B.Sc., has an excellent article on Buildings, Mr. Archibald M'Neilage writes on the "Clydesdale Horse, and Dr. J. Augustus Voelcker contributes a sound essay on Agricultural Chemistry. We have not space even to mention by name the scores of thorough and painstaking articles the volume contains; suffice it to say, every department is thoroughly well provided for, and information on any subject is made easy of reference.

From the Same. — "Science in Modern Life."—Divisional Vol. II. contains articles by experts on the following subjects:—Geology, Chemistry and Physics, each article, in addition, being illustrated with excellent maps, diagrams and pictures. Tertiary Climate, The Great Ice Age, Modern Geography, Development of the Human Race are dealt with under Geology, and the other subjects—Physics and Chemistry—are even more comprehensively dealt with. The whole work promises to be most useful and accurate.

From The Grove Park Press, 270, Walworth Road, S.E.—Vol. 15 of "Visitation of England and Wales," edited by Fredk. Arthur Crisp. This is another of the admirably produced volumes of Pedigrees, edited by Mr. Crisp and privately printed at his Press as above. Nothing could well be better than the manner in which both text and illustrations are presented. The mystery of the work is to find the plan on which it is arranged—it does not seem to be done in any order of name, place, or time. Each volume has a very full Index.

From Messrs. Harper & Brothers.—"Diana of the Swamp," by Roy N. Clarke. Diana is a tall, powerful-looking negress over middle age, with large glittering eyes, who tells fortunes; and the story opens with the visit to her in her swamp of three pleasant school-girl friends. Two of the girls are told that there are no obstacles in their paths, and that they will each "marry de one she lubs and lib long life," but Stella, the more "spirituelle-looking" of the three, is not to be let off so easily. Diana sees great trouble coming, which will crush her heart, but she will "come safe and happy out of it." The "trouble" very quickly develops in the shape of a strikingly handsome Spanish creole, with a face marred by a sinister expression and a snaky glitter in his eyes. This Mr. Ellgriso causes all the trouble. He kills with a whip and with poison in the most matter-of-fact way, and nearly succeeds in getting an innocent man hung for his own misdeeds. It is all extremely crude, and might have been written by any one of the three school girls—Eva, Stella, or Marie, or by Stella's sweetheart Harold de Courcy. The best thing in the book is the snaky villain's name—Ellgriso.

From Messrs. Wm. R. Jenkins & Co., New York.—"Pensées et Réflexions de La Bruyère et Autres Auteurs Français" compilées et Arrangées par Cornelia Sisson Crowther. This choice pocket volume of short "elegant extracts" from the writings of classical and modern French poets, essayists, and romancers, will be found a helpful guide for English and American students in furthering their studies of the French language and literature.

From The Kingsgate Press and Messrs. J. Clarke & Co.—"Poems of Mackenzie Bell." We are already indebted to this Scottish poet for a "biographical and critical study" of the late gifted poetess, Christina G. Rossetti, and now he puts forward in one volume, his own muse's garland, embracing poems of nature, religion, travel, lyrics, and sonnets. Mr. Bell displays in a striking degree, in his varied themes, the genuine art of spontaneous and rhythmical melody; whilst in the episodical poem, "The Battle's Pause" so dramatically conceived, he appeals to the deepest sympathies of our common, human nature.

From Mr. W. Walker (28, Paternoster Row, London).—"The Gospel in the Church," by the Rev. Walker Gwynne, edited by the Right Rev. W. C. Doane, D.D., Bishop of Albany. This is a new series for Sunday Schools on The Church Catechism, and is divided into the following parts: The Senior Grade for Teachers and Older Scholars; The Middle Grade in 2 parts; The Junior in 2 parts; The Primary also in 2 parts. Each grade is illustrated with 53 half-tone pictures, besides diagrams and tables, and each part of the Middle, Primary, and Junior Grades contains 26 Lessons. The Bishop of London speaks very highly of this Series, and in an Introduction to the Senior Grade, says: "Everything is stated in a clear and succinct manner, and no difficulties are shirked." There appears to be room for manuals of this kind, and the illustrations and general appearance certainly leave nothing to be desired.

THE SHORT CUT TO INDIA

The Record of a Journey along the Route of the Baghdad Railway.

By DAVID FRASER.

Author of "A Modern Campaign" and "The Marches of Hindustan."

With 83 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

¶ This is a book of adventurous Travel. It is also a book of political importance. Mr. Fraser made the journey from Constantinople to Bombay over the route of the projected and partly completed Baghdad Railway; and when travelling in the deserts of Mesopotamia on Christmas Day, 1907, was attacked by an Arab robber and received dangerous wounds from which he did not recover for six months. Besides the record of these and similar adventures, his book contains an exhaustive study of many interesting aspects of the Baghdad Railway Question, and includes in an Appendix the hitherto unpublished papers relating to the famous Convention of 1903.

THE NEW JUNE

By HENRY NEWBOLT.

Author of "Admirals All," the Old Country," &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

¶ The term "Historical Romance" is apt in these days to suggest dull research in dingy libraries. "The New June," by the author of "Admirals All," is a Romance of History as sparkling and sweet as is its title. In this story of the times of Richard II. we are in a live world of gallant knights and winning ladies, in camp and tournay, among blowing woods and murmuring streams, Mr. Newbolt claims that he is on the side of humanity against archæology. The past, as he says, is for him no box of puppets, but a world of living men and women, with secrets for him to puzzle out. Given certain facts about them, it is here his business to put together the life to which they belonged—given a bone or two, to reconstruct the moving, breathing organism. Readers of "The New June" will find how admirably Mr. Newbolt has fulfilled his claim.

LIGHT AND SHADE

"The book abounds in passages that will delight lovers of children; and lovers of dogs always know that Mr. Lehmann is second to no contemporary in his sympathy with four-footed friends. . . . This fresh and wholesome little volume."—DAILY CHRONICLE.

The Literary Man's Blotting Paper

Charles Lamb to Barton

"I began on another sheet of " paper, and just as I had penned the second " line of stanza two, an ugly blot fell, to " illustrate my counsel. I am sadly given
" to blot, and "modern" blotting-paper gives no
" redress; it only smears, and makes it
" worse. The only remedy is scratching out,
" which gives it a clerkish look. The most " innocent blots are made with red ink
" and are rather ornamental. Marry, they " are not always to be distinguished from
" the effusions of a cut finger."

Publishers' Circular

Reply of the American Pirate Mosher to the Editor of the "P.C."

IN accordance with his request, we herewith give the reply of Mr. Mosher to our article about him (in P.C. January 23rd), in the same prominent position:—

SIR,—Your article, which is as nearly a libel as you could safely make it, has been read by me, and I will reply, trusting to that sense of fair play—which I am told is one of the dearest delusions an Englishman hugs to heart—for its appearance in as conspicuous type and position as the original attack appearing in your issue of January 23rd. What the Glasgow Herald adds may be safely dismissed; as the late lamented Gus Williams once sang:

"I can fight with the lion that roars in my path,
But I can't bear a cur [and Scotch at that] at my heels!"

The fact is I have made books that have been proved equal in quality to anything of the best made in your tight little island. That is indeed grievous.

My legal right to make use of the things I have chosen to reprint—flotsam and jetsam on the unchartered sea of literary misadventure—is beyond dispute. If it was not I should hear from your disgruntled correspondents in a very different manner. Likewise the question of morals is a far-fetched proposition. It is a standard for example that is not observed by your own houses, which freely reprint expired copyright texts in England and the Colonies.

They could not—these authors—(save in some instances where I have arranged and paid for revised and additional matter) convey any rights that would be in force as against any one else who chose to reprint in America. In other words, there was no copyright that any court in this country would recognise for an instant.

Again, I ask what moral right is involved by my reprinting matter that was either left in a first and only edition intentionally or remained so because there was no demand for a second edition?

My action has, indeed, forced the hands of those who would have arbitrarily locked up—("because it's mine I'll do as I please")—such work as Mr. Lang's "Aucassin and Nicolete" and his "Ballads and Lyrics of Old France." Even Mr. Lang did not say he would have refused permission, but his grouch was that I didn't ask till after the deed was done—and so, be damned to me!

But out of mere spitefulness he did allow a young college friend of mine to reprint his "Aucassin," and hoped, no doubt, my sails would be blown away, to employ seafaring terminology, which he would doubtless agree belonged of right to one who had defiantly hoisted the Jolly Roger! The College Magazine is no more; my sales wax and do not wane! And quite recently the "Ballads and Lyrics of Old France" have appeared in London without material change just as I had given them. Mr. Lang said they were poor stuff! Why did he reprint them?

What just cause then have these authors against me? I have made them known to an extent that in my opinion—and I am not alone in it—has resulted in the "de luxe" Pater selling over here, whereas had it not been for my pioneer work it might have seen as great a frost as the "de looks" Arnold!

What about any others who go on gaily with English authors in whom copyright has not expired? There are a few of us who issue Browning, Rossetti, Dickens, Thackeray et als. Are we paying tribute or asking permission of the British owners of copyright? Most decidedly not.

What moral difference is there, say, between me and your own reprinters, who, as soon as a copyright lapses, put on the market editions that deceive and probably are intended to deceive the bookbuyer as to being complete editions? I do not deceive, and whenever there is a chance for bibliographical notes I spare no pains to give them. Legally your reprinters cannot do as I do, for fear of the law—not of your standard of morals. This is the gist of my offence: what I republish is public property in this country, in yours 'tis private. Narrowed down, the difference would appear to be that I am an American and you are an Englishman!

Does it seem egoistic to say that there is something of my own in these editions which make The Mosher Books saleable? What do you suppose it is? Not wholly "swelled head," as you would imply. Craftsmanship is not too long a word, I hope, for me to use as well as practise!

That I have had the wit—call it just that—to devise new formats and to discover literary work worth while using, which the original publisher never cared or thought possible to use a second time—that is my contribution, and one that cannot be overlooked or forgiven, as you seem to believe. The discoverer is to some extent—outside of the English pale—the owner; treasure trove, I am told, even with yourselves brings some reward to the finder!

I see that I must define my position plainly. Well, here it is: without originality in bookcraft these "Gems and Jewels"—words you quote, but not used by me—would have remained hidden as in a napkin to the American public, and of as little value to the world at large. It is quite possible Messrs. Lang and Hewlett preferred to have it so. [Any sale of my editions in England is an incident in my business. You need not be told the American market is immeasurably larger than your own.]

It is equally certain that I decided to overrule or rather forestall any dog-in-the-manger attitude by taking what I had a perfect legal right, and as I believe (viewed from the standpoint of the good of the many, especially where it does no harm to the few) a perfect moral right to use.

Before howling at American enterprise —and there are others beside myself— would it not be well to pluck the mote out of your own eye? Remember the words of the preacher: Be not righteous over much!

That is all, as I see the situation, and I shall therefore continue to carry on my work despite your unfair insinuations. There is room for such work, and I believe I have an exceptional flair in recognising what is of worth even when buried by neglect, or relegated to a single limited edition just because "it is mine own and I'll do what I please with it."

May I conclude with a passage from a poet we presumably both admire:

"That a lie which is half a truth is ever the blackest of lies;
That a lie which is all a lie may be met and fought with outright;
But a lie which is part a truth is a harder matter to fight."

I think the statement you have allowed yourself to make is precisely what this citation from Tennyson says it is, and with this reflection, I beg to remain,—Yours very truly,

THOMAS B. MOSHER.

Portland, Maine (U.S.A.),
February 18th, 1909.

It will be seen that Mr. Mosher does not attempt to answer our chief point against him, viz., the sale and offer for sale of British copyright works in his illegal editions in the United Kingdom and the Colonies. He has advertised in our literary weeklies and in American papers circulating here that he will send any work in his catalogue to any address in the world. With reference to his statements as regarding Mr. Andrew Lang, Mr. Lang writes:—

"I think I have always granted my permission to publish in America books of mine not protected there by copyright when I have been asked for my consent. I am unaware that Mr. Mosher ever did ask, and I believe that he has tried, no doubt successfully, to sell his pirated copies of my books in this country!

"(Signed) A. LANG."

If Mr. Mosher had confined his sales to non-British markets we should have had nothing to say about him. But when, while robbing our authors, he talks about "the Soul of Man" and the "ultimate completeness of the Divine plan," in connection with his piratical publishing, it is not surprising to find our authors protesting. He says our article was as "nearly a libel" as we could "safely make it." If he will tell us what we can add to make it quite a libel we will with pleasure complete it.

Copyright

International and National

IT is very satisfactory that Mr. Frederick Macmillan will represent the interests of publishers, and indirectly of authors also, on the Committee which has been appointed by the President of the Board of Trade to consider the suggestions made at the Berlin International Copyright Conference last year. The object of the Committee will be to see if it can recommend alterations in our copyright laws to bring them into line with those of France, Germany, &c. The most important consideration will be the duration of copyright, and we should like to see this extended.

Notes and Announcements

"IT does not appear," says the Edinburgh Evening Dispatch, "whether the slackness in the book trade is to be attributed to the general lack of prosperity in the country, in which case one might reasonably blame the Government, or to causes peculiar to the publishing business itself. Mr. Arthur Spurgeon, in the Book Monthly, suggests whether it is in the interests of the trade as a whole that the cheap editions should follow so quickly upon the heels of the other editions. The question is one which publishers and authors will answer with strict regard to their own self-interest. The public, while sympathising with their point of view, will feel that the cheap editions cannot come too early or too often." Yes; but the publishers have to remember that the public will not buy six-shilling editions if they find they can get sixpenny ones by waiting a short time. It is amusing to find how soon an American expression takes hold over here. In the interview referred to we find Mr. Spurgeon saying: "When we turn to the decline of the six-shilling novel, I admit that we are up against a very different proposition."

An Interesting Announcement

We hope to commence next week in the P.C. a series of portraits of the Town and Country Representatives of the Publishers.

The first large edition of Mr. Henry Newbolt's novel, "The New June," just published by Messrs. William Blackwood & Sons, has been sold out.

Messrs. James Clarke & Co., of 13 and 14, Fleet Street, will publish shortly, at 3s. 6d. net, "The Right Hon. H. H. Asquith, M.P.: A Biography and Appreciation," by Frank Elias. The book will contain a good deal of matter which has not hitherto appeared in print, together with a photogravure portrait and other illustrations. In it will also be included a short chapter on Mr. Asquith's work for Disestablishment, which should be of interest during the present year.

Messrs. Cassell are publishing, on March 25th, a sixpenny edition of Mrs. Henry Dudeney's fascinating novel, "Gossips Green," published a few years ago at 6s.

The relations of author and publisher have frequently been the subject of satire in prose and in poetry; but that these relations can be, and often have been, most happy is illustrated in an article contributed by Mr. John Murray to the April number of Science Progress, wherein he describes the very pleasant business and personal relationship which existed between his father, the third John Murray, and Charles Darwin, whose momentous works, of course, were published in Albemarle Street.

The late editor of The Studio, Mr. Gleeson White, some years ago edited an important collection of great paintings for Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack. This was published under the name of "The Master Painters of Britain," and attracted a great deal of attention, as forming a representative view of art in Britain and giving a very fine series of reproductions of typical paintings of all periods. The publishers now announce that they are going to issue this book in a single volume at a tenth of its original price. This sumptuous quarto, now to be had for a few shillings, will be greedily purchased by art lovers.

In sending us the information that "Wax" is the title of a novel by G. S. Layard, which they are to publish on April 2nd, Messrs. George Allen & Sons say:—"In 'Wax' the heroine is placed in the unprecedented predicament of having to spend a night alone at Madame Tussaud's, the victim of tragi-comical adventures for which it would be hard to find a parallel." We remember a story in which the hero got locked up in the British Museum, and, on innocently knocking the ashes out of his pipe on an Egyptian coffin, found he had rapped the spirits of the mummies up. The publishers of "Wax" also consider that a scene between the heroine of "Wax" and an admirer "is probably without its counterpart in fiction." Evidently Messrs. Allen expect "Wax" to reverse the usual order and make a big impression.

A new book of humour, "Ikona Camp," by Colin FitzGerald, will be issued next week (Harpers).

The Walter Scott Publishing Co., Ltd., have published a third edition of the 3d. brochure, "A Godless Socialism; or Robert Blatchford and The Clarion at Bay," by Frank G. Jannaway.

Mr. Murray has in the press at the present moment the concluding portion of Mr. C. R. L. Fletcher's "Introductory History of England," the first two volumes of which have proved so popular with teachers. It was originally intended to complete the work in one volume, but the vastness of the period, and the detailed summaries which are necessary to deal adequately with the new territories added to the Empire during the time, have made a single volume out of the question. It will therefore be published in two parts, which will appear simultaneously about the beginning of April.

In his "Modern Travel Series" Mr. Unwin will publish, on March 15th, a cheap edition of Mr. Albert B. Lloyd's "Uganda to Khartoum: Life and Adventure on the Upper Nile." Mr. Lloyd is a noteworthy example of the sporting missionary.

Mr. Heinemann announces for publication, on March 10th, a new volume entitled "We Two in West Africa," by Decima Moore, the well-known actress, and her husband, Major F. G. Guggisberg. This book deals in an exceptionally interesting way with the British West African Colony. It is not in any way a dry-as-dust collection of political and statistical facts, but a cheery and attractive account of the people, the country and the incidents of daily life, containing at the same time much useful and remarkable information about land surveying and the gold mining industry.

Fresh air is appreciated by most people nowadays, and indeed, where can a holiday be better spent than out of doors? Mr. Claude Kempson, who is publishing with Mr. Arnold "The Greenfinch Cruise," shows himself to be a real lover of an open-air life, and he recommends a fortnight spent on a single-handed sailing boat as a cure for all ills.

Messrs. Alston Rivers inform us that the novel "Salome and the Head," by E. Nesbit, of which the publication was postponed, will be published on March 22nd. It is degrading enough to see a woman play with a wax head on the stage, but in this story the heroine toys on the stage with the head of a real man—or the real head of a man—which has been cut off his dead body after being dug out of a grave. Could not Messrs. Alston Rivers have postponed that horrible chapter to the Greek Kalends? Publishers ought not to be the midwives of monstrous abortions.

Mr. John Lane has commenced a pleasant little monthly "Journal of Books at the Bodley Head," entitled The Bodleian.

Mr. J. W. Arrowsmith will, on March 17th, publish a new novel entitled "Dromina," by John Ayscough. "Marotz," by the same author, created a great impression on its publication a year ago. The new book is a longer and more important work than "Marotz."

Copyright Law

Committee Appointed to Consider Revision

THE President of the Board of Trade has appointed a Committee to examine the various points in which the revised International Copyright Convention, signed at Berlin on November 13th, 1908, is not in accordance with the law of the United Kingdom, and to consider whether the law should be altered so as to enable His Majesty's Government to give effect to the revised Convention. The Committee is composed as follows:—

Lord Gorell (chairman); Sir L. Alma-Tadema, O.M.; Mr. G. R. Askwith, K.C.; Mr. H. Granville Barker, Mr. C. W. Bowerman, M.P., Mr. H. R. Clayton, Mr. H. J. C. Cust, Mr. E. Cutler, K.C., Mr. Anthony Hope Hawkins, Mr. W. Joynson-Hicks, M.P., Mr. W. Algernon Law, C.B., Mr. Frederick Macmillan, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., Professor Walter Raleigh, Mr. Thomas Edward Scrutton, K.C., Mr. Edmund Trevor L. Williams.

The President has also appointed Mr. T. W. Phillips to be secretary to the Committee.

The Committee, it will be seen, is a very representative one, the interests concerned being capable of classification as follows:—

Law: Lord Gorell, Mr. Scrutton, Mr. E. Cutler, Mr. Joynson-Hicks. Art: Sir L. Alma-Tadema. Literature: Professor Raleigh, Mr. Anthony Hawkins, Mr. Macmillan. The Drama: Mr. Granville Barker. Journalism: Mr. T. P. O'Connor, Mr. H. J. C. Cust.

The presence of Mr. Bowerman, who is a Labour member, should be of practical utility, as he is a compositor. Mr. Algernon Law is a member of the Foreign Office staff. Mr. Askwith is the head of the Statistical Department of the Board of Trade.

The late Mr. R. D. Blackmore

IN the January number of The Woman at Home, an article written by Mr. Baring Gould appeared entitled "Exmoor and Richard Blackmore." Being in a position, from over thirty years of intimate friendship with Mr. Blackmore, to know that many of the statements were incorrect and misleading, on behalf of Mr. Blackmore's representatives we asked the Editor of The Woman at Home to be good enough to allow the letter, which we print below, to appear. The Editor says, while expressing regret that "anything should have been published in The Woman at Home which would in any way give pain to Mr. Blackmore's friends, correspondence is never published in the magazine, and it would be difficult to make an exception in this case."

One would have thought that the only "difficulty" in such a case would have been in making reparation sufficiently quickly and completely instead of refusing it entirely. However, in justice to the author of "Lorna Doone," we do what we can to put the matter right by publishing Mr. Leite's letter:—

"The Editor, The Woman at Home.

"Re 'EXMOOR AND RICHARD BLACKMORE.'

"DEAR SIR,—I take very strong objection to the article entitled as above by the Rev. S. Baring Gould, in your January issue. Where Mr. Baring Gould has collected his information with regard to Mr. Blackmore I have not the slightest idea, and it is a pity that such a well-known writer should put his name to an article upon a subject of which he appears to know very little. This being the case, I feel compelled in justice to the late Richard Doddridge Blackmore to correct several current errors with reference to that author's life and work.

"(1) After leaving Blundell's School at Tiverton, the author's visits to Devon were very few and far between, and such visits were of very short duration.

"(2) After Mr. Blackmore reached the age of 40 years, 'Lorna Doone' was written entirely at Teddington from tales heard in the author's boyhood, and his literary works may be followed day by day in his diaries, which are in the possession of Miss Eva Pinto Leite, his sole executrix.

"(3) Richard Doddridge Blackmore was never deaf, the reason for his seldom attending social functions being explained by the simple fact that he was of an exceedingly retiring nature, as all who knew him can testify, and on account of his gardening during the day and his literary work at night.

"(4) Mr. Baring Gould's statement that Mr. Blackmore married a lady of Portuguese extraction is entirely incorrect, the real facts being that the author and the undersigned—a member of a well-known Portuguese family—married Irish sisters of the name of Maguire.

"(5) Mr. Baring Gould betrays sad ignorance of Mr. Blackmore's character in implying that he was boastful of family connections. As a matter of fact one never heard him make any reference to his family or writings; therefore, all that Mr. Baring Gould writes of him and the de Wichehalse, &c., would be utterly against his nature.

"(6) Mr. Blackmore was never in straitened circumstances.

"Possibly Mr. Baring Gould has taken some extracts from the 'Dictionary of National Biography,' which is full of inaccuracies. The following will explain, once and for all, why no biography has been written of Mr. Blackmore, extracted from a letter written by him to Miss Pinto Leite and attached to his will

"'It is so much the fashion now to write the lives of people of very small importance or interest that someone may even want to do that of me. Forbid it, and refuse to have anything to do with such a trumpery attempt to make money.'

"It will, therefore, be seen that any articles published have been written without the consent or authority of his representatives.—Yours faithfully,

"ALFREDO PINTO LEITE."

Glasgow Book Trade Notes

By "MUNGO."

IT is usual to refer to tales dealing with the lights and shadows of Scottish country life as the "Kailyaird School," the more recent interpreter of which are J. M. Barrie and the late "Ian Maclaren." Stories are woven round the minister, the elder, and the serving-man or maid, and those characters are shown up in a light more or less pleasant.

The books of this type had an enormous vogue, and this probably accounts for the immediate success which met that piece of grim, unrelieved realism by George Douglas Brown, "The House with the Green Shutters."

Readers of "The Bonnie Brier Bush" and "Auld Licht Idylls" had been treated to the pleasant side of the picture when their attention was suddenly turned to the other side, and Brown's story achieved a success as phenomenal as the others, and the demand for the latest edition of this remarkable book in Nelson's Sevenpenny Library shows that interest in it has not waned.

Apart from those modern types, which after all may be ephemeral, there are one or two books which have not been shouted about, but which have taken their place as classics in Scottish literature. There are Dr. John Brown's immortal studies "Rab and His Friends," "Our Dogs," and "Pet Marjorie," and there is "Mansie Waugh—Tailor of Dalkeith," by D. M. Moir, whose pen name of "Delta" was familiar to readers of Blackwood some fifty years ago; also "Annals of the Parish," by John Galt, a work of great charm.

Within the past few months reprints of two other Scottish tales have made their appearance. These are "Johnny Gibb of Gushetuenk," by William Alexander, and "The Life of a Scottish Probationer," by Dr James Brown. Though Thomas Davidson, the Scottish Probationer, was a son of English parents settled in the South of Scotland, his story is essentially Scottish, and is, in the words of the author of the "Horæ Subseuvæ," "a worthy record of a man of rare genius—dead ere his prime." Born in 1838, the son of a shepherd, as a boy he showed himself to be "a lad o' pairts," and we follow him from the little Jedburghshire school on to Edinburgh University, and into the United Presbyterian Church, where he was licensed as a preacher, but his premature death in 1870 cut short a promising career.

Scotland has produced from the ranks of her peasantry many distinguished men, and Davidson's story is typical of this phase of Scottish life. "Johnny Gibbs" is perhaps the greatest book of all in the class that came to be known as the Kailyaird School. It is an Aberdeenshire story, and the dialect presents some difficulties to the West Countryman, but its broad humanity, humour and pathos give it a distinctive place in the eyes of the discerning.

Some of Sir George Reid's best work as an illustrator appears in this book.

MENTION THE "P.C."—Our readers who order books &c., they see mentioned or advertised in THE PUBLISHERS CIRCULAR will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

The New Magazine

Interview with Mr. A. E. Bartley, Publishing Manager to Messrs. Cassell & Co.

By P.C. SPECIAL

IN view of the great interest being taken by the trade in Messrs. Cassell's latest venture, The New Magazine, I called upon Mr. A. E. Bartley, the genial manager of Messrs. Cassell's Publishing Department, to glean a few more facts about the publication.

Mr. Bartley, whose portrait will be found below, joined the staff of Messrs. Cassell (as readers of the P.C. will remember) in August last year, after many years' service with Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co. and The Pall Mall Press. He has made a considerable increase in the circulation of the various publications coming under his care, and has already worked up a wonderful demand for issue No. 1 of The New Magazine.

MR. A. E. BARTLEY
Manager of Publishing Dept. of Messrs. Cassell & Co.

I asked Mr. Bartley to tell me in round figures the number already ordered by the trade of The New Magazine.

"Roughly, about 200,000," he said, "a number which has far exceeded my most sanguine expectations, and in all my experience I have never known a first issue of a magazine to reach such figures. They constitute a record."

"How do you account for this gratifying demand?"

"Partly on account of the wonderful value we are giving, and partly because the terms we offer are so satisfactory to the trade. They are the same as for the Storyteller, which has a large circulation and which is very well supported by the trade."

"How is The New Magazine being taken up in the Colonies and on the Continent?" I asked Mr. Bartley.

"A special large edition has been set aside for Colonial circulation, and is already practically exhausted. The demand is world-wide—India, South Africa, Canada, Australia, New Zealand; in fact, almost every British Possession is taking large numbers. On the Continent it is going well, in Paris especially the demand being most satisfactory."

"What are you doing to bring the magazine before the notice of the public?"

"In addition to extensive press advertising we have prepared sixteen-sheet posters, bearing a reproduction of the cover, to be placed upon all the principal hoardings in London and the larger towns. It will also be advertised in many other ways and in an original manner upon the day of publication—the 19th."

"I believe you are issuing advertising matter especially for the use of booksellers and newsagents?"

"Yes, we have a double crown bill, also bearing a reproduction of the cover, show cards, drop cards and counter tickets, all these being designed to attract the attention of customers and to help the sales by the booksellers and newsagents."

"I notice you are making a great feature of the cover in your advertising."

"Yes, it is the predominant note. We consider the cover design striking and attractive, and want to make it as familiar to the public as possible."

Mr. Bartley showed me an early copy of The New Magazine, and I can without hesitation say it is a wonderful production, and one which can be taken up by the trade with a certainty of leading to quick and sound business.

EXTRACTS FROM THE SEVENTY-SECOND ANNUAL REPORT

The following extracts are from the Report of the Board of Directors for the year 1908 :—

Your Directors have the pleasure of presenting the Seventy-second Annual Report, which indicates steady progress.

A considerable difference between the years 1907 and 1908 is shown under Receipts, Donations, &c., as it includes a windfall of £400. But for this the accounts under this head would show a considerable shortage, and thus compare very unfavourably with the preceding year. The amount expended in assistance to necessitous members has increased by £50, and as the expenditure under this head in 1907 was £120 in excess of that for 1906, your Directors desire to draw special attention to the fact that in two years this particular item has increased by £170. This ascending scale must be watched with the utmost care, for it is quite out of proportion to the increase in income, always bearing in mind that the increase in membership brings with it additional responsibilities. While they are on this subject your Directors are glad to be able to report that three of those in receipt of allowances from the Institution have succeeded in obtaining Old Age Pensions, and that it has been decided by the Board to leave them in the full enjoyment of both sources of income without any deduction. It is pleasant to be able to record that the Booksellers' Provident Retreat has continued its admirable custom of making a grant to the Institution, the amount of which is this year £150. Your Directors desire to express their grateful thanks for this most welcome gift.

During the year 1908 we have lost eight members by death, including Mr. James Westell, the well-known second-hand bookseller, of New Oxford Street. It is also with regret that your Directors record the loss by death of two of the Honorary Vice-Presidents, both of them warm friends of the Institution, Sir John Evans, K.C.B., LL.D., F.R.S., and Mr. C. E. Layton, of the well-known firm of Messrs. C. & E. Layton. Twenty-eight new members have joined, so that the net increase in membership is twenty. In the preceding year, however, forty-seven new members were enrolled, and your Directors would urge upon all the importance of enlisting recruits.

Through the kindness of Messrs. C. J. Longman, W. E. Green, J. Whitaker & Sons, Ltd., J. Collins Francis, and R. Bentley, the usual Christmas gift was made to all those in receipt of assistance.

The honorary medical officers have continued to give their skilful services freely to members in need of them, and the Board desires to thank those gentlemen for their generosity in so doing.

Mr. Sydney Gedge is still our guide, philosopher and friend in all affairs requiring legal knowledge for their conduct, and the Board is very grateful for his long and valuable services as Honorary Secretary.

Your Directors have again much pleasure in acknowledging the valued services of the Secretary, Mr. George Larner.

The Institution is particularly indebted to the Editors of The Athenæum, The Publishers' Circular, The Bookseller and The Newsagent and Booksellers' Review for the notices and reports of the work of the Institution which have appeared in their columns.

The item of twenty-five guineas from "Printer's Pie" has again been received (but by an accident the payment was not made before the close of our financial year), and the Board is grateful for this very welcome addition to their funds and to Mr. Hugh Spottiswoode for his kindness in obtaining it.

To the Worshipful Company of Stationers we are once more indebted for permission to hold our Annual Meeting in their Hall, and while expressing our appreciation of their kindness in the matter, would also record our pleasure at this close association of the ancient company of Stationers with the scarcely less ancient body of Booksellers.

novel, "The Socialist," which Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co. are publishing shortly, is one that comes at an opportune moment and is likely to attract enormous attention. In the course of the story Mr. Thorne has worked out an experiment in Socialism which may be read with interest or instruction alike.

Early Booksellers' Catalogues

BY TEMPLAR.

II.

LE CÈNE'S list of books would be a substantial "find" to the Catalogo-phile, besides supplying an interesting parallel in Contemporary French Literature to that of Richard Sare.

It runs to 25 pp. (tailing off, as is so often the case, into small type) and comprises in about 400 items a very respectable and representative library of the reading and the original Literature of the "Grand Age." It may be noted that though emanating from Amsterdam it is exclusively addressed to readers of French and Latin, and contains not a single Dutch book.

The descriptions are all very brief, but though none of the works are dated, the majority are easily identifiable. The arrangement which is by way of being alphabetical—admits—like that of so many early indices—plenty of unexpected variety.

L'état de servitude on la Misère des domestiques à Troyes, 8vo. wrapper, D.A. cir. 1700, is a curious anonymous poem on a subject of perennial interest.

A whole literature, of manners, civilisation, luxury, &c., piles of handbooks on music, manners, amusements, serieux et comiques, Critique des Loteries, Civilité Francoise.

Confiturier Francois.

Cuisinier Francois—Hand book to the Duties of Gentlemen, of Ladies and well-born persons, of domestic servants and their employers. This is by Fleury, author of the Ecclesiastical History.

Curiosités de Paris, de Versailles, de Marly, de Vincennes, de St. Cloud (the palaces on which the Grand Monarque had been spending millions in perverse attempts, as St. Simon says, to force nature). L'Art de rèussir à la Cour. It may be noted that Barbier in his famous Dictionary of Anonymous Literature records about 100 "Arts" of various kinds (largely unremunerative or improper) which flourished at the time.

Under the same heading one may include various elaborate works on gardening (the taste for which is, of course, beginning to flourish vigorously. John Evelyn was importing French fashions from Paris, just as later on, in the pre-Revolutionary Anglo-Mania a converse process set in). We have the Jardinier Fleuriste and Historiographe, ou Culture universelle des Fleurs, Arbres and Arbustes, and the famous Quintinia (1620–1688) his Instructions pour les Jardiniers Fruitiers (2 vols. 4to., 1696).

Curious and Obscure. [Perhaps the reader will only find a light exercise for his ingenuity in the puzzles propounded.]

"Jean danse mieux que Pierre."

(The full title continues in what seems a fatuous strain, "Pierre danse mieux que Jean. Ils dansent bien tous les deux." (1719.) Cannot recall ever seeing this (? Religious satire.)

Le Nez, ouvrage galant and curieux.

Germon [Ought one to know all about this? It is not the rare work on "Diplomatics," by Barthelemy Germon, but a treatise of occult Philosophy]. Icon Philosophiæ occultæ, in 12.

Les Yeuz, ouvrage curieux at Galant.

This work apparently deserved its description. Les Yeux, and Le Nez above mentioned, formed with another similar opuscule, a series of three "ouvrages curieux galants et badins, composés pour le divertissement d'une certaine dame de qualité. Avec les poesies diverses du Sieur du Commun, &c., Amsterdam, 1716–17 and 20."

Described as "par J. P. N. du C. dit V"—an expression to be resolved after the fashion of the time into the name of "Estienne Roger," the publisher of the book.

Barbier 19542.

Under Curious we might include "Cotterie (la) des antifaçonniers," 12. This might plough a good many; but see Barbier Ouvr. Anon. "Prem relation, on l'on traite de l'etablissement de la cotterie," Paris, 1716. By L. Bordelon (1653–1730) a forgotten Littérateur of Bourges. Also Coups imprevus de l'amour and du hazard.

The "Turkish Spy" is already at work in the Courts of Europe. (He began in 1684, see Hallam Hist. Lit., and has now reached 6 volumes.)

Here we have the famous operas of Jean Baptiste Lulli (1633–87) themselves the musical quintessence of all that is stately and grandiose, Cadmus, Perseus, and Phæthon (with the score) and a "Parallel" of Italian and French music. L'art de vivre content (quite a harmless art this) is a religious manual translated from the English (according to Mr. B.) of Chappell, Bishop of Cork, who died about 1650. But the tract, and the more frivolous Art de vivre cent ans are to be carefully distinguished from the Art de jetter les bombes by Blondel, author also of treatises on Architecture and Fortification. L'Art de réussir à la Cour would fall into the less serious class.

Under Aventures we are not surprised to find the New Don Quixote. Well known works meet the eye at every turn of the small pages. La Fontaine's Fables, his Cupid and Psyche, and the pleasing little works of the Père Bouhours, his Maniere de bien penser sur les ouvrages d'esprit (a work admired by Gibbon): my copy is the 2nd edit., 1681.

In an age of unreal grandeur and courtly magnificence, there is a natural preponderance of the Literature of Fiction, Feeling, and Prejudice, we may say, as contrasted with that of fact. Of the few publications on Economic matters, very few are here to be found, though this is the age when serious attention is first being given to the subject. Michel Levassor (author of a well-known History of Louis XIII.) contributes Letters on the Capitation Tax levied on gentlemen; while Le parfait négociant by Savary Desbruslons (1622–1690. He formed the Crown Domains under Fouquet, and his two sons wrote a Dictionary of Commerce), and one or two "Thresors" of the art of Book-keeping seem to mark the beginning of this kind of enterprise, which Colbert never succeeded in rendering popular among the French nation. We have noted the absence of Bayle's Tracts. In truth there is rather a dearth of that literature directly bearing on the time which usually found a publisher in Holland.

The discours sur le Commerce. Traduit de l'Anglois. One may presume to be Josiah Child's famous discourse of trade.

We have indeed certain Reasons for the King's accepting the treaties of partition (1698–1700), some translations of Lord Halifax, and a pamphlet on the Recall of the Jesuits. Telemaque, that covert and courtly satire, runs to a "new edition" (Amsterdam or London) and Claude's Complaint of the oppressed Protestants ventures to show its head by the side of accounts of the Royal Campaigns in the Low Countries (Siege of Namur) and Dundas's Life of General Monk, and the Histoire de Mme. Henriette de Angleterre, to which the catalogue is appended.

The Panama Canal

WHEN France was obliged to admit her inability to make that furrow across the Isthmus of Panama, and the United States put her shoulder to the plough in 1902, her experts pledged their credit that the entire cost would be under £30,000,000. Now they are ready to pawn their shirts that it will not exceed £70,000,000 (sterling pounds, not dollars).

Why are the Americans cheerfully spending this great treasure? Probably because they hope it will enable them to transfer their battle fleet from their Atlantic to their Pacific Coast, or vice versâ, in a fraction of the time it now requires.

This subject of the Panama Canal, so important to the whole world, is dealt with by Dr. Vaughan Cornish in his book, "The Panama Canal and its Makers," which Mr. Fisher Unwin will publish on Monday.

Dr. Cornish, who is a well-known geographer, visited the canal works in 1907 and 1908, and was afforded special opportunities for study by the American Government. The book presents, in moderate compass, an impartial review of the salient features of the great undertaking, its engineering problems and labour difficulties; and deals with the lessons it teaches as to the future of the white race in the tropics. A careful statement of the reduction of steaming distances at sea which will result from the opening of the canal shows exactly what the effect of the canal will be, which is the more necessary in view of the erroneous notions that are common upon this all-important point. The book has a map and 63 illustrations from photographs taken by the author.

The Publisher's Association

AT the Annual General Meeting of the Publishers' Association, to be held on Thursday, April 1st at 3.30, at the Stationers' Hall, the Council for the year and the President, Vice-President, Hon. Treasurer and other officers will be elected. We have arranged to give a full report, as usual.

The Green Room Book

Or Who's Who in the Dramatic World

IN his introduction to "The Green Room Book," Mr. Beerbohm Tree says that the only other testimonial to the worth of any work he remembers giving was to the effect that "it adds a new terror to life, and makes death a long-felt want;" consequently the Editor and publishers, Messrs. T. Sealey Clark & Co., Ltd., of "The Green Room Book" ought to feel proud that Mr. Tree says he can recommend the 4th issue of the "Green Room Book" to "everybody" interested in the affairs of the theatre. The biographies of people connected with the drama, authors, actors, and managers, now reach close on 2,000, including as a novelty 250 biographies of foreigners. Another novelty is the ancient history of 2,000 dead and gone actors, and the dimensions of the London stages.

All the old "features" have been retained—except the faces of the pretty actresses and the handsome actors! If that is not a blunder, we are no judges of human nature. We could have better spared a—well almost any other feature.

It is not necessary to give a full page to each photograph, five on a page in ovals would be just as good, and we hope next year to see old friends and new faces in this really delightful reflection of the theatrical profession.

Book Auction Records

WE are glad to receive from Messrs. Karslake & Co., Pond Street, Hampstead, Part 1 of Vol. 6 of that invaluable work, "Book Auction Records," edited by Mr. Frank Karslake. It is a priced and annotated Record of London Book Auctions, and this part, dealing with the sales for the last quarter of 1908, contains 3,383 Records. It is attractively and carefully produced, with some interesting illustrations and notes, and a special article on Hull Authors, Booksellers Printers and Stationers. We have Mr. Karslake's work in constant use, and can only confirm our good opinion of it—often expressed in the P.C.

"I'm on a Good Thing"

THE attractive poster advertising Nash's Magazine is now to be seen on all the principal hoardings, &c. Booksellers and newsagents should see that they have sufficient copies on order to meet every possible demand. It is the enterprising man who makes hay whilst the sun shines, and Nash's Magazine is without doubt "a Good Thing."

The Author on Mr. Mosher

"WE are glad to see that THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR has been exposing the methods of Thomas B. Mosher, bookseller, of Portland, Maine. Mr. Mosher has for many years been engaged in systematic piracy. His business is to appropriate any work of literary merit, reprint it and sell it, not only without scruple, but, as his catalogues bear witness, with impudent effrontery. Many members of the Society of Authors have suffered from his depredations. As THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR remarks, 'Booksellers and private book-buyers should note that this Portland pirate is offering and selling scores of editions which it is illegal to buy, sell, or advertise for sale in any part of the British Empire.'

"We hope the Publishers' Association will do all in their power to prevent the circulation of the wares of Mr. Mosher in this country."

Letters to the Editor

BOOKING FEE QUESTION

DEAR SIR,—Replying to Mr. Firmin's letter in your issue of February 27th, the position is that the carriers—as a consequence of charging 2d. on each parcel a publisher desires to send to a bookseller—are enabled to give the bookseller a low contract, the 2d. being really a portion of the charge for carriage. The publisher is entitled to charge the bookseller back with what is an out-of-pocket expense incurred by the bookseller's order. The remedy is for booksellers to revise their contracts with their carriers, and agree on a figure which will make the charge for booking unnecessary.—Yours faithfully,

MODERATE.

SMITH'S CATALOGUE RAISONNÉ

SIR,—In your Notes and Announcements of February 27th you speak of Smith's Catalogue Raisonné as being "meritorious but obsolete."

We venture to think that this criticism is somewhat harsh, and that Smith's Catalogue still holds its own in the estimation of experts. A recent review in The Morning Post of our facsimile reprint of the original described the Catalogue as "indispensable to both student and connoisseur," and this opinion is certainly endorsed by the Fine Arts trade generally.

Yours &c.,
SANDS & CO.

Edinburgh.

A NOTE FROM WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND

DEAR SIR,—On receiving my copy of the P.C. for December 12th I notice that in the letter from me, printed on that date, I omitted to mention five leading New Zealand journals in the list of those to which I recommended the sending of review copies. Please add to the list the following—Auckland Star, Auckland; Dunedin Star, Dunedin; Lyttelton Times, Christchurch; Evening Post, Wellington; Dominion, Wellington. These, like the four previously named, are all journals of a large circulation, and each regularly devotes considerable space to well written reviews and up-to-date book gossip. Kindly find space for this correction. I hope the English publishers will do something in the way of making it clear to the Colonial buyer why English net books must be slightly loaded here to give the vendor a fair return. This could easily be done by adopting the plan suggested in my previous letter.

Yours faithfully,
NEW ZEALANDER.

Wellington.
January 29th.

"T. TURNER" AGAIN

DEAR SIR,—I read with great interest the letters from Mr. George T. Juckes and Mr. P. Head regarding Mr. T. Turner ("The Expert Bookfinder," as he styles himself) in your issue of February 13th, 1909.

Evidently his business is not confined to England, because at the end of last year he almost succeeded in making me one of his victims. I advertised in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR for books illustrated by Alken, also coloured sporting prints by Alken and others. On a card headed, "Turner: the Expert Bookfinder, 42, Paddock Street, Ardwick, Manchester," he offered me a book illustrated by Alken for £4, and also a collection of sporting prints, all "clean and perfect, and nicely framed, 50 for £25," which would be "shipped at once on receipt of foreign money order to value." I told him to send both by return with invoice and I would remit immediately on receipt of goods, at the same time giving several prominent booksellers and an English bank as references. He sent me several cards saying that his business was for cash with order only, to which I made no reply, and he finally stopped the correspondence.—Very sincerely,

ARTHUR SWANN.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Burns & Oates we receive the ever interesting "Catholic Who's Who and Year Book" for 1909. This record, ably edited by Sir Francis Burnand, shows how much that is best in our English life of to-day is to be found in the Catholic world; for we find in it devotion intense and practical patriotism, wit, wisdom, talent, rank, literary and dramatic art, music, painting and hard professional and commercial usefulness, united in faith and worthy of a place in this book chiefly on that ground: "a diversity of gifts but one spirit." There are over 3,000 brief biographies. We also have the Catholic Directory, a bulky and well arranged volume, invaluable to the clergy and of great use to many in other ranks of life.

From The Cambridge University Press.—"The Care of Natural Monuments," by H. Conwantz. With special reference to Great Britain and Germany. Herr Conwentz is the Prussian State Commissioner for the care of natural monuments, and therefore speaks with authority. The preservation of Nature's masterpieces must appeal to all of us and the more enthusiastic will do well to possess themselves of this book. The ten illustrations are of great assistance.

From the Same.—"The Rhetoric of Aristotle." A translation, by Sir Richard Claverhouse Jebb. Edited with an introduction and supplementary notes by John Edwin Sandys, Litt.D. This translation of "The Rhetoric" was left in manuscript by the late Sir Richard Jebb. It was executed when Mr. Jebb, as an assistant tutor at Trinity College, lectured on the work to students preparing for the Classical Tripos thirty-five years ago. His edition of the "Characters of Theophrastus" came in 1870, and of the "Attic Orators" in 1876. Thus, as Dr. Sandys remarks, the present translation was made between those two dates. Twelve pages were set up in type, but never corrected, the increasing pressure of other duties having evidently prevented the translator from going on with the work. When the lectures on the Rhetoric were delivered, some who heard them were struck with the vigour and clearness of the English rendering. These qualities, too rare in works of the kind, strike us afresh on reading the volume. Jebb was, in fact, one of the few classical scholars of his time who wrote English with real distinction. The translation has been thoroughly revised by Dr. Sandys, who also furnishes a luminous introduction, with some supplementary notes. Altogether this edition of a famous work is one that will appeal alike to the scholar and the general reader.

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack.—Two more of those excellent and inexpensive art books from the "Masterpieces in Colour" Series, of which T. Leman Hare is the editor. These volumes deal with Rubens and Whistler, and the colour work is in each case admirable.

From Mr. Werner Laurie.—"Roads to Riches," by Thornton Hall. It is, we suppose, impossible to write on the romantic aspects of the pursuit of riches without raising wealth on to a pinnacle of worship of which it is unworthy. Mr. Hall would seem to admire money for money's sake; certainly, a perusal of his most readable collection of histories and stories of wealthy men tends to make the reader admire the least admirable aspect of money. "The Drama of the Card-Table," "How to become a Millionaire," "The Rise and Riches of the Rothschilds," and "In Search of Golden Treasure" are the titles of some of his chapters.

From Mr. John Long.—"The World, the Flesh, and the Casino," by Gertrude Warden. This is a novel much above the average, well-written, and well worth reading. The plot is well managed; it is based to a considerable extent on a device which is getting rather worn—that of the loss of memory of the hero, who is badly injured in an attempt to commit suicide — but its final development is quite unexpected and satisfactory. The characters are life-like and well contrasted, and the interest is well sustained to the end.

From the Same.—"Noblesse Oblige," by M. E. Francis (Mrs. Francis Blundell). This is a slight, bright, and charming sketch by a lady who has given us some of the best and most acceptable stories of the last twenty years. London, and for a brief time Paris at the time of the Revolution, are the scenes of "Noblesse Oblige"—scenes and a period quite in contrast with those of Mrs. Blundell's other works; the principal characters are members of the French aristocracy sheltering in London. The lovely Yvonne is well worthy a place among the many women whose lives and loves have been made so interesting to us by "M. E. Francis."

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—"Lord Haliburton: a Memoir of his Public Service," by J. B. Atlay. An able summary of Lord Haliburton's career as a Civil servant. His influence at the War Office under successive Governments is fully dealt with, and his relations with Ministers forms an important part of the book. We could wish that less had been devoted to the various controversies in the columns of The Times, in which Lord Haliburton played so considerable and masterly a part, and the complete omission of the personal note makes the memoir somewhat dry reading; but within its predetermined limits the book is satisfactory enough.

From the Same.—"Araminta," by J. C. Snaith. The author of this extremely amusing book does what would have seemed almost impossible, he makes this reader warmly interested in a girl who can hardly say "Bo" to a goose. Araminta has a soul like a meat pudding with a very thick paste to it. She comes from Exmoor to London, "six feet high in her stockings, with a pair of the bluest eyes, and a mane of the yellowest hair that ever came out of Devon," and eyes are blue in Devon, thank God! When the next most interesting character in the book, her aunt, the wiry acid old Countess of Crewkerne, or anybody asks her name, she says with a drawl: "My name-is Araminta, but they call me 'Goose' because I am rather a Si-lay," and gives a wise little shake to her mane-like daffodils; the other most recent girl from Devonshire in fiction, the lovely gipsy of "The Heart of a Gipsy," had hair like dead beech leaves. But Araminta conquers London society, and if you think that does not say much for London society, you had better wait until you have read the book. She is very beautiful, very good, and not such a fool as at first she appears to be by a very long way.

From the Same.—"The Origin of the Sense of Beauty," by Felix Clay. Mr. Clay's "suggestion upon the source and development of the æsthetic feelings" is a cleverly-written book, but whether it will appeal to the reader or no depends upon whether the author's conclusions are found to be convincing. Many, and we rank ourselves among the number, cannot accept the hypotheses that the sense of beauty as we know it is solely traceable to the instinctive preferences originally necessary for survival. Natural selection we refuse to believe to be the basis of that emotion evoked in man by the beautiful, for this explanation does not seem to us to cover the whole range of human experience in this matter. Mr. Clay's book is, as we have said, a clever piece of work, well-arranged, showing wide research and great industry. There is, however, one bad slip that should be corrected in a future edition. Frederick Myers, the Psychologist, is spoken of on page 246 as Mr. L. H. Myers. Mr. L. H. Myers is, as a matter of fact, the son of Frederick Myers, and has recently edited an abridged edition of "Human Personality" his father's magnum opus.

From the Same.—"The Meaning of Money," by Hartley Withers. In the financial world, the word "money" does not mean pounds, shillings and pence, but the loan of money. The complicated, yet ingenious, methods by means of which the trade of the world is facilitated are explained by Mr. Withers with unfailing clearness and vivacity, though he "risks platitude and iteration to achieve it." He meets all the difficulties experenced by the average reader in understanding that part of a newspaper City article which deals with the money market, and there are no confusing columns of statistics and complicated diagrams, which often do more to confuse the mind than enlighten it. Separate chapters are devoted to such important subjects as coined cash, paper cash, the bill of exchange, the manufacture of money, and the foreign Exchanges.

From Messrs Ward, Lock & Co., Ltd.—"The Sin of Ali on Dering," by L. G. Moberly. A story of wonderful power. Miss Gertrude Moberly has the gift of leading her readers into positions of the utmost difficulty, which to clear away, even with all the licence granted to a novelist, seems impossible. Yet when the book is finished one can but feel that nothing she has written has been an outrage on fiction, and one is left admiring her undoubted cleverness.

From the Same.—"Money," by Marie Connor Leighton. A book from the pen of this well-known novelist is sure to receive a warm welcome from the large number of her readers, while those who are unacquainted with her work should make a point of reading this one. Commencing in Australia, it depicts the finding of gold, and the murderous passions which the sight of it arouses in the starving men, mad with the gold fever; then it describes in vivid pictures the folly and danger of gambling, the ruin and degradation to which they bring a man; the power of a woman's love to save and reclaim even the weakest fool, dishonoured and ruined; the shadow of oppression which rests eternally on the man who believes he has taken the life of another; the fury of a young and beautiful girl's vengeance on the man who has driven her father to suicide; the scheming and finally the suicide of a blind girl who fails to gain the love of the man who has won her heart. These are a few impressions, which may give the intending reader some idea of the contents of this very interesting and well-written work, which extends to almost four hundred pages.

From Messrs. R. & T. Washbourne, Ltd.—Father Zulueta's "Letters on Christian Doctrine," Second Series, Part 2, dealing with the Sacraments of Extreme Unction, Holy Orders and Holy Matrimony. All who have read Fr. Zulueta's former letters will be eager to procure these, which explain all that is difficult so lucidly and so simply. These letters are not controversial in tone and they will prove of great interest to Catholics, especially perhaps to converts. We may say that Part 1 of this series, dealing with the remaining Sacraments of the Church, is perhaps more interesting reading.

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co., Ltd., London.—"The Devil and the Crusader," by Alice and Claude Askew. The two principal characters are Lady Betty "of the world worldy—the true product of her times," and Oliver Vane, of ample means, a good man who becomes the Crusader, staying with his uncle, Sir William Sefton, of Martin Court, near Maidenhead. The two were cousins, engaged to be married. There is another marked character, Captain Richard Hastings, a poor man to whom Lady Betty said, "Dickie, why should you mind my marrying Oliver? but once the honeymoon is over, I shall be able to leave my dear husband, he'll be brooding over the sins of the world in the country, I shall come dancing back to town, and we'll be happy, Dick, and see plenty of each other—heaps. And if Oliver asks silly questions he must be told clever lies." And to quote once more from our lady and gentleman authors, Lady Betty is made to say to Captain Hastings, "I was to marry a rich man, and you were to be my very good friend after marriage. Clever hostesses would pair us together at luncheons and dinners, invite us for week-ends together—always together, and as long as we did nothing outrageously foolish, society would help us in a languid, lazy, well-bred fashion, to sin." Such is the tenour of this up-to-date novel, and those who would care to learn how each of these three characters can suffer almost a complete reaction, resembling the complete chemical changes chemists rejoice in, should read "The Devil and the Crusader."

Reviews.—An article of special interest to English readers appears in the February number of La Grande Revue (Messrs. Berger et Chausse, Paris) from the pen of M. Robert Dell, its subject being the Pan-Anglican Congress. We have not seen a more able summing up of its object and results, or a more deeply interesting review of the various movements within the Anglican Church during the last decade. M. Dell pays a high tribute to the broadness of the Anglican Church and to the deep spirituality which is perhaps its distinguishing mark among religious systems. The February number of The English Review is chiefly remarkable for Mr. Wells' brilliant story "Tono-Bungay," which is appearing serially, and for the third portion of Mr. Conrad's "Some Reminiscences." Both these contributions show these writers at their best. Mr. Yeats contributes three not altogether convincing pieces of verse, and there is an interesting letter from the pen of an eye-witness concerning the recent earthquake at Messina. The February number of The Socialist Review is particularly strong in literary matter of real merit, whatever readers may think of the opinions held forth. The Nationalisation of Railways, Irish Educational matters, The Unemployed, and the Relation of the Churches to Socialism are all ably dealt with. There can be no doubt that the I. L. P. keep their publication up to a high standard.

Paper Famines

THE question of the supply of paper is of vital importance to the book trade, and it is not without concern that we hear from time to time rumours of paper famines and of measures taken to prevent them. Japanese paper plays an important part in the Christian as well as in the non-Christian world, and has done so for centuries. Montaigne, more than three hundred years ago, was struck by the Chinese book "made of a certain stuff much more tender and transparent than the paper we use."

The latest news in the paper-making world is that the Japanese have decided that something must be done towards conserving their remaining supplies of raw material for paper making.

In Japan paper is used for almost everything, from the silver-figured partitions of the Buddhist temple to the rude hut walls of the labourer; from the silk-like vestments of the priest, down to the rainproof protection of the traveller. In fact, the ingenuity of the Japanese is only matched by the varieties of uses to which paper may be adapted.

The United States Consul at Kobe (Mr. John H. Snodgrass) reports that the work of the American Government towards determining the amount of paper materials used and the source of future supply is being followed by the Japanese. The imminence of the danger is apparent from the fact that the Japanese authorities have requested the paper mills department of the Mitsu Bishi Kaisha to take over some 7,500 acres of the bamboo forests of Formosa.

The bamboo has been the raw material from which the Japanese have recently made the larger portion of their paper products, so it is expected that by introducing improved methods of forest cultivation and harvesting this tract of woods it will furnish yearly ten million bamboos adapted for conversion into paper pulp. Mr. Snodgrass thinks that the development of this new source of raw material, so characteristic of Japanese enterprise, will avert the threatening shortage in her supply of paper material.

A few years ago we gave an extract from a book published early in the 19th century describing how some paper-maker in North Britain had experimented with fresh-water plants as material from which to make paper, and with a certain amount of success. Doubtless many other paper-makers have looked at the under-water vegetable world with questioning eyes—long tough stems from the size of thread in flannel weed, up to ship's cables in the giant kelp of the ocean—and millions of tons of it. Why should it not be used? The answer is probably that although so strong and tough when in water, exposure to the air very soon reduces a great stack of water weed, fresh or salt, to a little dirty heap; it melts away to nearly nothing. And it does not look as though any plants which grow under water will help us to make paper like those which grow on land, or partly in water, like papyrus and many reeds.

For thousands of years the people of this country lived on wheat and other grain grown here—up to and after Nelson and Wellington's time, in fact. What a fine thing it would be if the demands of the paper makers made it worth while to grow wheat and other grain for the straw! It would indirectly make bread cheaper and make us less dependent on other lands.

The New American Copyright Law

Important Effect on British Works

MR. ARTHUR SPURGEON, general manager of Messrs. Cassell & Co., kindly sends us the following important communication:—

"I enclose you an extract from a letter which I have received this morning (March 17th) from the Manager of our New York house. It is more than three years ago since I remember Mr. Heinemann reporting to the Council of the Publishers' Association the steps he had taken, on the occasion of a visit to New York, to bring about the very alteration that has now been carried through."

Here is the note from Mr. Hadley, Manager of Messrs. Cassell's New York house:—

"On the afternoon of the day before President Roosevelt's term expired, a copyright law was rushed through both Houses, and passed. There was some doubt, until to-day, as to whether it had been signed by the President. I learn, however, that it has been signed, but not printed, and on receipt of a copy will forward one to England for filing, as I understand there is a very important provision affecting us, in that the new law contains a clause permitting the deposit of a copy of the English edition of a book at any time within 30 days after publication in England—this copy of the English edition to hold copyright for 30 days after deposit, giving practically 60 days beyond the date of publication in London, in which we have an opportunity to perfect copyright by deposit of an American edition."

It will be seen that Mr. Heinemann's work has borne good fruit after many days.

Notes and Announcements

ON March 24th, 25th, 26th and 27th, Messrs. Sotheby will sell by auction the second portion of the magnificent library of the late Lord Amherst of Hackney.

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. will publish immediately a new novel, entitled "The Three Brothers," by Mr. Eden Phillpotts, a new story of Dartmoor life in character. Also Miss Braddon's new novel, entitled "Our Adversary."

Mr. Nat Gould, the famous sporting novelist, has written his autobiography, and under the title of "The Magic of Sport," Mr. John Long will shortly publish it. The volume will be copiously illustrated, including many portraits of world-famous sportsmen.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. expect to publish Mr. H. W. Lucy's "Sixty Years in the Wilderness" on the first of next month. The chapters of the reminiscences which have appeared with marked success in The Cornhill Magazine are supplemented in the volume by additional matter equal to one-third of the whole; and the author contemplates the publication of a second volume at a later date, if the present volume is regarded with favour, as he has by no means exhausted the material he has accumulated. The book has as frontispiece an excellent portrait of Mr. Lucy from a painting by J. S. Sargent, R.A.

Miss Emma Brooke's new novel "The Story of Hauksgarth Farm" will be published by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. on the 26th of this month. It is a story of the strong and simple emotions of Cambrian fell-folk; of life and character on a moorland farm.

All who know Mr. T. Maskew Miller, of Cape Town, will sympathise with him in the great loss he has sustained by the death of his wife, on February 19th.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton will issue very shortly Mr. Charles Garvice's new novel "Queen Kate,"

"A Vindication of Warren Hastings," by Mr. G. W. Hastings, is announced by Mr. Henry Frowde. The author's object is to prove that "Warren Hastings, the man who made our Indian Empire, and preserved it for the Crown, was wholly innocent of the crimes so often and so grievously laid to his charge." Mr. Hastings brings special qualifications to his task; he relies mainly on State Papers, and we hope he may even at this late day show how baseless was Burke's brutal invective.

Messrs. Skeffington are publishing a new edition of the Bishop of Chichester's "My Confirmation Day," bound in elegant cloth for use at home and in church, and for preservation as a memento.

Mrs. Colquhoun Grant has written the life of Charles the Second's famous mistress, Louise Renée de Kéroualle, whom he created Duchess of Portsmouth, and Mr. John Long will shortly publish the work under the title of "Brittany to Whitehall." The vicissitudes of herself and her sister, the Countess of Pembroke, both of whom have left a long line of descendants in England to the present day, are not without interest, and give us a strange view of the morals of those times. Portraits of this celebrated beauty, of the two kings for whom she intrigued, and of some of the men of the day, add to the interest of the volume.

"L'Émigré," Paul Bourget's recent story, has been translated by Mr. G. B. Ives, and will be published next week by Messrs. Gay & Hancock, Ltd., under the title of "The Weight of the Name." It is a story of the political and social life of the old aristocracy of France to-day.

Patent medicines, and the advertising business generally, are coming to the fore as subject matter for novels, and it is curious to note that Mr. W. Teignmouth Shore, whose new novel "A Soul's Awakening" has just been issued by Mr. John Long, is a prominent figure in the advertising world. It is pleasant to find that he can solve "problems" without dealing in nastiness.

"The Song of Liberty," a romantic drama in three acts by Mary C. Rowsell and H. A. Saintsbury, is in course of preparation for a trial performance during April at a West-End theatre. The rights of this piece in translation were acquired some time since for the Swedish stage. The drama is based on Lamartine's account of the composition of the "Marseillaise" by Rouget de l'Isle, and the recurrent choruses throughout of "The Song" enhance the effect of the romantic and stirring details which take place during the height of the Terror. These choruses, and a violin solo on the same theme will probably be undertaken by "The Edward Mason Choir."

Messrs. Walter Southwood & Co., Ltd., announce for early publication "The Encyclopædia of Poultry." The work, which will be issued in 2 volumes and copiously illustrated, is edited by Mr. J. T. Brown, F.Z.S. ("Chanticleer") Editor of Feathered Life, and the contributors include authorities of note on Poultry.

In his Second-hand Book Catalogue (No. 144) Mr. W. M. Murphy, 79, Renshaw Street, Liverpool, offers eight guaranteed genuine reproductions by the Arundel Society of famous paintings; and in other respects this catalogue is one of the most interesting that we have seen recently.

"The Freshwater Aquarium and Its Inhabitants," by O. Eggeling and F. Ehrenberg, is a new guide for the amateur aquarist, with 100 illustrations. Published by Henry Holt & Co., of New York.

The Antiquarian Book Co., of 12, Brownlow Street, London, offer a copy of the 1637 edition of the Scottish Booke of Common Prayer, &c., black letter, folio, old calf, size 9 by 13 inches, last page gone, otherwise a good copy, for what seems to be the reasonable sum of £6 10s.; and a "good copy" of that very interesting work, Wood's "Athenæ Oxoniensis," 2 vols., 1721, for 12s. 6d. Wood was no bald biographer; he mixed satire and sarcasm with his ink as well as good humour.

Messrs. Jarrold & Sons, who will publish a new book by the "Hungarian Dickens," Maurus Jokai, inform us that "the story is entitled 'The Yellow Rose,' and deals with Hungarian peasant life, the life of the great Plains and of the picturesque herdsmen that inhabit them. The heroine, a beautiful coquette, plays with her suitors with the usual disastrous effects." We hoped for something unusual from Mr. Jokai.

Mr. T. Fisher Unwin will publish on March 22nd, a new edition, entirely reset, of the Rev. E. J. Hardy's "How to be Happy though Married." Like some other famous books, "How to be Happy though Married" went the round of nearly all the publishers in London. Possibly the title may have been a stumbling-block to these firms; to Mr. Fisher Unwin, on the contrary, who accepted the oft-rejected MS., the title proved an attraction. His venture in publishing the book proved an extraordinary success, for the sales in England alone have amounted to more than 80,000. In the United States an authorised American edition was at once taken up by Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons, and the work has been translated into German, French and Italian, and, quite recently, into Norwegian.

"Paul Verlaine: His Life, His Work" is the title of an important illustrated book, which Mr. Werner Laurie will publish in a few days. The author of the book, Mr. E. Lepelletier, was at school with Verlaine, and knew him intimately all his life, and in this volume he has presented a picture of the famous poet, as he really was, and a careful criticism of his works.

Mr. Werner Laurie is about to publish "Early Christian Hymns," by Daniel Joseph Donahoe. The book consists of a selection of some two hundred hymns of the most prominent Latin writers of the early and middle ages, rendered into verse, and attempts to preserve the meaning, rhythm, and beauty of the originals.

Major de Lacoste, a French soldier of distinction, having returned from an adventurous tour in Central Asia, has recorded his experiences in a book entitled "Autour de l'Afghanistan." An English version of this work is to be published immediately by Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd. It will be found to be something more than a book of travel and adventure.

"Mind and Work," by Luther H. Gulick, M.D., tells what mental suggestion will do for you, and contains the essence of the doctrine of mental control over bodily ills from the point of view of a practical working physician. The Mental Effects of a Flat Top Desk, Resolutions, Good and Bad, Thinking that Arrives, and Will Fatigue are the headings to some of the chapters. The book will be published by Messrs. Cassell on March 26th.

We understand that the novel to succeed "Daphne" from the pen of Mrs. Humphry Ward, will have a Canadian background. It will be published by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. serially in the Cornhill Magazine, beginning in the autumn of this year, and subsequently in book form. Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. also hope to publish at no distant date a new edition of Mrs. Ward's novel, "Miss Bretherton," with a preface by the author biographical of the book.

In the first three volumes of "The Analysed Bible" Dr. Campbell Morgan completed his general review of the Bible, and in the two new volumes entitled respectively "The Gospel of St. John" and "The Book of Job," which Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton announce for early publication, he commences a more exhaustive study of the contents and message of each separate book of the Divine Library.

Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd., will publish very shortly a book on "Auction Bridge," by Captain Browning.

A pocket edition of the Complete English Works of Thomas Campion, reprinted from Mr. A. H. Bullen's editio princeps, is announced for immediate publication by Messrs. Sidgwick & Jackson.

The Natural Society of Acclimatisation of France have honoured Mr. W. Percival Westell, F.L.S., by conferring upon him their Bronze Medal and Diploma, in recognition of his Natural History writings.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree has written the Introduction to the fourth issue of the invaluable "Green Room Book, or Who's Who on the Stage," which has just been published by Messrs. T. Sealey Clark & Co.

Messrs. Sullivan Bros., 87, Abbey Street, Dublin, publish a catalogue of all books published by them. It is divided into three sections:—Sect. 1, Educational, Languages and Literature; Sect. 2, Theology, History and Law, Travel, Fiction and Poetry; and Sect. 3, Directories and Official Publications. It is illustrated, and is very complete.

Mr. John Long will shortly publish Mrs. Jessie Ainsworth Davis's new novel, "A Forsaken Garden," which tells the story of a girl who, from respect for her father's prejudices, allows her chances of happiness to slip away from her. The defeat of love leads after some tribulations to a haven in which the consciousness of duty nobly fulfilled brings with it its own consolation. "There are moments of dramatic fire in Mrs. Ainsworth Davis's novel, which is embued with a refined spirit, is charged with strong feeling, and whose atmosphere of religious thought has nothing narrow or dogmatic in it."

"Barry Gordon" is a romance of adventure and love, to be published next week by Messrs. Gay & Hancock, Ltd.

Mr. John Long will shortly publish a new novel by John Cave, entitled "Who Shall Have Her?" Incident following incident in a rapid and strenuous manner, and all of them leading up to a highly dramatic climax, is Mr. Cave's method. "From the first page his story grips the reader with force and irresistible power; his characters are drawn vigorously, but they all of them live. It is a remarkably vivid and enthralling story."

Booksellers' Provident Institution

Annual Meeting

MR. C. J. LONGMAN presided on Tuesday evening, March 16th, at a very successful meeting of members and friends of the Booksellers' Provident Institution. Among those present were:—The Rt. Hon. Sir George Wyatt Truscott (Lord Mayor of London), Lady Mayoress, Messrs. E. Bell, Chas. A. Ashley, H. E. Barton, Wm. Bartram, W. H. Bull, John Clark, John Cooper, John H. Crane, Jas. Foster, C. H. Whitaker (Editor of The Bookseller), and John Murray.

The notice convening the meeting was taken as read, as were also the minutes of the last Annual Meeting and the Report and Balance Sheet.

The President announced the receipt of letters expressing regret at being unable to attend from, amongst others, Mr. Bentley, Mr. Francis (Athenæum) and Mr. Gedge, whom they were very sorry not to have with them. He (the President) then proposed: "That the Report of the Board of Directors of the Booksellers' Provident Institution for the year 1908 be adopted."

THE RT. HON. THE LORD MAYOR, SIR G. TRUSCOTT.
Who gave an address at the Booksellers' Provident Annual Meeting.

"I have no hesitation," he said, "in asking you to adopt our Report. I think it is a record of another thoroughly successful year. The Report, as you know, carries with it the balance-sheet, and as the funds are the sinews of war I think I had better perhaps advert shortly to our balance-sheet first. You will have noticed that the receipts are considerably higher than they were last year; the receipts for the year 1908 being £2,768 against £2,400 in 1907. A little analysis shows that this result is not quite so good as it looks. We had last year a rather unexpected windfall amounting to £400, which is not at all likely to recur, and that has considerably swelled the item of donations. On the other hand, something generally happens every year, and the year before we had a few windfalls also. I hope we may have some this year. The year before last, for instance, we had a theatrical performance which brought in £40. Last year there was none. I hope that this year we may again benefit in that way. Again, in 1908, we had no receipt from "Printers' Pie," whereas the previous year we had £26 5s. This has not been in any way due to our friend Mr. Hugh Spottiswoode forgetting us, or to the failure of "Printers' Pie," but merely to the fact that the grant which he has so kindly made from that excellent publication for several years was not received till January. If this year we should be so fortunate as to get another grant, it may be that we shall have two contributions from "Printers' Pie" instead of none last year. These are the sort of little ups and downs which, of course, we must expect. Nevertheless, the donations from one cause and another in 1908 did reach a very large sum, and I sincerely hope that everyone here will do their best to get in some good donations during the current year. We shall have, I think, hard work to keep up to the level in that respect which we reached last year.

"Looking to the other side of the account, the Expenditure, there is an increase again here. It is not a very great increase over 1907—some £53, and that is due to an increase in the amount granted in relief. Of course, that is the object of our existence, and therefore any increase in that respect must be taken to indicate that the calls upon us have been heavier, and also that we are fulfilling our functions.

"However, the increase last year of £50, which was no very great matter, followed on an increase in the previous year of £120, so that, as the Directors point out in their Report, this is an aspect of our business which requires watching; but at the same time, I can assure you it is watched very carefully. The Finance Committee, and those especially identified with finance, see to it that no wasteful expenditure is incurred, and I think we may regard it as a matter of great pride that we have been able—we have had the means of increasing our expenditure in relief in a year when it was badly needed.

"It is possible that that expenditure may grow further. Of course, it is partly due to the fact that times have been bad. When times are bad naturally unemployment is apt to increase. It is also the fact that within the last few years we have largely increased our number of members. Nevertheless, I do not think that the increase in the expenditure of relief is due to that cause at all, or at any rate to a very slight extent; because the members who have been elected within the last few years have not—except, I think, in very few cases—been candidates for relief. (Hear, hear). In spite of this slight increase in expenditure the net result of the year has been financially that we have increased our assets by about £1,000.

"Of course, we have undertaken fresh liabilities; that is to say, we have increased our number of members. The total number of members elected has been, I think, twenty-eight; but there were eight deaths, and the net increase is twenty. If we regard those two facts—that our membership has increased by twenty in the year and our assets by £1,000, that brings out a net increase per member of £50. Well, that is very nearly the right proportion; that is to say, it very nearly keeps our relation of invested capital and membership at the same point as it was last year.

"If we remember that we have, I think, 634 members on the books—the largest number that we have ever had—(applause)—and we also remember that our assets are some £34,000, that works out at a little over £50, I think, £53 per member, so that the result of the financial year's work has been that we have made very nearly the due provision for the future. I cannot say we have made quite, but it has been very near; and at any rate, it has been much more nearly the case than has been in any year since the membership began to increase so largely. I think, therefore, that from the financial point of view we may consider that things are satisfactory

"I should like to call your attention to one point in the balance-sheet which is a novelty. It is only a matter of account, but I think you may possibly have noticed that the amount in the account of invested capital is £34,053 19s. 1d.; there is an apparent diminution of some £1,100 or £1,200. That is not due to the sale of any of your investments or to any other untoward cause, but simply to this: that hitherto we have taken the investments at a round sum. That is to say, Mr. Brown's legacy was originally £10,000. It bought, when it was received many years ago, £10,347 18s. of India £3 per cents. Well, it was reckoned for many years at the £10,000 which we originally received; but our excellent and vigilant auditors, Messrs. Attree and Kerley, thought that that was not quite the right way to reckon our investments, especially bearing in mind the fact that securities like India £3 per cents., in fact, what are called 'gilt-edged securities' have dropped, and therefore they have this year for the first time been credited in the balance-sheet at the market value on December 31st. That accounts for the apparent loss of I think it is some £1,100 or £1,200.

"Before I go on to another aspect of our work I should like to say that I have been asked to call your attention again to our allied institution the Booksellers' Provident Retreat. As you all know, the Retreat does a most valuable work. The houses there are homes of refuge for old pensioners of the Institution; and it is, I think, one of the most useful parts of our work. The number of members of the Retreat is exceedingly small. I think it is quite possible that many of you think that because you are members of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, that therefore you are members of the Retreat. That is not the case. The two Institutions are so far allied that no one but a member of the Institution is eligible to occupy a house at the Retreat; but it does not follow that because a man is a member of the Institution that he is therefore a member of the Retreat, or has done anything whatever to help the work of the Retreat. Now the annual subscription to the Retreat is only 5s. I think you can become a life member for a payment of 2 guineas, and from one point of view we are very anxious to increase the number of members. It is quite necessary to have a strong and efficient Committee. I think we want to elect some 12 or 13 members for a Committee, and that out of such a small membership as we have now, is rather a tax on those gentlemen who are members. Now I want all of you to consider whether you cannot afford to join the Retreat, either as a life member or an annual member, and also to try and persuade somebody else.

"I feel sure it is well worth doing, because there is another thing to remember, and that is this: that the surplus from the Retreat has always come to the Institution in the form of a gift, and has frequently, in fact, nearly always for many years been quite a substantial help to our funds. (Applause.)

"This year, as you all know, for many reasons the question of poverty and distress has received a great deal of public attention. This has been due to one or two causes. In the first place the Government passed a Bill, which is now an Act, for Old-Age Pensions, which has directed a great deal of attention to this subject. I may say, that incidentally this has affected our operations, as certain of our pensioners were eligible to receive Old-Age Pensions. They have applied for them, and have got them, and, owing to the decision of the Board, without any diminution of the grant received from the Board, so that they are really 5s. a week the better. (Applause.) That has been one cause for the greater attention which has been paid to these subjects, and the second is the Report of the Poor Law Commission. The Poor Law Commission has been sitting for several years to ascertain by what means the present Poor Law could be amended, and their Report has been the subject of very great attention. I think that it is only natural that we should consider how far our Institution in its working harmonises with the recommendations of the Poor Law Commissioners. I should like to say, incidentally, that if anybody wants to ascertain what the recommendations are, they cannot do better than get a copy of the little book, published by Mr. Macmillan, by Mrs. Bosanquet, which tells you in a very short space the gist of the whole subject. It is very interesting, and it is very much to the point with regard to the work of our Institution.

"Of course, poverty can be relieved in various ways. It can be relieved by the State, as has been done to some extent by Old-Age Pensions; and it can also be relieved by charity; and charity, of course, is excellent if it is well applied. There is great risk, sometimes, that charity may not be well applied, and may produce the actual state of poverty which it is intended to remedy. It can also be remedied by self-help. Probably we are all agreed that that is the best thing of all; that is to say, by thrift, by looking after oneself. In some cases that is not possible. A man may be in misfortune, or he may lose his health, or there may be many causes by which his own efforts, however vigorous they may be, are insufficient; and there is one more method, and that is mutual help. It is mutual help that we represent, and it is my belief that that is the very best form of providing against want. (Hear, hear).

"The Report of the majority of the Commissioners recommends as a means for the prevention of poverty that the subject of insurance should be studied, and they give certain definite recommendations. I should rather like to quote one or two of them.

"In the first place, in regard to insurance against unemployment. Unemployment, of course, is one of the subjects which we deal with, and only one. Their recommendation in regard to unemployment is: 'Firstly—The establishment and the promotion of Unemployment Insurance, especially amongst unskilled and unorganised labour, is of paramount importance. Secondly—That the attainment of this object is of such national importance as to justify contributions from the public funds. Thirdly—That this form of insurance can best be promoted by utilising the agency of existing trade organisations.' And they think that trade organisations which provide for insurance against unemployment might be, and ought to be, helped from the public funds.

"Then there is a second point, and that is insurance against bad health—against illness; and that they recommend. Mrs. Bosanquet quotes the following remarks:—'We have consulted three eminent actuaries as to the weekly premiums for which a man aged twenty-one, in good health and employed in healthy occupation, could insure the receipt of 10s. 6d. a week during the first twenty-six weeks of ' illness and 7s. 6d. a week during the remainder of illness up to the age of sixty-five.'

"It appears that that comes out at nearly 4d. a week. You can become a member of this Institution at the age of twenty-one for very little more than 4d. a week, continued through life, and the insurance proposed only insures against ill-health up to sixty-five.

"Now, it seems to me that our Institution is working on the lines indicated by the Poor Law Commissioners, but that they are doing a great deal more for members of our trade than has entered at all into the minds of these Commissioners as being likely that a trade organisation would do. Of course, we insure not only against illness, and not only against unemployment, but also against old age. Now that the Government have taken up the subject of Old-Age Pensions I suppose the Commissioners think that old age is not so much as formerly a question for them to consider; but we have to consider it. After all 5s. a week is not enough for a man to live upon, and a man who joins us is insured against want in old age as well as in illness, and as well in periods of unemployment. Further, some provision is made for his widow and for his children. And further, there is provision made for his funeral expenses when he dies. I think, therefore, that taking it that the Poor Law Commissioners recommend that trade organisations should turn their attention to insurance, and that if they do so they have some claim to State aid, it is quite certain that we are carrying out their views. I do not for a moment think we are likely to get State aid, and I do not know that we require it. I think that so long as we among ourselves employers and assistants together, put our backs into it and keep such an Institution as this going, the probability is that we shall not have any need to come down on State aid. (Applause)."

Mr. C. Awdry, in seconding the motion, asked them to take what the President had said most seriously to heart. He was quite sure that a self-respecting body of tradesmen such as the Booksellers of Great Britain would not for a moment fold their hands and say, "Oh, the State will do for us." Let the increase in their number during the last years be doubled, or more. Let each person feel that the result of that Report was not that they were to fold their hands, but that they were to make a voluntary, mutual effort—that the mutual effort was to be their form of insurance for themselves, their form of help, of charity to those who were poor and weak and fell out by the way through no fault of their own. (Applause). He congratulated the Society on its year's working. They had no reason to take a pessimistic view of their resources for the future though they had been told that they had a specially successful year. Their President had also informed them that they were likely to have two plums out of the same

"Pie" in that next year, and that would help them. (Laughter.) They also must have more subscriptions. Everyone there could probably introduce one more member. He must know someone who would be the better for the possibility of help, better in mind and body, because if it were a little strain to him at the moment still the discipline of denying themselves a little bit for their neighbours was good for their character. (Hear, hear).

The resolution was carried unanimously.

MR. SPURGEON moved the formal election of the President and other officers who had been nominated. He congratulated the Society upon the excellent position it occupied. There was no doubt that the success which had attended its efforts in the past, and which he was sure would follow in the future, was due almost entirely to the excellent way in which the Society had been managed. As one who ranked himself as an outsider to a very large extent, he felt in a position to particularly refer to the great services which Mr. Longman had rendered to the Booksellers' Provident Institution. (Cheers). It was a great honour for a Society of that kind to be presided over by one who was a very Nestor of their profession; and so long as Mr. Longman retained that position, with his prudence, his sagacity and his enthusiasm, there was no doubt as to how the Society would be managed. He congratulated the other officers upon the unanimity of their election. They had not even heard the cry raised that night, "Votes for Women!" (Applause). But it was very remarkable that all those men should be unanimously elected, with no contest, no objection. He sometimes wondered, when the Publishers and the Booksellers combined in doing so much for an Institution of that kind, what was to become of the poor Publishers who fell by the way. It was a very satisfactory thing to hear that he could become—at least he hoped so—a Life Member of the Retreat at King's Langley by paying the sum of two guineas; and as he was at King's Langley the other day and saw those beautiful homes, that to him was a matter of very great satisfaction; that the day might come when he and a few others might take up their position in that lovely country retreat. (Laughter and applause). The possibility of receiving 5s. a week from the Government seemed to him to fade into insignificance compared with the glory and the satisfaction of spending the sunset of their days in the beautiful Retreat at King's Langley. But, apart from all that, he felt that an Institution like theirs was entitled to the warm sympathy and practical support of the Publishers of London. He was quite sure that support had been forthcoming in the past, and the Institution would receive it in the future.

MR. H. E. BARTON seconded the motion, which was carried.

MR. G. H. WHITAKER, in proposing that their best thanks be given to the President and Officers, said that the resolution was a very important and comprehensive one, taking in as it did the whole of the Executive of the Booksellers' Provident Institution. He always had great pleasure in inserting in the Bookseller the report which he received every month; and almost invariably in that report there was the statement that their President (Mr. Longman) presided at those monthly meetings. He thought the Association owed him a very deep debt of gratitude for the enthusiastic way in which he had looked after their interests. The same remark applied with regard to the whole of the Executive. They had worked as one man to make the proceedings a success.

MR. C. C. DARTON had much pleasure in seconding the resolution. He hoped they would show by enthusiastic clapping that the officers, especially the Board of Directors, had to get through a large amount of work which was appreciated. The resolution was carried by acclamation.

MR. MURRAY proposed a vote of thanks to the Court of the Worshipful Company of Stationers for the use of their Hall. In doing so he could not forget that he was perhaps a very unworthy Stationer; but at any rate he was a fraction, and he believed it was something like a 280th part of the Stationers' Company, himself, and, moreover, he was the oldest member of the Stock Board which had the transaction of a certain part of the responsible work of the Stationers' Company; therefore he was in the somewhat invidious position of having to ask them for a vote from one body of which he was a vulgar fraction—he was not quite sure how much—to another body of which he was a 280th part. He spoke as a Stationer when he began to say what pleasure it gave him to see them there, because he felt that the Stationers' Hall was fulfilling its right function, and the function that it was always intended to fulfil, when trade meetings of that sort were gathered there, and in such a large body as he was delighted to see. But now he spoke as a Bookseller, and he could not say what vulgar fraction he might be, but he would say this, that there were no meetings, there or elsewhere, in which he felt so much at home, and so happy, as he did at a meeting of the trade such as theirs. If they had not experienced the kindness of the Stationers in lending their Hall—he spoke of the other 279 280ths of the Company—where should they go? There were in the West End some beautiful exhibition halls which some of their respected confrères had started, but he understood that the conditions of entry to those halls were those of "sale or return," and it would either turn out a "sell," or they would not get back again. Therefore he did not think that there was any place in London so suitable for their purpose or which would hold the numbers he saw there that evening. Therefore, both as a Stationer and a Bookseller, he should like to express the pleasure he felt in being present at that meeting.

MR. C. AWDRY seconded the motion in appropriate terms, and the same was carried unanimously.

MR. MURRAY asked them, impromptu, to return their hearty thanks to Mr. Longman. They all felt how very much the Institution owed to him, and how much time and trouble he gave to it. (Cheers.)

The PRESIDENT could only say he was deeply indebted to them and to Mr. Murray for the kind words he had spoken. The fact that they thought such exertions as he was able to give worth receiving was ample repayment to him.

The RIGHT HONOURABLE THE LORD MAYOR (Sir George Wyatt Truscott), who was received with enthusiastic cheers, said:—

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen—"I accepted with a good deal of pleasure the invitation which has been kindly extended to me by your Executive to take part in the interesting proceedings of to-night, and this for two reasons. First of all I am proud of being a Citizen and Stationer, as so many members of my family have been and are now; and, as a Past Master of the Guild of Stationers, I am glad to share in the welcome that is being given you by my mother company this evening in our historic Hall.

"Secondly, I am for the time being the Chief Magistrate of the City of London, in which so many of you pursue your peaceful avocations, and it is gratifying to me to know that your flourishing and prosperous Institution was formally inaugurated 72 years ago at a meeting in this very place, held under the presidency of the then Lord Mayor of London, who was a bookseller. I am, as you know, a printer and stationer, and the industry which I represent may be said to be the elder brother of yours.

"I note that the final sentence of the Annual Report of your Board of Directors records your 'pleasure at the close association of the ancient Company of Stationers with the scarcely less ancient body of Booksellers,' and I sincerely trust that this Association may be long continued in undiminished harmony.

"The Booksellers' Provident Institution has been peculiarly fortunate in attracting to itself the active support of the heads of your profession, who have not only given generously to it in money, but also in personal service, and I congratulate the Institution in having so distinguished a body of voluntary workers in its behalf as I find in the pamphlet which has been put into my hands explaining its scope and objects.

"I remember the time, Mr. President, when the chair you now so worthily occupy was filled by the old friend of my family, John Murray the Third, and it must be highly gratifying to all the members of the Institution to feel that their interests are in the safe keeping of the head of another historic house—that of Longman.

"The report which you have just passed is the seventy-second annual account of your Directors' stewardship, and it seems to me in every respect but one most thoroughly satisfactory. That exception is the comparatively small number of persons connected with the bookselling trade that take advantage of its privileges. All booksellers and their assistants of either sex who are in business within twelve miles of St. Martin's le Grand are eligible for membership. The periodical payments to be made by members are so graded and arranged as to offer no real difficulty in meeting them; and when it is borne in mind that the modest sum of £18 paid by a person aged 21 will constitute him (or her) a life member, entitled to all the privileges of membership for the rest of his or her existence, it seems to me that everyone engaged in the bookselling trade ought to make an effort to join the Institution.

"Not only does it provide assistance in case of need to members or their widows, but to children; and this not for a limited period, but so long as the need exists.

"It seems to me, therefore, that your Directors of 1909 may very properly repeat the 'Address to the Trade' of their predecessors of seventy years ago, and invite 'co-operation in endeavouring to increase the provision which is made for the industrious and deserving of the trade, and thereby alleviating the sorrows of the afflicted, rendering important assistance to those who are in distress, and ministering to the necessities of the fatherless and the widows.'

"There can be no sort of doubt that, thanks to the generous financial support of the wealthier members of your trade, this Institution is what I have episcopal sanction for calling 'a rattling good thing,' and I commend it to the careful consideration of all those for whom its benefits are intended.

"No one can forecast the future. Nobody can say at what period of his life, or under what unforeseen circumstances, sickness or incapacity to work or misfortune may overtake him, and the prudent man ought always to make provision against such contingencies. I see daily in my business on the Bench, on hospital and asylum committees, and in the course of my other somewhat multifarious duties, to what sad straits otherwise meritorious people or those dependent upon them have been reduced through not cultivating the virtue of thrift.

"You have had the importance of this impressed upon you on former occasions by the heads of Finance, of the Church and of the Law, in the persons of Lord Avebury, the Bishop of London and the Lord Chief Justice, and nothing that a plain man like myself can say could add to the weight of what has been urged by these renowned orators. National thrift is a matter upon which there is much preaching but very little practice, and the same applies to individual thrift.

"I remember, as a young man of twenty-two, an effort made by my honoured father when he was Lord Mayor to fix public attention upon this important matter. He gathered around him at the Mansion House men so distinguished as Edward, Earl of Derby, Earl Stanhope, Cardinal Manning, Dr. B. W. Richardson, Mr. F. D. Mocatta, Mr. Samuel Smiles, and many more; and just twenty-nine years ago (on March 12th, 1880) there was a meeting at the Egyptian Hall so overflowing that, according to The Times report, 'a large number of ladies and gentlemen had to stand throughout the proceedings.' In those days—it was just before the General Election of 1880—there were wars and rumours of wars, and much talk about 'national honour.' Lord Derby brought the meeting to a high pitch of enthusiasm by an eloquent address, in which he used these words, which are just as true now as they were then: 'Pauperism is, to my mind, national dishonour; so is drunkenness; so is preventable disease; so is the miserable squalor in which our poorest classes in the large towns live, even when they escape the workhouse. These are the most real and formidable enemies we have to contend with, and, depend upon it, if we attack them seriously we shall have enough fighting at home to last our time.'

"Let us, therefore, each do what we can to encourage habits of thrift and providence amongst those within our personal spheres of influence.

"As in other things, it is only the first step that costs. Everything must have a beginning. Begin, therefore, now, before it is too late. Thrift may be said to be the philosopher's stone. It is an excellent discipline, it allays anxieties as to the future, it leads to higher hopes and aspirations.

"John Bright, with whom my father had some correspondence at the time of the Mansion House meeting of 1880, gave the following excellent advice sixty years ago to an assemblage of workingmen, and it really seems to me that it sums up the whole matter:

"'There is only one way that is safe for any man, or any number of men, by which they can maintain their present position if it be a good one, or raise themselves above it if it be a bad one: that is by the practice of the virtues of industry, frugality, temperance and honesty. There is no royal road by which men can raise themselves from a position which they feel to be unsatisfactory as regards their mental and physical condition, except by the practice of these virtues, by which they find numbers amongst them are continually advancing and bettering themselves.'

"It is not necessary in order to be thrifty to be penurious or stingy. I think the old Greek poet Lucian hit the nail on the head when he said in one of his epigrams:

'Enjoy thy wealth as though about to die,
Yet frugal be as though of life wert sure;
A wise man he who both these rules obeys,
And strikes the mean 'twixt thrift and lavishness.'

"As Lord Rosebery pointed out in one of his luminous addresses on social subjects, delivered last Christmastide at Edinburgh: 'Thrift means care, foresight, tenderness for those dependent on you. Whether these qualities produce thrift, or whether they are produced by thrift, at any rate they are inseparably entwined.'

"The avoidance of waste is the great object which we should all set ourselves to accomplish—waste of energy, waste of strength, waste of food, waste of money and waste of time. I hope you will feel, at any rate as regards the last-named, there is no just cause for putting me in the pillory.

"Remembering, Mr. President and gentlemen, the many preoccupations of a Lord Mayor, who has, in Milton's words, to 'scorn delights and live laborious days,' you will, I trust, excuse the imperfect thoughts on this important subject of Thrift to which I have ventured to give utterance, and will believe me when I say that I can conceive nothing more conducive to the preservation of good-fellowship, harmony and success to your calling than the continued prosperity and expansion of the admirable Institution which is the occasion of my having the pleasure of meeting you all this evening."

MR. E. BELL: My Lord Mayor, ladies and gentlemen, I am sure I express the general feeling when I venture to propose a vote of thanks to his Lordship for the very interesting, and if I may presume to say so, the able address which he has just given to us. We are all indebted to him, because I believe he has come here at considerable inconvenience to himself. It is the duty and privilege of the Lord Mayor through his year of office to devote himself to the good of his fellow-citizens, or I may say of his fellow men; and I am sure that our present Lord Mayor takes his duties in the most serious manner, and has found some difficulty in coming here. I believe from what he has said that he does so with a real kindly feeling towards our Institution, and I dare say with some pleasure in revisiting the Hall of the Company with which he and his father and other relations of his have been intimately associated. It is seldom that the Lord Mayor passes through the year of his Mayorality without finding some serious subject to engage his attention; but happily it is not very often that a Lord Mayor has, soon after commencing office, such an occasion as presented itself to Sir George Truscott through that appalling occurrence in Southern Italy which evoked the horror and sympathy of the whole world. But with promptitude, which I am glad to say was also exhibited by the Englishmen who were present on the spot, he at once organised a subscription, and within the course of a few days he was able to send a substantial measure of relief. In the course of a few weeks he has been instrumental in raising the immense sum of £140,000, or very nearly that, as a free-will offering from our city and country to our unfortunate fellow creatures in Italy. (Cheers.) After referring to the "epidemic of tercentenaries," which seemed to have broken out in a most extraordinary way this year, the speaker concluded by saying that they might be certain that whatever occasion arose the Lord Mayor would meet it in such a manner as to throw lustre on the great office which he filled, and he had not the slightest doubt if the opportunity should arise he would act in such a manner as to raise the reputation of our country in the eyes of foreign nations. He had much pleasure in proposing a hearty vote of thanks to his Lordship for his kindness in coming there that evening.

MR. LEWIS EVANS seconded. He felt no words were necessary in seconding that vote, but he did think that for the busiest man in the world's busiest city to come there and speak to them was indeed an honour.

The resolution was carried unanimously.

The RIGHT HONOURABLE THE LORD MAYOR in reply, said: Mr. Bell, Mr. Evans, ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Evans was quite right. I have come here with a very great deal of pleasure, and I find it somewhat of a relaxation than otherwise, because this is a little different from the "daily round and common task" of the Lord Mayor, and besides, it brings me in touch with a body of citizens and "citizennesses" who are associated with a kindred trade to my own. (Laughter.). When I began to think about the subject of coming here to-night to address you, it struck me as rather curious that you should come to the occupant of the Mansion House to talk to you about "thrift," for the occupant of the Mansion House is about the last person who is able to practise thrift. (Laughter.) But then there is one thing to be said, you know; that he who occupies the Mansion House must at some time or another practise thrift in order to enable him to carry out in the manner in which they ought to be carried out the hospitable and other duties which fall to the lot and duty of the Chief Magistrate of London. Ladies and gentlemen, let me once more thank you most sincerely both for this vote of thanks, for the manner in which it was proposed, and for the very hearty, cordial, and, let me add, friendly welcome which you have given to me to-night. (Cheers.)

The musical portion of the entertainment was greatly appreciated. Mr. Gerald Adams sang Squire's "Mountain Lovers" with exquisite feeling and tone. Mr. Fred Rome fairly "brought down the house" with his humorous skit, entitled "London"; and as an encore he gave "The Agony Column." The Papyrus Orchestra, under the skilful conductorship of Mr. J. B. Shaw, gave splendid renderings of Rossini's "Tancredi," Mendelssohn's "Son and Stranger," Suppé's "Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna" and Sullivan's "Yeomen of the Guard." Miss E. G. Spalding presided at the piano.

Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Spalding and Mr. A. J. S. Scott Gatty gave an excellent little play, entitled "The Golden Wedding," written by Eden Phillpotts and Charles Groves. It was accorded rapturous applause, and the artistes were recalled again and again. "God Save the King" brought a most enjoyable evening to a close. Over five hundred members and friends were present.

The Author's Club Dinner

CURIOSITIES of Literature was the subject discussed at the very successful dinner of the Author's Club, on Monday evening, March 15th. The guest of the evening was Sir Ernest Clarke, F.S.A., late President of the "Sette of Odd Volumes." In introducing the guest, Mr. T. Cato Worsfield referred to the question of "Plagiarism" and authorship in prison, and gave some pleasant examples. Then Sir Ernest Clarke elegantly flirted with the sources of Shakespeare's "As you like it"; and went on to confess he was one of those busy administrative persons who find their solace and mental refreshment in ruminating among old books.

The Art of Sermon Illustration

MESSRS. JAMES CLARKE & CO. will shortly publish a book on "The Art of Sermon Illustration," by H. Jeffs, the editor of The Christian World Pulpit. The need for such a work is felt by most preachers, and the idea of the book was suggested by letters frequently received by the writer, asking him to recommend some book on the subject. The idea kept in view is to show what sort of illustrations appeal to modern congregations, and how such illustrations may be gathered or created. The art of illustration is really the art of being interesting, and the preacher who fails to interest is not likely to make much impression on his hearers.

Early Booksellers' Catalogues

III.

APROPOS of Le Cène, "Pierre Marteau," "Pierre Coup," "Pierre de Touche" (the preponderance of Pierres is remarkable) and other more or less umbrageous publishers, I am always waiting to come across some contemporary account of the wealth of the publishing houses of Amsterdam in the Seventeenth Century. During the period—say 1630–1750, when this was the one great centre for the production of all the literature of free thought and political criticism, they must have been coining money.

And even if it be true that after the Dutch failure in the struggle for Empire and foreign commerce (cf. Mahan), "grass grew in the streets" of that decaying capital, the book business certainly flourished till well into the Eighteenth Century.

Under Science, Medicine, &c., too, we may note a fair proportion.

Le Chirurgien de l'Hopital.

Hartsocker (N. 1656–1723, famous for his improvements of the micro- and telescope). Conjectures de Physique and his other works. Nic Lemery's Dictionary of Simples. A treatise on the nourishment of bone.

Travels, Geography, &c., make a considerable class. We have Descriptions of the Island of Formosa in Asia, and of Macassar—the Histoire des Iles Antilles (with a vocabulary of the Caribbean tongue) by Rochefort, numerous collections of voyages, the voyage to the West Indies by Schouten (of Harlem, 1676. Was he the friend and editor of Des Cartes?), the Voyage to the Levant, and of the more famous Paul Lucas (of Rouen, and still living, 1664–1737)—Voyages of the Dutch East India Company—these in 12 volumes. Voyages to the Gold Coast and explorations towards the North Pole par le père de Mesnage, 2 vols.

Near a whole page of "Treatises" on miscellaneous matters, Prayer, Good works, Languages, the Organ and the "Clavecin" (Boivin), Musical composition (de Livers), Divine Love, Almsgiving (M. de la Placette), Jealousy, the Point of Honour.

The art of living for 100 years, the Perfect Education (by Bellegarde), others that look like translations from Locke.

Among historical work (the Catalogue itself is in Alphabetical order) L'Amerique Anglaise (history of British possessions in America) and, of course, Bossuet's Universal History (fr. 800 A.D. to the Peace of Utrecht) 3 vols. Hist. of the Indies, of the war with Holland, of various Revolutions (the work by Vertot which still encumbers our bookstalls). A forgotten Hist. de Louis XIV. by one Limiers, Aubery's Hist. of Mazarin, Temple's Hist. of England, accounts of the Ottoman Empire, and of every known dynasty, including Molesworth's Mem. on Denmark.

Memoirs genuine and fictitious are, of course, numerous enough. We find the names of the Duc de Guise (whose little volume appeared in 1681), of Beauvean, Ravesan (?)

The edition of Comines would be the useful work of Godefroy in 4 vols., 1714.

The immortal Memoirs of Gramont had only recently appeared (Cologne. P. Marteau, 1713). The Letters of Gui Patin and of Balzac (a well known Elzevir) and of Bentivoglio (there was one in French and Italian), and the Naudæana and Patiniana deserve mention.

Fiction and Light Literature.

Works of Rousseau (J. B.), Regnard, Molière, Racine, Corneille, Clement Marot, Scarron, Quevedo (with Huet's essay on the origin of Fiction).

Fairy stories, ad libitum, Contes des Feés, par Me. d'(Aulnoy) and the Nouveaux Contes, the "Tyrannie des Feés," and the "Cabinet des Feés" (in 8 vols. It subsequently expanded to 41). Les Chevaliers errans, Contes des Feés, par Mlle. D' (Auneuil, 1709 to. 12).

Contes Turcs on Hist. de la Sultane de Perse.

La Fausse Clelie, au Histoires galantes and comiques (by Subligny, 1670, and often reprinted).

Alix de France—Nouvelle galante—the Nouvelles toutes nouvelles.

Les Apparences trompeuses, or "Don't believe what you see"—a Spanish story, by Edw. Boursault, literateur, dramatist, 1638–1701, and Editor of a poetical Gazette which had a tremendous success, but was like so many of the items in such catalogues as this — suppressed by authority. [Il y avait plaisanté un Capucin!]

La Bagatelle—Ironical discourses intended (need the Author tell us?) to ridicule vice and extravagance by putting forward ingenious sophistries in their defence (another variety of "apparence trompeuse.")

Les caprices du Destin—short stories by Mlle. d'H. (d'Huitier, 1664–1734), with another narrative G. M. de Sacy (member of the Academy, 1654–1727).

Le Nouveau gentilhomme bourgeois, ou Les feés à la mode—might seem to show that Fairy Tales have become almost too familiar since the Orientalist revival of 169–.

We have also Historical novels, novels of Chivalry (Prince Erastus and the like), and a volume of "English Stories, or the Dark Tower." Who wrote them?

Theology is richly represented.

"Chains of Gold" to pull up sinners. "Considerations," on serious topics, conversations on Religion.

Sermons on Apostasy, The Catechism of M. Drelincourt (Protestant minister, 1595–1669).

The "Parallel" of Calvinism, and "Papism" by Jurieu (the abhorred of Voltaire).

Conduite de Providence, Apologie de l'amour Divin (reply to Fénelon's "Maxims of the Saints").

Curiously enough this catalogue, though hailing from Amsterdam, seems to comprise only one work of the famous and recently deceased Pierre Bayle (1647–1706), and that scarcely a representative one, his Pratique de la Piété, but neither the famous works on tolerance nor his greatest work, the Pensées diverses ecrites à un Docteur de la Sorbonne, (Rotterdam, 1683) on the occasion of the appearance of the Comet in December, 1680 (or rather of the Theological "improvements" of that occasion), nor the Avis aux refugiez, 1692. Abbadie, by the way, the refugee Protestant minister who replied to Bayle's rather unprincipled diatribe on the connection between Protestantism and Republicanism, by a Defence of that paragon of wisdom "the British Constitution," figures here with a purely religious work on the "Opening of the Seven Seals." Placette, however, replies to Bayle on the intention of the Faithful and the origin of Evil, The Doctrine of the Trinity.

Boethius (Latin 32mo.) Sallust, Virgil, Homer's Iliad translated by La Mothe.

"Bibliographia Botanica"

HERR W. JUNK, of Berlin, the botanical publisher and bookseller, has just issued in neat cloth binding a well produced royal 8vo. catalogue of 6,891 works of a botanical character, old and modern, in all languages, which he offers for sale and also for exchange. Mr. Junk's establishment in the Kürfurstendamm must be a regular jungle, for he tells us that in addition to these 6,891 items carefully classified under a score and more of heads he has more than 100,000 other botanical works. Probably it would be difficult if not impossible to find a publisher and antiquarian bookseller with Mr. Junk's knowledge of the bibliography of botany, knowledge gained from twenty-five years' experience in this special branch of bookselling, and this knowledge has enabled him to write a very interesting article on "Botanical Literature from the Bibliographical Standpoint." We hope to refer to it on a future occasion.

Woman's Long Service

A PRESENTATION was made on March 12th to Miss Hamilton, one of the workers in the bookbinding department of Messrs. Gall & Inglis' works, on the completion of fifty years' service with the firm. In that long period Miss Hamilton was never late without notification, and absence through illness in that period is not known to exceed in all one month. Miss Hamilton's duty was the final examination of each book and the rejecting of inferior workmanship. Knowing from long experience the work of each employee, she was able quickly to look for the likely points of fault and pass or reject the work with great rapidity. Miss Hamilton is still a vigorous worker, but decided to take this opportunity to retire. The firm presented a gold watch chain and badge, and the employees a purse of sovereigns. —Edinburgh Evening Dispatch.

About the Author of "Anne of Green Gables"

WE have much pleasure in giving the following particulars about Miss Montgomery, author of that delightful book, "Anne of Green Gables," of which 70,000 copies have been sold in America, and which is already in a third edition here (Pitmans).

In answer to a question as to when and how she began her literary career, L. M. Montgomery told an interviewer:

"Ever since I can remember I wrote stories and verse for my own amusement. When I grew up I began to write them for other people's amusement. One day the editor of a Sunday School weekly asked me to write him a juvenile serial of seven or ten chapters. I looked through an old dog-eared, much abused note book for an idea, and came across the following note, written in my teens: 'Elderly couple decide to adopt a boy from an orphan asylum. By mistake a girl is sent them.'

MISS L. M. MONTGOMERY.
Author of "Anne of Green Gables"

"I decided this would do for the central idea of my serial. I blocked out ten chapters and hunted out a few suitable incidents from the same old note book. I meant it to be a quiet little yarn with a well-behaved little heroine and a nice little moral snugly tucked away in it. If I had had time to sit right down then and there and write it, that is all it probably would have been, and 'Anne' would have begun and ended her career in the pages of the aforesaid Sunday School weekly. I did not have time to begin work on it, however, for several weeks. During these weeks I 'brooded' my story and somehow 'Anne' began to take possession of me. It is a mistake to say I 'created' her. I didn't. Like Topsey, she 'growed,' on her own account and I had nothing to do with her development save to watch it and describe it. By the time I was free to get to work, I knew that a seven-chapter serial could never hold all I wanted to say about her; and for the first time the idea of writing a book came to me. I wrote and sent a suitable serial about a boy to the Sunday School weekly, and then I began 'Anne.' In view of her then uncertain future, I felt that I could not afford to take time from my regular magazine work for it, so I wrote the book in the evenings or at any odd spare time when I felt in the mood. It was a labour of love, and when I finished it I felt as sorry to part with my characters as if they were 'real folks' with whom I had been living.

"The characters in the book are all imaginary—that is, no one person sat for the portrait of any of them. But many of the incidents recorded happened in my childhood to me or my playmates, and many of the places drawn are from 'life.' The 'Haunted Wood' with its motley crowd of spectres had a very real and—to a certain trio of children—a very terrifying existence once, and 'Lovers' Lane' is still as green and beautiful a seclusion as when Anne's girlish feet danced through it. As for the episode of the liniment cake, why, the mistress of a quiet little Methodist parsonage in New Brunswick will remember things about that if she ever reads it.

"As for Anne's name, it was never selected with malice prepense. She was Anne from the start—popping into my fancy, with her red hair and big eyes, all ready christened, even to the all important e."

Miss Montgomery was born at Clifton, Prince Edward Island. When she was only a few months old her mother died. Her father went West, leaving his daughter in charge of her maternal grandparent, who lived in Cavendish, Prince Edward Island, and there she passed her girlhood days, and there she wrote "Anne of Green Gables." Cavendish being the Avonlea of her book.

Miss Montgomery attended the district school until she reached her seventeenth year, then went to Prince of Wales College, in Charlottetown, the chief seat of learning in the province, and in one year obtained her teacher's certificate. While attending college she made her first plunge into professional journalism by writing a poem for a New York magazine, which was gladly accepted. After teaching school for a short time she took a term at Dalhousie College, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

On the death of her grandfather Miss Montgomery returned to her home in Cavendish, where she has since resided, with the exception of a winter spent on the staff of the Halifax Daily Echo.

For several years Miss Montgomery has contributed to the magazines short stories and verse, the scenes of most of which have been laid in Prince Edward Island.

Miss Montgomery has a magnetic personality. Somewhat above the medium height, her figure is willowy and most graceful. Her features are classical and her countenance becomes radiant when she is deeply interested in any subject.

She is brilliant and epigrammatic in conversation, and after reading "Anne of Green Gables" one gets glimpses every now and then of the precocious imaginings and "thrills" that Anne so frequently enjoyed. The other characters in the book are typical of the Island farming people and wonderfully true to life.

Indian Novels in Demand

THE only time that the British public takes a keen interest in Indian affairs is, according to the Civil and Military Gazette, of Lahore, when something out of the common, such as a frontier war, a famine, an earthquake, or some similar convulsion is in progress; and accordingly the recent unrest in this country, together with Lord Morley's scheme of reforms, has focussed English interest upon our special concerns to quite an unusual degree. Not long ago the managing director of one of the largest publishing firms in London asked us to recommend a rising Indian novelist, on the ground that the public is prepared just at present to read anything that is written about India. It is possible that this may prove a useful hint to budding writers in this country, while at the same time it may be well to examine the needs of the book-market in the light of five Indian novels that have been recently published or have achieved a considerable degree of popularity. Up to recent times it seemed impossible for any writer except Rudyard Kipling and Mrs. Steele to interest the public in Indian life.

Messrs. Cassell & Co.

Satisfactory Position

THE shareholders of Messrs. Cassell & Co. are to be congratulated on the success of the efforts which have been made by Mr. Arthur Spurgeon to put the company on a sound footing, and they are to be congratulated on having secured his services at a time when dividends were invisible and certain press organs had prophesied disaster.

We stated last summer there was every prospect of a return of prosperity for the great house of Cassell, whose share capital and debentures amount to nearly half a million sterling.

It is pleasant therefore to be able to say that the Directors will, at the meeting on Monday next, March 22nd, recommend that a dividend be paid on the big share capital of £397,729. It is not a large dividend—viz., 2 per cent. less income tax, but it is the first since the year 1904, and it is wise to hasten slowly in a case of this kind. It is certainly good policy of the Directors to strengthen the Reserve Fund with £3,000, to allocate £5,000 to a copyright equalisation account, and to carry forward nearly £2,000.

Seeing that these figures are arrived at after paying the debenture holders nearly £4,000, we think there can be no question as to the splendid work which Mr. Spurgeon has done in the short time during which he has been at the helm of Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd.

Notes from Provincial Towns

[Under this heading we propose giving every week brief notes of book matters from the various provincial towns. We invite booksellers to send us any items likely to be of interest and use to the trade generally.]

CAMBRIDGE

Our town is practically deserted by the majority of the book-buying class for a few weeks, most of the students having gone down for the vacation. This means between three and four thousand book buyers of one class or another. Were it not for the postal business done by the second-hand booksellers here one could well keep the businesses closed during these vacations to a large extent. Cambridge booksellers for the most part, however, do a large business with all parts of the world, and one need never be idle here. Travellers turn up at these periods, and this perhaps tends to liven matters somewhat.

Taking the weather into consideration the past term has not been a very eventful one. By general account the trade does not seem to be in any way depressed, and if with some houses trade has slightly decreased, it has made up for the loss by postal business. So on the whole we have no cause to grumble; on the contrary, if what I hear is correct as to a general trade depression, we must indeed be thankful. I don't think we ever grumble here, though, but we are always open for more business.

Messrs. A. P. Dixon, Ltd., have removed their printing works to the Hills Road and to much larger premises; it is only but a year or so back that they had a place built near their shop in Market Street for this department, but increased business necessitated larger works; there should be no complaint as to business here!

I note the following firms issued second-hand catalogues during the past term, in some cases more than one:—Bowes & Bowes, Deighton, Bell & Co., Heffer & Sons, and Galloway & Porter. The chief catalogue from Bowes & Bowes was devoted entirely to mathematical books—an excellent piece of work, and I assume the compilation of Mr. G. J. Gray, that keen bibliographer who has many works of a bibliographical nature standing to his credit.

Though the weather has been rough, as elsewhere, during the past term, Mr. David (the bookseller having a stall on the Market Hill) has weathered it all. In the business aspect also, he told me recently trade was good, and he therefore has no complaint to make of bad business.

Business is very quiet here just now; there is nothing of sufficient interest to report.

"My Library Book List."

MRS. A. STRONACH has just published a little pocket book entitled "My Library Book List." Its purpose is to provide for book readers a means whereby they can keep a record of books read and lent. Each page is headed with a carefully chosen aphorism and is divided into five columns with sub-headings. Pages 1 to 75 are for "Title of Book; Author; Recommended by; Date when read; Comment"; and pages 78 to 99 are for "Title of Book; Author; Lent to; Date when lent; Date when returned." It is bound in four colours, pale blue, red, brown and olive-green, with gilt edges and lettering. The idea is novel, and it should prove very useful to those who read much. Who has not tried vainly to remember the title of some interesting book? American Notes

(From the New York Publishers' Weekly)

POE VOLUME BRINGS $1,200

Spirited bidding marked the sale of a first edition of Poe's "Al Aaraaf" in the collection of books belonging to Chief Justice James T. Mitchell and the estate of H. Rush-Korvey, in Samuel T. Freeman & Co.'s auction rooms in Philadelphia on March 2nd. The volume was finally sold for $1,200 on an order of Dodd, Mead & Co., of New York. This was an unusually high price for this book, the highest price ever having been paid for a circulation volume before being $700. A presentation copy of the same work sold in New York last week for $3,900. The book contains "Al Aaraaf," "Tamerlane," and a number of minor poems, and was published in Baltimore in 1829 by Hatch & Dunning. It is still in its original binding.

THE AMERICAN COPYRIGHT BILL

After three years' labour the Copyright Bill, much to the surprise of all interested, was rushed through the last sessions of Congress late in the evening of March 3rd. Owing to the severe storm that practically isolated the capital on March 4th and 5th by disabling the telegraph and telephone lines and blocking railway communications between Washington and Philadelphia, we are unable at the time we must go to press to ascertain whether the Bill was signed by President Roosevelt before he went out of office, nor could we obtain a copy of the text of the Bill as finally acted upon to be able to give a synopsis of the variations from the law of 1901. We must therefore defer to another issue a consideraiton of the whole matter.

Araminta

IT is amusing to notice the different opinions about popular novels. Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. are having a big and—as we venture to think—well deserved success with Mr. J. C. Snaith's "Araminta," already in a third edition.

The British Weekly thinks it "most brilliant, original, and remarkable . . . . humorous, entertaining and genial."

The Morning Post thinks it is "essentially a jolly book," and will take the town by storm.

The Sphere says it is "the best novel of 1909 by a long way."

And then The Times gives "Araminta" this dose of peppermint*a*:

> "So crude, artificial and vulgar" as to excite pity, "incredible and irritating."

What The Times finds particularly offensive is that Mr. Snaith makes his naughty, wicked society people all "go to church" together—if they had stopped at home to play bridge one could understand The Times being so shocked at what we think The Morning Post is right in calling "essentially a jolly book."

Hints to Young Authors

(Answers to Correspondents.)

From Hatchard's "Books of To-Day."

BOW BELLS.—We were not in the least surprised that your hero should be murdered so early in Wilson's Revenge. Our only wonder is that he was spared so long. A man who goes about saying "prithee" and "methinks" is better dead.

BEATRIX.—Do we think that any publisher would look twice at The Tears of Teresa? But why twice? We should imagine once would be quite enough—publishers are busy men.

TARTUFFE.—You are quite right. It is infinitely better to write good prose than bad poetry. You do not say which Pansy Faces is meant to be.

ULTIMA THULE.—The hero who, when crossed in love, goes big game shooting, is getting rather played out. Why not make him join the Territorials?

A First Shakespeare and a First Walton Sold Together

ON Friday, March 19th, Messrs. Sotheby sold by auction two rare works, the property of Colonel Sanford—viz., a First Edition of Shakespeare's Poems (1640), nearly perfect, and a "perfect and very excellent copy" of Walton's "Angler" (1653). Also on the same and previous day, other important items.

JOHN SMITH'S CATALOGUE RAISONNÉ

DEAR SIR,—We have your letter of the 10th inst., and are much surprised that anyone has been found to take exception to the term "obsolete" being now applied to John Smith's celebrated Catalogue Raisonné. We confess we should have thought the matter one scarcely admitting of question.

It is quite impossible, within reasonable limits of space, to give every detail of the enormous advance in the way of completeness and accuracy which is made upon the original "Smith" by Mr. Hawke's edition of Dr. de Groot's "Catalogue Raisonné of the Most Eminent Dutch Painters." Two concrete examples may, however, be taken from the forthcoming Vol. II., which is devoted to the works of Aelbert Cuyp and Philips Wouwerman. Smith devoted 368 pages of large type to the two masters, but Dr. de Groot has needed about 650 pages of small type, apart from indexes, which Smith did not provide. Smith describes in all 336 works by Cuyp, but many of his entries are duplicated; Dr. de Groot's main entries, however, number 842, all distinct, and not including hundreds of references to pictures only known from sale catalogues. Wouwerman received special attention from Smith, who collected notices of 793 pictures, including duplicates, but Dr. de Groot has 1,165 main entries, apart from mere catalogue references.

Similar, and even greater, increases will obtain throughout the whole ten volumes; and, in addition, Dr. de Groot describes the works of seven distinguished masters—notably Vermeer of Delft (in Vol. I.) and Frans Hals—who were not dealt with by Smith at all. Finally, in innumerable cases Dr. de Groot and Mr. Hawke have enlarged and corrected Smith's descriptions, besides giving the history of the pictures during the last seventy years.

We may also refer you to the enclosed prospectus of the work, especially to the Translator's Preface.

We are,
Yours faithfully,
MACMILLAN & CO., LTD.

PUBLISHERS' BINDINGS

DEAR SIR,—A strong publishers' binding has long been a desideratum, and now that an increasing number of publishers are employing artists of repute to design new book covers there is an additional reason why publishers should issue their books in a more durable binding (or rather casing) than is customary at the present time.

Keen competition has compelled the publishers to reduce the expenses of production to their utmost limit, and consequently most of the books of to-day have flimsy covers. There is no doubt, however, that book purchasers generally get good value for their money; but if publishers would issue popular and standard books in a serviceable binding many of their customers—especially public libraries—would be prepared to pay for the extra cost which a stronger binding would necessitate.

In the United States, as a result of the work of the Binding Committee of the American Library Association, a number of publishers are issuing some of their books in a reinforced binding, some of the books being bound in accordance with a specification of the American Library Association. At the annual Conference of the American Library Association, held at Lake Minnetonka in June last, there were exhibited no less than 112 different books in reinforced bindings prepared by various publishers.

I have recently obtained an excellent specimen of a reinforced binding—viz., Clara L. Burnham's "The Leaven of Love," published by Houghton Mifflin Company. This book is sewn "all along" by hand, with Irish linen thread, over three tapes; the first and last signatures are reinforced in their folds with strips of linen, and the end-papers are made with cloth joints and sewn through. The extra charge to the trade and to the public for this serviceable binding is 10 cents, the retail price of the book in the ordinary edition being $1.50.

Will not some enterprising publisher emulate the American publishers in the matter of publishers' bindings?—Yours, &c.,

GEO. A. STEPHEN,
Chief Assistant Librarian,
St. Pancras Public Libraries.
March 17th, 1909.

A RARE TENNYSON ITEM

DEAR SIR,—It may be of interest to the readers of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR to know that at Sotheby's yesterday (March 16th) three exceedingly rare items of Tennyson were sold, viz.: "The Falcon," "The Cup," and "The Promise of May," privately printed for the author, of which very few copies are known. After a spirited competition between Mr. Sawyer and Mr. Quaritch, the latter secured the prize at £60.

Faithfully yours,
EDMUND ROCHE.

Notices of Books

From Mr. William Bryce, Medical Bookseller, Edinburgh.—"Materia Mnemonics: Aids to Materia Medica." It wants a medical reviewer to tackle this little pocket brochure; we fear we cannot do justice to it. It appears to be intended as an aid to medical students to remember the more important general preparations of the British Pharmacopœia. For instance, there are nine official solutions of drugs in glycerine—Acidi Carbolici, Acidi Borici, Starch (Amyli) Acidi Tannici, Alumnis, Boracis, Tragacanthæ, Pepsini, Lead. The aid to remember this is:—"All aching stomachs are assisted by taking peptonised leaves," the first letter of each series of words being the same. The compiler must have been a bit of a wag; here are one or two other specimens:—"Thirsty College students like heavy beers"; "Every parson likes to spoon in private"—this to enable the medical student to remember seven official preparations of rhubarb. Some of the Mnemonics are blunt and a bit too crude to quote—e.g., those on Jalap and Senna. The following rhyme will perhaps enable the student to remember the 5–15 tinctures. All the remaining tinctures in the B.P. are ½ to 1 fl. dr., except Tinct. Iodi—2–5 m.

> The Indian Hemp and Spanish Fly,
> The Crocus and Gelsemii,
> Podophylli and Stramonii
> Have the same dose as Capsici.
> The Foxglove and the Poppyhead
> Are grouped along with the Scilla Red.
> Strophanthus and Coccus and Aconite Root
> Have doses similar to Nux Vom. fruit.
> Lobelia and Iron Perchloride come
> Walking with Colchici Seminum,
> 5–15 is the dose you must know
> For Tinct. Chloroformi et Morphinæ Co.

One of the last of the Mnemonics tells us that "Timothy tried teasing Esther in Lambeth Park." From which we infer that this Mnemonic Medico hails from St. Thomas's Hospital, Lambeth. Fancy having to trust your inside to this prescription:

> "Elaterium $\frac{1}{10}$–½ for bowels is the best,
> $\frac{1}{40}$–$\frac{1}{10}$ gives the bowels a rest,
> Then comes the powder, 1–4;
> With sugar of milk if his stomach's sore."

From Messrs. Chatto & Windus.—"Julian Revelstone: a Romance," by Justin McCarthy. A clever book, of course, but the author has made the hero of the romance, when asking Sir Francis D'Esterre for the hand of his daughter in marriage, conceal the fact that he was a millionaire and the owner of an adjoining and recently purchased property. The author makes Julian Revelstone, the hero, win the lady's affection, believing him to be a poor man. This is pretty enough a tale, and few of us will quarrel with it. But to deceive your future father-in-law, and later on when married (for Sir Francis's daughter was of age) to subject your father-in-law to the chance of being made a fool in public, is hardly commendable, although coming from the pen of so distinguished a novelist.

From the Same.—"A Castle of Dreams," by Netta Syrett. An amusing, well-written story of the wooing of an Irish girl, the daughter of a poor and rather disreputable absentee Irish aristocrat, who leaves her to grow up anyhow in his neglected Castle in Connemara, miles away from any sort of civilisation. Lord O'Shaughnessy, the pauper parent, is surprised to find that in his twenty years' absence his daughter Bridget had grown from a poor little skinny thing into a lovely woman (they all do in novels), and conceives the idea that the way to retrieve his fortunes is to take over a rich young fool of his acquaintance to marry her. The manner in which the delightful girl fools him and the other fashionable and frivolous people who are also taken over from London is amusing enough. Next to Bridget the best drawn character is the shallow, susceptible, wealthy Charlie Robinson, but the people who say "what" at the end of their sentences in novels are getting a little tiresome.

From the Same.—"Wine and Health: How to Enjoy Both," by N. E. York-Davies. A valuable contribution, combining commonsense with expert knowledge, to the great controversy now raging upon the subject of the value of alcohol. The author is not afraid to speak out plainly against the evils produced by the habitual consumption of wine and spirits, and the chapters devoted to the consideration of diseases directly induced by alcohol deserve very careful study.

From Messrs. Digby, Long & Co.—"The Sunburnt South," by Francis Carey Slater. Half a dozen stories of South African life and scenery. Mr. Slater, as his former book "Footpaths thro' the Veld," showed, knows South Africa thoroughly; and the subtle fascination of its illimitable wastes and sunbaked valleys, as well as the characteristics of its denizens, are vividly reproduced in these picturesque and imaginative tales. One of them is a Kaffir variant of the famous legend of the "Kingship of the Birds," which will be of special interest to students of folk-lore. "The Sword and the Cowl," by Edgar Swan, is a vigorous and agreeable story of the days of the Norman Conquest. A pair of twin brothers, being ousted by the Norman intruders from their ancestral home in the Cotswolds, devote their lives to the defence of their country. After many hairbreadth escapes, one of the twins is killed; the other wins a Norman bride, and in the end recovers his estate. The book might, perhaps, have gained by compression, for there is some sameness in the incidents, nevertheless the interest is well maintained to the very end.

From Messrs. Greening & Co., Ltd.—"Only April," by Gurner Gillman. As a name for a heroine "April" is surely as novel as "May" is the reverse, but why not? Anyway it is a very sweet and charming April who is introduced to us by Mr. Gillman in this capital story, in which we are again reminded that love, like the ocean, is over time itself victorious and will go on as the chief ingredient of a good novel to the end of human things. We first see April from the window of a fine old mansion, Voyce Abbey, in the Cotswolds; mounted on a chestnut mare she clears in fine style an old sun dial on the lawn. The hero sees her by accident for the first time when she is about to take a header from a diving board into the park lake. Mr. Gillman uses his English with that excellent skill which reminds one of the master of fencing, and is always a pleasure to meet with when combined with fine and strong delineation of a wide range of character — male and female. "Only April" is an uncommonly good novel.

From the Same.—"Underground," by John K. Leys. Everyone who likes a good "criminal novel" as our German friends call it will read right through this exciting and well-written story of a kidnapped millionaire, abducted heroine, hate, poison, murder, treachery and triumphant love. But one would have thought a modern up-to-date secret brotherhood, whose members abduct beautiful girls in big motor cars, would have known better than keep a secret record of their crimes for the poor but heroic hero to get hold of to their confusion.

From the Same.—A short play entitled, "Voices in the Wind," by A. E. Carey. There are five characters, and the mise-en-scène is a woodcutter's hut in the forest of the Crown Prince.

From Messrs. Ralph Holland & Co.—"The Primary Curriculum," being the second volume of these publishers' Educational Science Series, edited and in part written by Mr. J. H. Hayward, is a collection of essays on all the subjects taught in elementary schools, contributed by a number of practical teachers. The suggestions made for improvements in method are of a far-reaching kind, yet strictly based on practical knowledge of what is possible. The papers are not all equally valuable, but all have value; and the whole volume is a striking testimony to the new spirit which is moving among elementary teachers, and which should in a few years revolutionise our elementary education. Its interest and value are by no means confined to professional teachers, but will be felt by all parents who read it.

From Messrs. C. & E. Layton.—"Handy Newspaper List for 1909." A guide to London, suburban and provincial newspapers, giving title, price, date of establishment, politics or class, and address. Unfortunately it is not infallible, and we notice several errors.

From Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.—"Analysis of the Evolution of Musical Form," by Margaret H. Glyn. The object of this book is "the application of the evolutionary principle to practical music, the essential motive power of which is to be found in rhythm." It is an endeavour to translate into the terms of the intellect the form of the impressions made upon the musical imagination, and is not intended as a mechanical guide to music, but rather to suggest to students the lines upon which analytical study may profitably proceed. Miss Glyn considers not only music past and present as we Europeans understand it, but also the music of the East with its strange tonality. Part I. is given up to "Tone Material," and Part II. to "Rhythm," concluding with a summary and an appendix of musical illustrations, Glossary and Index. The book is a serious and important piece of work.

From Mr. J. Milne.—"How to Skate on Rollers," by Rinker, is a book designed to teach the art of roller skating, which is so much in vogue at present; it fulfils its purpose to a certain extent, but we think too much space is given up to figure skating. Figure skating is all very well on ice, but on a somewhat confined and crowded rink, as most of the rinks in London appear to be, it becomes somewhat of a nuisance to other skaters, especially if indulged in by two or three at once. We fail to find any mention of waltzing, the Lancers, the spread eagle, the grape vine, trick skating, &c.; why cannot somebody write a book giving instructions in these as well as figure skating? Without doubt they hold considerable fascination for any fairly good skater, and can be practised on even the smallest rinks without causing half the inconvenience to others that figure skating does. It is surprising to see what a small number of people can waltz properly—that, of course, includes reversing as well—and yet it must be admitted that scarcely anything that can be performed on skates, or off them either for that matter, looks better than a couple waltzing really well. The Records given in the last chapter are very interesting, but surely there must have been some records made for backward skating as well; it will be interesting to see whether any of these records will be broken at Olympia, where we understand some races are to be held in the near future.

From the Same.—"The Love that Kills," by Coralie Stanton and Heath Hosken. This book fully maintains the reputation of its clever authors. The story centres around the supreme sacrifice made by a woman for the man she loves. It is difficult not to be carried away by the intense feeling with which the authors have imbued their numerous tragic situations. With regard to the murder of Lord Queste, one of the chief characters, it is very doubtful whether the most astute reader will discover the identity of the murderer until it is divulged in the last chapter.

From Messrs. A. R. Mowbray & Co., Ltd.—"Your Confirmation," by the Rev. T. H. Passmore, M.A. This little book is intended for the guidance of those preparing for Confirmation. It contains simple explanations and counsels, with some prayers.

From Mr. Eveleigh Nash—"Petticoat Pilgrims on Trek," by Mrs. Fred Maturin. A lively chronicle of adventure in South Africa in 1903–4. The authoress and her servant, Nellie (an original and entirely delightful character) seem to have been made for the chances and changes of a Bohemian life; their misfortunes are merely material for laughter, and nothing daunts the spirits either of mistress or maid. The reader is shown the repatriation scheme in full working order, the inside of Boer farms, some choice specimens of Johannesburg society, life on a Johannesburg newspaper, and a hundred other things, all of which are made interesting or amusing by Mrs. Maturin's exceedingly clever pen. Some of the stories, we imagine, are intended to be taken with a grain or two of salt, for they are rather highly coloured. As a whole, however, the book may be taken as an accurate and vivid picture of South Africa soon after the conclusion of the Boer War.

From Mr. Charles North (Blackheath Press).—"The Patriarchate of Jerusalem," by Archdeacon Dowling, Commissary for Eastern Church Intercourse within the Anglican Bishopric in Jerusalem. A well written and well illustrated pamphlet, likely to interest Churchmen generally, and especially those acquainted with Eastern Church questions. The present Patriarch, named Damianus, is a man of wide culture who maintains friendly relations with the Anglican Bishop in Jerusalem.

From Messrs. Novello & Co.—Mr. Alexander Maclean's "The Annunciation," Bible scenes set to music for soprano, mezzo-soprano, tenor, bass, chorus, and orchestra, which they have issued in their octavo edition, copyright 1909.

From Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Ltd.—"Dublin Castle and the Irish People," by R. Barry O'Brien. Mr. Barry O'Brien is a brilliant Irishman who is constitutionally incapable of saying what he does not mean, and what he says is always very forcible, very straight and, often enough, very uncompromising. Dublin Castle means English rule of Ireland, and to Mr. O'Brien it stands for all that is tragic and sorrowful in what he regards as the misgovernment of his country. He describes the atmosphere and work of the Castle, and a separate part deals with Boards, Departments and Offices. After going into the question of Finance he concludes with a chapter entitled, "What the Irish Want." His wit is sure and caustic, his criticism trenchant and destructive, and even those least inclined to agree with his point of view will be compelled to admit that his intellectual capacity is unusual and his writing often eloquent.

From the Same.—"The Transformations of the Animal World," by Charles Depéret. This lucid and scholarly work of M. Depéret is well abreast of modern research, and may fitly be regarded as embodying the latest facts and theories on the subject of which it treats. In the first part the author gives a summary of the work of the principal authors of the evolutionary theory, including therein Darwin's precursors as well as his successors; in the second part he deals with the different processes of the variation and the extinction of species, together with the effect of migrations and the attractive problem of the first appearance of life on our globe.

From Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd.—"British Mountaineering," by C. E. Benson, member of the Climbers' Club and Yorkshire Ramblers' Club. It is a pity the title-page of this work does not adequately describe it; there is no mention of the forty or fifty illustrations, and yet they add greatly to the interest of a capital book. Mountaineering is a fine and fascinating pastime. The man whose death would leave a widow and children unprovided for has no right to indulge in it; short of that, the qualities called for by successful mountaineering are such as amply compensate for the small loss of life it entails—we mean from the welfare of the nation's point of view; they are qualities common to most other forms of sport with a spice of danger, and mean the difference between life and existence. Mr. Benson writes well, and condescends to give those small details which make general directions safe to follow because understood.

From the Same.—"Passing English of the Victorian Era," by J. Redding Ware. This is a book to browse over and be grateful for. Few compilers of books have put so much zest, snap and flavour into their work as Mr. Redding Ware has put into this dictionary of heterodox English, slang and phrase. It is full of curious information, and hundreds of examples of street slang are tracked down to their obscure origins with unfailing exactness and zest. Mr. Ware's sense of humour adds considerably to the readableness of his work, and his learning on out-of-the-way subjects is prodigious. We have noticed one or two misprints: Rossetti is spelt "Rosetti," and Braham is given as "Brahan."

From the Same.—"St. Nicotine," by Edward Vincent Heward. Mr. Heward has collected a large amount of curious information regarding tobacco and the tobacco habit, and worshippers of St. Nicotine will find much that is new to them in his pages. It seems that the British nation is spending upon tobacco and its accessories almost as much money as it does upon its daily bread. In America alone the tobacco plantations cover an area of 400,000 acres; and in the labour of cultivation 40,000 earn their living. The author discusses the question of tobacco in relation to health; the present writer is himself a smoker, but he knows few men who do not occasionally smoke to excess. Indeed, the expression "moderate smoker" is in danger of becoming a contradiction in terms. The chapters on the antiquity of tobacco-smoking and on the tobacco industry are of exceptional interest; indeed, Mr. Heward seems to have left no aspect of his subject untouched, and his little volume is thoroughly fresh and bright.

From the Same.—"Shakespeare for Home Reading" ("The Merchant of Venice," "A Midsummer Night's Dream"), edited by K. Harvey. The aim of the editor of this new series of Shakespeare plays is to foster among readers, young and old, an interest in the works of Shakespeare. Mr. Harvey tells the story of each play with appropriate extracts, and thus, in his own words, "makes the plays entertaining for boys and girls, as well as for the honest man." Typography and binding are alike in good taste.

From Messrs. Sidgwick & Jackson, Ltd.—"The Burial of Sir John Moore, and other Poems," by Charles Wolfe. The name of this clergyman is indissolubly linked with that of Sir John Moore, the hero of Corunna, the centenary of whose death was observed on January 15th last. The volume contains seventeen poems, chiefly associated with the author's college days in Dublin, now for the first time published together. There is a sympathetic memoir, by C. Litton Falkiner, a portrait of Wolfe, and a collotype facsimile of the MS. of his immortal poem. The publishers have produced a worthy memorial to this gifted Irishman.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—"Teresa," by Edith Ayrton Zangwill. It would require a very wide knowledge of life to entitle anyone to say that such a character as Teresa is impossible, but certainly she is improbable, and it says a good deal for the power and skill of the writer that the reader is sorry to part with her at the end of a book which has not a dull page in it.

From the Same.—"A Bishop in the Rough," edited by the Rev. D. Wallace Duthie. This extremely interesting book is an account of the early ministerial experiences of Dr. Sheepshanks, the present Bishop of Norwich, who from 1859 to 1867 laboured in British Columbia, among the gold miners and native Indians of what was then an almost unknown country. After leaving North America the young clergyman visited Salt Lake City, where he had the unique experience of preaching to the Mormons, and saw much of Brigham Young. He then made a leisurely journey home through the heart of Central Asia. He kept a diary throughout; and this, helped out by his reminiscences, has been worked up under Mr. Duthie's skilful editorship into a most entertaining and instructive narrative. While full of humour and incident, the book serves on its graver side to prove the assertion, made by the Bishop in his Preface, that the Church has in the last fifty years gained far more in spiritual and democratic influence than it has lost in political power.

From the Same.—Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. have just published "Pre-Tractarian Oxford," by the Rev. W. Tuckwell, M.A. Those who read this author's "Reminiscences of Oxford" will be glad to have this companion volume. We cannot say that we think the present book quite so interesting (nor indeed so amusing) as the former; but all lovers of Oxford—and surely they are legion—will hasten to read of Coppleston and Whately and Arnold and the others.

From Messrs. S. Sonnenschein & Co., Ltd.—"The Schoolmasters' Year Book and Directory for 1909." This is a reference book of Secondary Education in England and Wales, and comprises the following:—General Information, Alphabetical Lists of Secondary Schoolmasters and List of Secondary Schools. It is a useful book of reference and is accurate and concise.

From Messrs. E. & F. N. Spon, Ltd.—"Workshop Receipts for Manufacturers and Scientific Amateurs." Volume I., Acetylene Lighting—Drying. This is a new and thoroughly revised edition of this popular and indispensable work. It is impossible to give a complete list of the subjects dealt with in this volume alone, but a list of a few may give some idea of the scope of the work. Remarkably clear, concise and accurate descriptions are in all cases given. Acetylene Lighting, Acidimetry, Aerating Agents, Alloys, Amalgam, Amber, Anemometers, Baking Powders, Ball Valves, Bamboo Work, Basket Making, Bell Founding and Bell Metal, Belting, Bleaching, Bookbinding and Reparing, Cameo Cutting, Candles, Catgut, Celluloid, Cements, China Rivetting, Clock and Watch Mending, Confectionery, Cooking Apparatus, Copying, Disinfectants, Distilling, Drawing, &c. Vol. I. contains 532 pages, with good index and 223 illustrations.

From Mr. Elliot Stock.—"The Hope that is in Me," by Ven. Basil Wilberforce, D.D. The sermons of Archdeacon Wilberforce are so packed with thought, so rich in observation and original in style, that they are as fascinating in the study as in the church. This is not often the case with even the most eloquent and learned sermons. The range of subjects dealt with gives the volume variety of interest and freshness of appeal. "Social Evolution," "Mental Concentration," "Theosophy" and "God's Bairns" are the titles of four of these twenty eloquent, suggestive and learned sermons.

From the Same.—"The Waters of Ægyra," by B. Burford Rawlings. Mr. Rawlings' muse is reflective and chastened; his rhymed couplets remind us of Pope, and his lyrics express unexceptionable if rather trite sentiments. Nevertheless, his verse is polished and refined, and if he has little imagination, he possesses fancy and an ear for the right word.

From the Same.—"Light for Lesser Days: Studies of the Saints: being Readings, &c., for the Minor Festivals of the Anglican Calendar" (with illustrations), by the Rev. Canon Horace Finn Tucker, of Melbourne. The arrangement seems to be good, and the compilation will be appreciated by Anglicans who are interested in such commemorations.

From the Same.—A useful and pretty little volume, entitled "Consider the Butterflies How they Grow," by Lucas P. Stubbs. The author describes his work as "a simple narrative of some of the many facts that appear in the course of a butterfly's eventful life that have begotten in his mind thoughts that he felt impelled to record." Certainly he has succeeded in making his thoughts both interesting and instructive. The illustrations are good.

From the Same.—"With Christ to Gethsemane," by Helen Thorp. The Bishop of Rochester contributes a Preface to this little volume of devotion for use during Lent. It is primarily intended for girls and young women, and breathes a spirit of sincere reverence and faith.

From Mr. C. J. Thynne—(1) "Christ our Example," by Caroline Fry. The remarkable woman who wrote this devotional book died in 1846; yet her work is still in demand. This, the 29th thousand, has a preface by Canon Christopher, and a life of the writer by the Rev. Thos. Dickson. (2) "The Union of Christ and his People": four sermons preached before the University of Oxford by Canon Heurtley nearly 70 years ago, and now re-issued by Dr. Guy Warman (Principal of St. Aidan's College, Birkenhead). "Old theology" is a by-word; yet Canon Heurtley's clear and positive statements, his knowledge of primitive doctrine, and above all his loyalty to Holy Scripture, go far to justify the resuscitation of his sermons as a counterfoil to a more invertebrate theology.

From Mr. Fisher Unwin.—"History of Contemporary Civilisation," by Charles Seignobos. We have had from the same pen the history of ancient and of mediæval civilisations, the whole being now completed by the present volume, in which the author places the commencement of contemporary civilisation, circa 1789. He analyses the state of Europe during the Eighteenth Century, the Colonial and Reform movements, the French Revolution, the Napoleonic Era, and the general movements which have progressed since the middle of the Nineteenth Century. Separate chapters are devoted to the dismemberment of the Ottoman Empire, the U.S.A., Arts and Sciences of the Nineteenth Century, economic and social reforms, &c., and a deeply interesting summing up, in which the author gives his conclusions. It seems almost incredible that so well arranged a work should be issued without an Index. It is a serious and much to be regretted omission.

From the Same.—"The Greater Love." A very cleverly written book, the characters are well drawn and life-like, the situations are not too extravagant or exaggerated. But the writer, Anna McClure Sholl, by treating the subject of morality too lightly, has, in our opinion, somewhat spoiled an otherwise excellent book.

From Mr. Effingham Wilson.—"Capital and Investment" is a clear and intelligible statement for the benefit of the general public of the principles which ought to control the investment of capital in public stocks, shares and securities. The book is anonymous, and apparently put forward by a well-known firm of dealers in such securities; but the interests of this firm are by no means unduly obtruded, and the advice given is such as might come from any trustworthy members of the Stock Exchange. It is illustrated by several useful charts.

March 27, 1909.

Gentlemen,

By the time you read this letter you will have received your copies of Nash's Magazine, and will, I think, be satisfied that the 'finished article' more than confirms all I have claimed for it.

Within the next week or two the public will pass their verdict on the Magazine, and judging from the manner in which it has been taken up by you—who, after all, are best qualified to criticise its merits and possibilities—I do not doubt the result.

Let me thank you, one and all, for the generous support you are giving me and for the hearty welcome you have accorded to the Magazine.

Wishing you every success,

Believe me,

Yours sincerely,

Pearleigh Nash

A Romance of a Million Years Ago and the Latest Novel

MR. DAVID NUTT is the English publisher of an extremely interesting work in French, entitled "La Caverne," by Ray Nyst, who acts as his own publisher at Brussels, Rue Vautier 46. It is an admirably printed volume of over 400 pages, price 4 francs.

"La Caverne" (The Cavern, or The Cave) is a picturesque history of a human family of twenty-nine persons—father, mother and twenty-seven children—amid the luxuriant forests and clement seasons of Central Europe during the Tertiary Epoch.

For many years M. Nyst has hunted prehistoric man with all the ardour with which prehistoric man hunted his daily food. Two previous works (prehistoric romances), "Notre Père des Bois" and "La Forêt Nuptiale," which he published in 1899 and in 1900, convinced the author that very special precautions are necessary in order to interest the world of to-day in a story of our prehistoric ancestors. Convinced that the greatest study of Mankind is Man, he thinks that the reason why man's story before it had a history has been confined to science and been more or less repugnant to people in general is because of false ideas and unfounded prejudices. We think of the man-ape as a repugnant being—as a being, in fact, whose former existence is derogatory to our nature, as a bad dream best left in oblivion with other monsters of the past.

In order, then, to remove from our minds these false ideas and prejudices, our author introduces his startling and convincing story with one of those admirable expositions in which French writers so easily excel. On page after page for a hundred and fifty pages he gives us a clear and illuminating account of the main facts and theories and deductions relating to man's knowledge of prehistoric man. As a contribution to prehistoric anthropology this Introduction entitles the work to a place in every library. A mere glance at the works quoted impresses one with the untiring zeal with which the author has traced and tracked his quarry, and proved incontestibly that of all creatures man has always been the most formidable, the most terrible and the most heroic.

We think that the majority of readers will begin with the romance as we did, and will then be compelled by the terrific realism and fascination of the story to examine the things which impelled its author to construct it—"Les choses que j'ai vues durant dix ans de guet dans la forêt préhistorique."

The appeal of this book to the reader is closely that "appeal to the wild" which is felt more or less by all human beings. It will be impossible for anyone to read it and understand it and remain the same being. The reader will have eaten of the fruit of the tree of knowledge of life as it was millions of years ago.

At the remote period when M. Nyst's romance commences old age was unknown. As soon as the muscles began to lose their wonted vigour the lion and the wild beasts and his own kind, most dangerous of all, noticed it, and the man was doomed. There was no natural death then for man or other animal. The idea that the great extinct antediluvian animals existed before man has been proved wrong. Man, more ferocious than any of them, annihilated them. The idea that man was hunted by wild beasts and feared them is wrong; they feared nothing so much as man, and were hunted by him off the face of his earth. Mistaken also is the idea that, unarmed by nature with talons, tusks or beak, man learned to defend himself against wild beasts with club and flint. It was his inborn natural ferocity which taught him to arm himself for attack or defence against man.

"Les plus féroces de la terre"

The picture which M. Nyst draws of this primitive man and woman and the great family which they rear and their life and death is probably nearer the actual truth than any other which has been attempted—and not many have been attempted. Our author claims that no one else has chosen a period so remote, a period when man was still speechless—his voice only a cry—a cry at which even the lion trembled.

We say the picture is probably nearer the actual truth because none other is so convincing in its uncompromising realism. The best and chief characteristic of this young human couple of a million years ago is their dauntless fortitude—hers no less than his—they two against the world. It is only this woman, little more than a girl, who dares attack this being with muscles like tree roots. He is approaching their first-born, whose cries in the darkness of the cave where their mother has hidden them have attracted him. He had put out his hands as though to take the twins with an object evidently divined by their mother, for she bounds at him like a panther and buries her canines in his wrist. The audacity of the attack disarms his anger, and so this Hercules is made to understand that his little hairy cubs are not to be eaten. Our friend, this young ancestor of a million years ago, was not a cannibal; he simply did not understand. Later, when their mother let him see them and he heard them clucking and gorging on her milk, he knew.

It would be difficult to praise too highly the skill and power with which this romance of primitive man and his surroundings has been constructed by M. Ray Nyst. It is infinitely more interesting than the majority of the novels of the day.

A Romance of To-day

It is probable that some readers of "La Caverne" will think it horrible in parts—terrible is a better word; but take almost any romance of to-day, the latest society novel, and as likely as not we shall find it describes passions as primitive and far more cruel in refined cruelty than any described by M. Nyst.

Our early ancestors did not destroy each other with dynamite and defy each other with Dreadnoughts. In assault and battery they rejoiced, but of forgery and arson they were innocent. They did not live in glass houses, but we cannot throw stones at them.

And all those countless millions of beings who have lived—are they still living? That is the question.

Notes and Announcements

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN has been graciously pleased to accept a copy of Mrs. Macy's book, "In the Beginning," published by Messrs. T. Sealey Clark & Co., Ltd., 1, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C. The subject deals with the book of Genesis written for children, with an introduction by the Bishop of London. Her Majesty the Queen of Norway, Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales and Her Royal Highness Princess Christian have also accepted copies. The book contains ninety illustrations from designs by Mr. Charles Robinson.

"Black Magic" is the title of Miss Marjorie Bowen's new novel, which Mr. Alston Rivers published on Wednesday ast. The story, though founded on a legend of the Papacy (which has ever been surrounded with mystery and magic), is practically new to fiction, and Miss Bowen has done nothing finer than her description of old Rome.

Mr. Heinemann will publish in the autumn Lieutenant Shackleton's book on the Nimrod Antarctic Expedition, which not only penetrated 350 miles further south than any previous expedition, but actually discovered the Southern Magnetic Pole.

A new book, by Professor William James, will be issued by Messrs. Longmans & Co. early in April. The title will be "A Pluralistic Universe," being the Lectures on the Hibbert Foundation delivered at Oxford, 1908.

At the continued sale of the Amherst Library on March 24th the best prices realised were £250 for a Fifteenth Century Book of Hours and £350 for a first edition of "Lactantius," the first Italian printed book, both bought by Mr. Quaritch. The prices realised for the Amherst books and for Shakespeare and Walton go to show it is a mistake to suppose New York is a better market for selling antiquarian books in than London.

The books which so strangely disappeared from Lincoln's Inn Library have been even more strangely restored. We understand the police are still investigating this book mystery.

According to the Australian Book-Lover, American publishers are taking special steps to push their books in Australia.

Messrs. Black are about to include a volume on Hampshire in their series of Colour Books, in which the illustrations will be from water-colours by Wilfrid Ball, and the text from the pen of the Rev. Telford Varley, M.A., B.Sc., of Winchester.

A second edition is announced of Dr. Pennell's book, "Amongst the Wild Tribes of the Afghan Frontier," by Messrs. Seeley. Dr. Pennell is devoting his private means and his life to work amongst these treacherous and revengeful frontier tribes.

A copy of Elizabeth Barrett Browning's poem, "The Battle of Marathon," was recently sold for £97.

Numerous uncommon works in all branches of Natural History are offered for sale in Catalogue No. 91 of Messrs. Bailey Bros. of Newington Butts, London. We are glad to see that their catalogue, and also that Messrs. Lowe Brothers' (Birmingham) Clearance Catalogue, are in light-coloured wrappers; gloomy covers are a mistake.

Messrs. Rivington will publish immediately "A Memoir of Bishop Seabury," the first Bishop of the American Church (1789–1792). It is written by Professor William Jones Seabury, of the Theological Seminary, New York.

Messrs. Rivington also announce "Notes on British History," by William Edwards, M.A.

On March 29th Mr. T. Fisher Unwin will publish a story entitled "The Key of Life," by Miss A. A. Methley, author of "The Identity of Jane" and other novels. The scene is laid in Egypt.

Mr. Unwin is adding to his shilling "Sociology Series" two books on India by Mr. C. J. O'Donnell, M.P., "The Failure of Lord Curzon: a Study in Imperialism" and "The Causes of Present Discontent in India."

In view of the attention at present directed towards Germany it may be well to recall Mr. W. Harbutt Dawson's recent work "The Evolution of Modern Germany" (published by Fisher Unwin), in which, among other things, a study is made of Germany's naval expansion, and of the motives which have inspired it.

Mr. T. N. Foulis will publish an authorised translation in eighteen vols. of the complete works of Nietzsche.

The first festival under the auspices of the Musical League, of which Sir Edward Elgar is President, will be held at the Philharmonic Hall, Liverpool, on September 23rd—25th. The programmes will include chiefly the works of living British composers. Mr. Norman O'Neill, 4, Primrose Villas, Kensington, is the secretary.

The forthcoming double section of the Oxford English Dictionary, which is by Dr. Craigie, contains the words from Ribaldric to Romanite, 3,161 in number.

Messrs. Constable have almost ready for issue a new work by the famous engineer Charles Prelini, whose work on "Tunnelling" is a standard book. In the new volume Professor Prelini deals with "Graphical Determination of Earth Slopes, Retaining Walls and Dams." Though primarily intended for students and teachers, Professor Prelini's book, because of the simplicity and clearness of its method, will also be of help to the practical engineer.

In the "Brush, Pen and Pencil" series, edited by A. E. Johnson and published by A. & C. Black, "Tom Browne" is to be the subject of the next volume. The artists already dealt with are John Hassall and Frank Reynolds. Besides a sketch of the career of the artist under review, each volume includes typical specimens of his work in brush, pen, and pencil.

The volume on "Lausanne," which Messrs. A. & C. Black are publishing, completes Mr. Francis Gribble's series of monographs on the historical and literary associations of the Lake of Geneva. The illustrations in the volume are reproductions in colour from water-colour drawings by J. Hardwicke Lewis and his daughter.

The new novel by Frank Danby, entitled, "An Incompleat Etonian," is announced for publication by Mr. Heinemann on April 2nd.

Mr. Murray will shortly publish Mr. Oliver Onions' new novel, "Little Devil Doubt," which is a satirical study of certain present-day tendencies, which are certainly not uplifting tendencies. The book is divided into four parts.

Mr. Murray will shortly publish in his "Wisdom of the East" series an important work dealing with the youngest religion in the world—the Bahai religion, which had its origin in Persia eighty years ago. The title of the book is "The Splendour of God," and its author, Mr. Eric Hammond, has given extracts from the sacred writings of the Bahais, together with an introduction dealing with the three great prophets of the religion.

Mr. Elliot Stock announces for immediate publication "Balkania, a Short History of the Balkan States," by William Howard-Flanders. The same firm will also publish a new novel by Ethel M. Forbes, "The Love Tale of a Misanthrope."

"Trees and Their Life Histories," by Professor Percy Groom, recently appointed Assistant Professor of Botany at the Imperial College of Science and Technology (our English Charlottenburg), to be completed in thirteen one shilling fortnightly parts, is being issued by Messrs. Cassell. It contains over 100 large plates and 400 smaller ones reproduced from photographs by Henry Irving. The publishers have received numerous requests for the issue of this splendid work in serial form, and the demand is sure to be heavy.

Messrs. Duckworth & Co. announce that the April Number of The English Review will contain an article by the new President of the United States, entitled "Judicial Decisions as an Issue in Politics."

Admirers of the capital novels of Mr. Charles Marriott will welcome "When a Woman Woos" by him, just published by Mr. Nash. Mr. Nash will also publish this month a new and original study of Cardinal Richelieu by Mr. Joseph McCabe, entitled "The Iron Cardinal.

Mr. Eveleigh Nash will publish next week Madame Albanesi's new novel, "Envious Eliza." There will be no other six-shilling novel by Madame Albanesi issued for at least six months.

In a few days Messrs. Longmans & Co. hope to issue, under the title "The Gospel and Human Needs," the Hulsean Lectures recently delivered by Dr. Figgis, of the Community of the Resurrection, Mirfield. In these lectures Dr. Figgis took certain aspects of the attack on orthodox Christianity, and endeavoured to show how many elements, such as the miraculous, the mysterious, the historical elements in the faith, which were the greatest stumbling-block to the theorist, were its real attraction to the man in the street, so far as he is religious.

The March Number of the Review of Reviews contains a novelty in the shape of a critique of Mr. Stead's recently issued book on Madame Olga Novikoff, written by himself.

Messrs. Charles J. Forward & Son's Dinner

MESSRS. CHARLES J. FORWARD & SON, LTD., Wholesale Bookbinders, of 21–27, Hatfield Street, E.C., held their annual staff dinner at the Birkbeck Café on Friday, March 19th.

Mr. Charles W. Forward, the Chairman, said that the alternations between slackness and high pressure that seemed inseparable from modern trading were trying to both employers and workmen. It was serious enough for a firm working at highly competitive prices to have to meet establishment charges, such as rent, heavy rates and taxes, insurance, and many others, during periods when business was almost at a standstill, and not less so for the journeyman who—willing and anxious for remunerative employment—finds himself thrown, firstly on his Society, and secondly on his own slender resources. He felt, however, in spite of bad trade, he could say that his firm occupied a high place so far as regularity of employment was concerned. (Cheers.)

Mr. Thomas Powell, and Mr. S. Stubbings, the Secretaries of the Trade Societies, both expressed the pleasure it gave them to be present on such an occasion. Mr. W. B. Hill, Mr. G. Harman, and others spoke to the various toasts.

PUBLISHERS' REPRESENTATIVES

No. I

MR. W. B. AKERMAN

[Representing Messrs. Chapman & Hall and Messrs. Duckworth]

IT has been said, and no one would be inclined to deny the truth of the statement, that a good traveller is the first essential to every publisher. He is often an important factor in the success of a book, and is, of course, the connecting link between Booksellers and Publishers. We feel, therefore, that our readers will be interested in the series of short biographical sketches which it is our intention to publish from time to time of the representatives, both in town and in the country, of well known publishing houses. We shall choose no particular order in which they shall appear, for that would be difficult. We begin with Mr. W. B. Akerman because—well because—shall we say—because his name begins with an "A"? Yes. That will do, and if next week the subject of our biography begins with an "R," that'll be the reason he's No. 2.

MR. W. B. AKERMAN

Representative of Messrs. Chapman & Hall and Messrs. Duckworth.

It can safely be said that Mr. W. B. Akerman, whose portrait we publish this week, is one of the best known and popular representatives on the road to-day.

He represents Messrs. Chapman & Hall over the whole of the British Isles, excepting the southern counties of England, and has had that privilege since August 1881.

Mr. Akerman, who we understand may be addressed as Billy, William, or Mr. Akerman, in accordance with the grades of familiarity and friendship which may exist between him and you, first became connected with the book trade in 1870, when he started as an assistant to Mr. T. P. Bates, Bookseller, of 152, Western Road, Brighton. Mr. Akerman did not stay at Brighton or in a bookseller's long, for Mr. Bates gave up business in the following year. Mr. Akerman then entered (in 1871) the counting house of Messrs. Ward, Lock & Tyler, when they were located in Amen Corner. Working his way through the country department he was appointed Town Traveller in October, 1874, and six months later went out into the country where he remained until June, 1881. In August of that year he had the opportunity offered of representing the firm of Messrs. Chapman & Hall through the introduction and influence of his old friend the late Mr. E. J. Dodd, of Messrs. Fred Warne & Co. An arrangement was made, or existed, in which Messrs. Chapman & Hall's traveller should also represent Messrs. George Bell & Sons, and Mr. Akerman took the ground for both firms North of Birmingham, Scotland, and Ireland.

In 1892 Messrs. G. Bell & Sons decided to have travellers of their own, and Mr. Akerman's association with that firm ceased. But he has continued to represent Messrs. Chapman & Hall up to to-day, and in conjunction with them from time to time, Messrs. Lawrence & Bullen, Ltd., The Pall Mall Magazine, and Messrs. Harper & Brothers. The second string to his bow to-day is Messrs. Duckworth & Co.

It will be realised that during his 34 years as country traveller, Mr. Akerman has made many friends, and that during his 28 years with Messrs. Chapman & Hall has handled many notable books. Of course all this time he has been selling Dickens's Works, and he still goes on selling them. How many different editions he has introduced to the trade it would be impossible almost to say.

There are two coincidences connected with his career with the famous Dickens' publishers worth mentioning. He started his career in the book trade in the year Dickens died, and he is a descendant of the Mr. Akerman, the Governor of Newgate Gaol who is referred to in "Barnaby Rudge," and we believe he is not a little proud of the fact.

Another distinguished relative of his was John Yonge Akerman, F.S.A., of numismatic and antiquarian fame.

Mr. Akerman lives in Manchester when at home, and is a prominent Mason of the City.

The New American Copyright Law

So far as this country is concerned, the most important features of the new American Copyright Law are the interim protection given to works of British and Irish authors, for which, as we stated last week, thanks are due mainly if not entirely to Mr. Wm. Heinemann—we think we may safely say entirely, for if he had not taken the great trouble he did to get application for the days of grace inserted in the Bill, it is pretty certain they would not have been granted by Congress. The other interesting feature for us is the extension of the duration of copyright in America, including existing copyrights.

Our contemporary Le Droit d'Auteur received a telegram from Mr. R. Underwood Johnson, Secretary of the America Authors' Copyright League, with congratulations on the fact that the new American Law exempts all non-English works from the effect of the manufacturing clause, and that is a very important concession to foreign authors.

The best account we have seen of the effect and objects of the new American Copyright Law is the following from the New York Nation. We are glad to see that the Nation is on the side of the angels as regards that manufacturing clause as a condition of copyright for English authors. The Nation says :—

One Complete Statute

"To the general surprise, the new Copyright Bill passed both houses of Congress. It consists of one complete and consistent copyright statute, in sixty-four sections.

Term of Copyright Lengthened

The term of copyright is lengthened. The Bill leaves the present first term of twenty-eight years unchanged, but provides for a renewal term of twenty-eight years instead of fourteen, thus making possible a period of protection of fifty-six years from the publication of the work. The Bill also provides for the extension of subsisting copyrights.

Definition of What can be Copyright

Copyright may now be secured for all the 'writings' of an author, using the Constitutional expression. In enumerating the classifying works protected by copyright the Bill is more explicit than the present statutes, and adds the following new designations : 'Lectures, sermons, and addresses, prepared for oral delivery' ; 'dramatico-musical compositions' ; 'plastic works of a scientific or technical character' ; 'reproductions of a work of art,' and 'prints and pictorial illustrations,' in lieu of 'engravings,' 'cuts,' and 'chromos' ; and 'works of art' instead of the present specific designations, 'painting,' 'drawings,' 'statue,' and 'statuary.'

Abridgments, Compilations, &c., Can be Copyright

Express provision is made that compilations, abridgments, adaptations, arrangements, dramatisations, or translations and works republished with new matter shall be classed as new works subject to copyright.

Music

As regards a musical work, the Bill provides, as does the present law, that the author shall have the sole right to perform the work publicly for profit, but adds the sole right 'to make any arrangement or setting of it or of the melody of it in any system of notation or any form of record from which it may be read or reproduced.' The composer's control of the reproduction of his music by mechanical instruments is qualified as follows : (a) to cover only music published and copyrighted after the Act goes into effect ; (b) not to include music by a foreign author or composer unless the foreign state or nation of which he is a subject grants to citizens of the United States similar rights ; (c) whenever the owner of a musical copyright has used or permitted or acquiesced in the use of his work upon parts of instruments serving to reproduce mechanically the musical work, any other person may make similar use of the work upon the payment of a royalty of two cents on each part manufactured, notice to be filed in the Copyright Office of such use or license to use by the copyright proprietor.

Extension of the Manufacture in American Clauses

American manufacture is required in the case of a book, not only as regards type-setting in the United States, but 'if the text be produced by lithographic or photo-engraving process, then by a process wholly performed within the limits of the United States.' The provision is also extended to illustrations within a book, and to separate lithographs and photo-engravings, 'except where in either case the subjects represented are located in a foreign country and illustrate a scientific work or reproduce a work of art.' The printing and binding of the book must also be performed within the United States. Photographs are released from the present requirement that they 'shall be printed from negatives made within the United States or from transfers made therefrom.'

Original Text of Foreign Book Exempted from the Manufacture Clause

The 'original text of a book of foreign origin in a language or languages other than English' is also excepted from the requirements of type-setting in the United States.

Mr. Wm. Heinemann's Clause, Interim Protection for 60 Days for English Works

A new ad interim protection is given books printed abroad in the English language. If one complete copy of such book is deposited in the Copyright Office not later than thirty days after publication abroad, copyright is granted for a period of thirty days from the date of receipt of the copy. If an authorised edition of the book is produced from type set in the United States during this second thirty days, the full term of copyright is secured.

Importation of Books for Libraries, &c. Restricted

The much-discussed provisions prohibiting the importation of copyrighted books are considerably modified. The importation of piratical copies of any work copyrighted is prohibited, and the importation of any books, 'although authorised by the author or proprietor,' which have not been produced in accordance with the manufacturing provisions, is prohibited. The Act of 1891 permits importation of books in 'the case of persons purchasing for use and not for sale, who import, subject to the duty thereon, not more than two copies of such book at any one time.' The new Law permits importation, 'not more than one copy at one time, for individual use, and not for sale, and adds the proviso that 'such privilege of importation shall not extend to a foreign reprint of a book by an American author copyrighted in the United States.' The Act of 1891 allows importation in good faith for the use of societies incorporated or established for educational, philosophical, literary, or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning. The new Law confines the privilege to incorporated societies or institutions, but adds scientific societies and 'any State, school, college, university, or free public library' ; but while the Act of 1891 permits 'two copies in any one invoice' to be so imported, the new Law provides for 'not more than one copy of any such book in one invoice' when 'for use and not for sale.'

Infringement of Copyright

In the case of infringement, an injunction may issue, as now, and damages be recovered as well as all the profits due to the infringement. The minimum damage to be recovered is $250, the same as now awarded, but the maximum is placed at $5,000, only half the maximum enacted by present law for infringements of works of fine arts. In the case of an unauthorised newspaper reproduction of a copyrighted photograph it is expressly provided that the damages shall not exceed $200, nor be less than $50, and it is further expressly provided that in no case shall the damage be regarded as a penalty. The old law prescribes that the damage shall be 'for every copy found' in the infringer's possession 'or by him sold or exposed for sale,' whereas by the Act the damages are assessed on 'every infringing copy made or sold by or found in the possession of the infringer or his agents or employers.'

Transfer and Assignment of Copyright

The new Law is more explicit than the old in regard to the transfer of copyright. This is declared to be distinct from the property in the material object copyrighted, and the transfer of the one shall not imply the transfer of the other; but it is provided in express terms that nothing in the Act shall be deemed to forbid, prevent, or restrict the transfer of any copy of a work copyrighted, the possession of which has been lawfully obtained. Copyright may not only be assigned, as the present law provides, but 'be mortgaged' or bequeathed by will, and when an assignment of the copyright in a specified work has been recorded, the assignee may substitute his name for that of the assignor in the statutory notice of copyright. Foreign assignments must be acknowledged before a Consular officer or Secretary of Legation, and all assignments shall be recorded in the Copyright Office."

Mr. George Haven Putnam on the New American Copyright Statute

PUBLISHERS and others interested in copyright will read with interest the following letter from Mr. G. H. Putnam, the well-known American Publisher and Secretary of The American Publishers' Copyright League. It is probably well within the truth to say that no man has done so much in the best interests of Copyright in America as Mr. Geo. Haven Putnam. As we had already in type the New York Nation's excellent résumé of the new Statute, it is unnecessary to repeat that which Mr. Putnam kindly sends, though we may refer to some points in it later on. Thanks to Mr. Arthur Spurgeon we were able last week to give the first announcement in England of the 60 days' grace being accorded to English books, due to Mr. Heinemann's efforts, seconded by our friends among the American publishers.—ED. P.C.

DEAR MR. MARSTON,—I am enclosing with this proof of an analysis and summary that I am bringing into print in the Publishers' Weekly of the copyright statute which secured enactment during the last hours of the Sixtieth Congress.

In certain respects, the statute is by no means what the authors, publishers, and copyright lawyers had hoped to secure.

In regard to several important provisions their counsel and conclusions were put to one side, and some undesirable modifications and interpolations were made in the Bill during the later months, and in the final draft of the Bill during the last days of the session, without any opportunity being given for consideration on the part of the authors, publishers, and copyright lawyers. The result of this ill-considered legislation is emphasised in the enclosed summary.

On the other hand, it is proper to bear in mind that in certain respects the new law will represent a material advance in copyright conditions over the existing statute.

The authors and publishers of continental works will have special reason for satisfaction in the abolition, as far as books originating abroad in language other than English are concerned, of the manufacturing provision. This enables a French or a German author to secure immediate and complete protection for his book in the United States during the term of copyright by the simple process of filing two copies of the work in the original version within thirty days of its publication in the country of origin.

It was not possible, in connection with the peculiar relation between the two markets and the antagonism of the manufacturing interests (typographical unions, &c.) to consider even any abolition of the manufacturing requirement for books originating abroad in English. We did, however, succeed in shaping a provision under which the author of an English book, instead of having to bring it into publication in the United States "not later than the date of its issue in London," secures a term of practically sixty days within which to complete the production of the authorised American edition. This change will constitute a decided convenience for English authors and publishers, and for American publishers having transatlantic relations.

I may remind you that in this respect the English law is now less hospitable or liberal than the American statute.

The requirement that publication shall be made in England not later than the date of publication elsewhere has caused the loss of the English copyright of quite a number of English books of importance, and the number of American books thus affected or restricted will naturally increase from year to year.

I trust that, with this American precedent, those who are interested in shaping a revised statute for Great Britain will give consideration to the desirability of securing also in the British law a period of thirty or sixty days within which the requirements for bringing the book into publication in Great Britain can be complied with.

The provisions that the American publishers have the most ground to criticise, and which were by our copyright lawyers characterised as incompatible with a consistent or equitable copyright, will not be likely to bring out any particular criticism in Great Britain, where the English publisher and the English bookseller are, as a result of the permission given for the importation of English editions of American copyrighted books, placed in a position of decided advantage as compared with their American competitors. One result, however, is the fact that the American publisher is not permitted to secure adequate control of the American market for the English book, the American copyright of which he has acquired, and such copyright will, therefore, possess less value, and the price to be paid for it, whether going to the English publisher (for a joint publishing undertaking) or to an English author, must in the end be correspondingly reduced.

I am expecting to be in England on or about May 1st, and shall hope to have an opportunity of a personal word with you.

I am,
Yours faithfully,
GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM.

A Song of the Sea-Folk

Go, sail your tanks! Who was it spanned the seas,
Logged them and sounded them, gave you course and chart?
Hudson, Cook, Franklin—have ye men like these?
Lord! Ye can follow. Leading was our part!

Load in your cargoes; take them where ye like;
We've taught the fear of God and law of man
To black, brown, yellow—taught with shell and pike.
Your flag flies safe where our flag led the van.

Get up your anchors, trim your yards and go;
But when the capstan's manned or sail is furled,
Whose songs d'ye sing? The gray-backed billows know

Then launch your ships, and take the open seas.
Man! There's the struggle that no folk avoids
By coddling coastwise laws and subsidies—
Ship to ship, mark ye! how d'ye class at Lloyd's?

"The A.B.C. of the Royal Navy"

A MORE opportune moment could scarcely have been chosen for the publication of a book about the Royal Navy. Interest in the question of "Dreadnoughts" to be or not to be shows as yet no signs of flagging, and booksellers should seize the opportunity for making a good display of naval literature. The A.B.C. of the Royal Navy is just the sort of book wanted by "the man in the street," it tells him exactly what he wants to know, clearly and concisely.

It is compiled by Herbert Russell with a foreword by Admiral W. H. Henderson, and contains over 30 excellent half-tone illustrations of the newest battleships, submarines, torpedoes, guns, &c. The letterpress comprises Warship Classes, Ships of the Royal Navy, Comparative Naval Strength 1909, Tactics and Formations, Distinctions and Functions, Guns and Armour and the Personnel of the Fleet, &c.

The most striking cover design has been specially designed by Mr. Hassall, and we have no hesitation in recommending the book. We give a reproduction of one of the many excellent illustrations.

The British Tar in Fact and Fiction

Just on the beach arrived, with great surprise,
Tom sees his Molly; him too Molly spies;
"What! is it thou?" with open arms, she cries.

IT was with as great surprise as that of Molly that we found this most interesting and attractive work on "The British Tar" is published by American publishers (Harper & Brothers). In his Preface Commander Charles N. Robinson, whose pen has done such good service in the interests of the British Navy, tells us that the book is "an attempt to contrast the real with the ideal; to place, as it were, in parallel columns the descriptions handed down to us of the seaman in various periods of our history, and to deduce from the characters, as we find them drawn for us by pen and graver, the typical sailor himself, his qualities, and his environment."

There can, we think, be no doubt as to the success with which Commander Robinson has carried out his design, and the following list of Section Headings will give a good idea of the scope of the work: The Place of the Sea Officer and Seaman in Naval History; The British Tar in Historical Literature, Biography, Pamphlet, and Satire; in Mystery, Pageant, Comedy and Dramatic Literature; in Sea Stories, Novels, Magazines and Chap Books; in Poems, Ballads, Songs and Doggerel—The Seaman and Sea Life in Pictorial Art. There are more than a hundred illustrations and a capital Index. Although not mentioned by the Editor, it is impossible not to be impressed by the all-powerful inspiring influence which woman has always had for our British tars; the incentive to brave all perils of sea and war was the vision of home and an English lass as a reward. Nelson would not have conquered ill-health, ill-treatment and the French, but for the inspiration of Lady Hamilton. No one who reads his letters can think otherwise. As long as our sailors and soldiers are inspired by England, Home, and Beauty, there need be no fear that they will not do their duty. In view of the frightful hardships British tars have had to suffer nothing but some powerful influence such as that referred to could have steeled them to endure them.

MENTION THE "P.C."—Our readers who order books &c., they see mentioned or advertised in THE PUBLISHERS CIRCULAR will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

Edinburgh Book Notes

BY "EDINA."

IT is now only a century since Edinburgh distinguished herself by being the pioneer of modern Encyclopædic literature, and the announcement has just been made that an Edinburgh firm—Messrs. R. & R. Clark—have secured the contract for printing the ELEVENTH EDITION of the "Encyclopæidia Britannica." This is computed as running to twenty-eight volumes. It is being entirely re-written and will be brought out in first-class form. The order is a large one; for it is a work which is only placed in the best hands to compile. One wonders what will become of the Ninth Edition, which is now thirty-five years behind the times, for I suppose we must look upon the "Times" Supplement as the Tenth. Talking of Encyclopædias recalls an incident which came under my own observation, showing how some publishers manage things on the cheap. A friend, who is an authority on a certain branch of engineering, one morning a few years ago received a slip proof of a penny-a-liner article dealing with his speciality. Accompanying this was a note, asking him, as a favour, to look over this article, correct any mistakes and add any notes he might think of advantage. A draft for ten dollars was enclosed, and he was politely desired to sign and return the enclosure within ten days. He brought the note to me to ask my advice. I advised him to return it, declining the honour with thanks. The Encyclopædia appeared in due course with a name attached which was unknown, except in his own workshop. Some three months later I met an American expert in another department of engineering whose name I had seen attached to another article which I know had never been written by him. I drew his attention to a statement in that article which was too ambiguous to be the product of a man with his practical knowledge. He at once said he had felt very angry at the fact that the publication had his name attached to an article he had only been asked to correct, a task he had received a similar sum for as was offered to my friend. But on complaining to the publishers they smilingly produced the article in copy and showed him his own signature. He had been had. I have no doubt that many others were similarly dealt with. I now see the publication I refer to puffed by advertisements in American and Colonial newspapers, and feel I should like to know the opinions of some of the practical men who consult its pages upon the matter which appears to have been contributed by experts in all branches of Science, Trade, Commerce, Literature, Arts, &c.

I have good grounds for saying that the Encyclopædia Britannica has not been compiled upon these lines by Messrs. A. & C. Black, who for the past two generations have been responsible for its appearance. There is just one point on which, from extensive reference to its pages, I can suggest an improvement: the printing of sub-sections of an article in such a way that reference can at once be made without having to read over the whole article. To most of those who consult an Encyclopædia time is a valuable commodity, and what is wanted is the precise information required, expressed lucidly, but in the tersest possible language. Mr. Spofford, the Librarian of Congress at Washington, used to say, "Most people waste their time reading and thinking over verbiage, instead of grasping and developing ideas."

There was a strike threatening in the printing trade here recently, but I am glad to see that wiser counsel seems to have been followed.

In most of the big establishments—with, I think, the exception of Messrs. T. & A. Constable—it has been tight work this winter to keep things going, and one shop has worked only three days a week. This is not due to lack of enterprise. We have to consider that the public have within these last few years been taught to expect their literature for the nominal sum it costs to set and print it. If we are to follow this up, all our fiction will ere long appear first in sixpenny form, and what is worth preserving may afterwards be issued at 6s. The author, being the monopolist, may demur, but must remember that the public, in the absence of his book, has plenty to choose from. No man has ever yet managed to digest over 750 volumes per annum, and he has 30,000 fresh titles always at his call in the same period. Still, there is room for us all at the top of the ladder.

The bookshops show little sign as yet of the revival of trade; but a more hopeful feeling prevails, and orders are more easy for the standard books. Cash is still tight, but it is better to see a slow upward movement than sudden booms and collapses.

Nature's way is grow, grow, grow. Slowly for the sturdy oak, quickly for the mushroom. Mushroom booksellers are not the kind the public have placed their confidence in.

The Booksellers' Provident Institution

THE Monthly Meeting of the Board of Directors of the above Institution was held at 56, Old Bailey, E.C., on Thursday, March 18th, C. J. Longman, Esq., in the chair. Other members of the Board present were Messrs. A. T. Aldridge (Taylor & Co.), C. A. Ashley (Wells Gardner, Darton & Co., Ltd.), H. E. Barton (Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Ltd.), W. Bartram (Longmans, Green & Co.), J. R. Blade (Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Ltd.), J. Clark, J. Cooper (W. & R. Chambers, Ltd.), E. H. Cooke (George Philip & Sons, Ltd.), J. Foster (Macmillan & Co., Ltd.), C. H. Hollingsworth (Macmillan & Co., Ltd.), W. H. Jelpkè (Longmans, Green & Co.), G. H. Johnson (Reeves & Turner), W. A. Kelk (Longmans, Green & Co.), F. H. Lamb (Willing & Co., Ltd.), C. T. Langford (Macmillan & Co., Ltd.), F. Long (Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Ltd.), A. W. Nott, W. G. Reynolds (Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Ltd.), F. J. Rymer (Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.), E. Shallis (Macmillan & Co., Ltd.), C. A. Spon (E. & F. Spon), J. E. Stroulger (Rivingtons), C. Whitaker (J. Whitaker & Sons, Ltd.) and the Secretary Mr. George Larner.

The sum of £120 was voted towards the relief of members and widows of members; this included grants towards the funeral expenses of two members and the widow of a member.

Miss E. Brennand, Miss M. Stanford and Mr. G. A. Middleweek were elected members of the Institution, and three further applications were received.

The gentlemen to serve on the various committees during the year were balloted for and elected.

The Secretary announced the receipt of the following donations—£2 2s. (from Mr. T. D. Galpin), £1 1s. (from Messrs. Morgan & Scott), and £1 1s. (from Mr. F. W. Hallett).

The Booksellers' Provident Retreat

Preceding the Annual General Meeting of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, on Tuesday, March 16th, at Stationers' Hall, the Annual Meeting of the Retreat was held. Mr. William Bartram presided; other gentlemen present were Messrs. C. A. Ashley, J. H. H. Barnard, J. Cooper, J. Foster, H. W. Goodman, W. H. Jelpkè, G. H. Johnson, F. P. Minoggio, F. J. Rymer, Joseph Shaylor, and the Secretary, Mr. George Larner.

The Auditors' Report for the year 1908 was adopted.

Mr. Bartram said that the past year had been an uneventful one in the history of the Retreat, but a quite satisfactory one. The inmates of the houses were all in fairly good health, which, he thought, spoke well for the salubrity of their surroundings. He was able to congratulate them on the Balance Sheet showing the receipts and expenditure during the year. The expenditure had decreased about £38, and their capital showed a corresponding increase. In response to Mr. Longman's appeal for more members, made at the Annual General Meeting of the Institution of March 12th last year, he was able to announce a total increase in their membership of six.

Mr. Joseph Shaylor, in supporting Mr. Bartram, remarked that the latter had left little to be said; but he would like to add that anyone who had had the good luck to have paid a visit to their Retreat at Abbots Langley and its beautiful grounds would marvel that so much could be done for such a small cost of maintenance as was placed before them in the balance sheet.

The officers and committee for the present year were then elected, and the proceedings terminated with a very hearty vote of thanks to the chairman.

Authors' Club

SINCE the removal of the Authors' Club to their new premises at No. 2, Whitehall Court, overlooking the Embankment Gardens, the membership has augmented so rapidly that an entrance fee is shortly to be re-imposed. Amongst the latest candidates enrolled are the Bishop of Ripon (Dr. Boyd Carpenter), Canon Glazebrook, Canon Stevenson, Professors Walter Raleigh and Sayce, of Oxford, Professors Gardner and Savory, of London University, Professor Delépine, of Manchester, Professor Seth, of Edinburgh, Professor Lane-Poole, of Trinity College, Dublin, Dr. Dudden, Fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Dr. Knipe, Principal of Wolsey Hall, Oxford, besides a long list of prominent novelists and contributors to other departments of literary work.

*The Woman in the Car

THERE have been many books on motoring, but none dealing exclusively with motoring for women. It is fitting, therefore, that the world's champion among women motorists, Miss Dorothy Levitt, should be the author of the first handbook devoted to the assistance of her sex in the art of motoring. Miss Levitt's book is by no means a dry technical guide. It is rather an instructive chat with women who either do drive, or want to drive, their own car. There are chapters discussing the cost of a car and its accessories, and also the other expenses entailed; on the all-important subject of dress; on the necessary knowledge of the simple machinery; on how to deal with troubles which may crop up; on motoring manners and customs, and lessons on how to drive, &c. Being published by Mr. John Lane it is needless to say it is well illustrated and well produced.

Book Notes from Sheffield

BY "THE DON"

THE month has been an uneventful one in the book trade, sales being below the average of this period of the year, and until things mend in the state of the local industries no improvement is expected. Some of the dividends declared by the large steel concerns have proved disappointing. The reductions have seriously affected the incomes of many people and curtailed their spending money. There is plenty of confidence, however, in the future of local trades, it being recognised that ebb and flow is one of the laws of commerce.

A new library which has been presented to the Sheffield University by Mr. Edgar Allen at a cost of £10,000 is now completed, and the authorities have secured a promise from His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to visit Sheffield early next month to perform the opening ceremony. Octagon in shape, the building is a distinct addition to Sheffield's architecture. It is detached from the main buildings of the University as a safeguard against fire. It is planned to house 125,000 volumes, and will accommodate 105 readers.

A valuable movement from the point of view of the booksellers is the series of literature classes conducted by Mr. Joseph Batey, headmaster of one of the Council schools. Although carried on in connection with the evening school system of the Education Committee, these classes have appealed to a much wider constituency, and for three years have been attended by many adults of both sexes desirous of learning about books and authors. Mr. Batey's plan is to select some great writer or a notable period of history; in the latter case several books bearing on the subject being selected for study. For instance, this season one group of classes is taking Shakespeare, a second, Wordsworth, and a third, "The French Revolution." All the students must, of course, buy books, and many who have passed through the classes who previously cared nothing for literature are now regular and enthusiastic readers. The movement is certainly doing more than anything else to encourage reading and a love of literature, and deserves the support of the book trade.

Sheffield possesses a Dickens Fellowship and a Shakespeare Society, which, when formed a few years ago attracted members in crowds. Since then interest in them has waned, a large proportion of the members having either resigned or ceased to attend the meetings.

The fact is, many people join such societies who have no taste for literature nor any longing to become litterateurs; but they think that membership gives them a sort of reputation for scholarliness. Another inducement is the probability of being able to mingle with literary and scholarly folk. Were the local booksellers fully alive to their own interests they would take an active part in making such societies as these influential and successful, but they have hitherto displayed lamentable apathy.

Rumours have been current, and certain newspapers have given publicity to them, that Harmsworth's, or other publishers, intend to start an evening paper in Sheffield. Enquiries show that there exists no foundation for them.

The annual dinner of the Master Printers of Sheffield this month gathered together a company of 50 printers, booksellers and stationers, under the presidency of Mr. J. W. Northend. The speeches disclosed nothing of an exceptional nature in the conditions of the trade, although there were the customary complaints of price cutting, and it was said that some local printers regularly ignored the usages of the craft.

A SHEFFIELD PUBLISHER HONOURED

Mr. Henry Pawson, a Sheffield printer and publisher, was the recipient this month of a distinguished mark of appreciation from the Freemasons of the City and District. His portrait has been painted in oils and hung in the Masonic Hall, and at the public presentation the leading Masons of Sheffield and Yorkshire gathered in strong force, and said some highly complimentary things about the subject of the picture. For 35 years Mr. Pawson has promoted and served the craft with zeal and enthusiasm, and he has filled the highest offices.

Mr. Pawson is the senior partner in Pawson & Brailsford, Art Printers, Publishers and Booksellers, the business which he directs being one of the most important in the provinces. Works of universal importance have been produced in the firm's publishing department, as well as a host of local and trade publications, which have proved of great assistance to the local industries. Mr. Pawson is one of the best known and most popular figures in the commercial and social life of Sheffield, where he fills a position of great influence. There is no busier man in the city, yet notwithstanding the innumerable calls upon his time and energies he is always found cheerful, obliging and approachable. Mr. Pawson has done much to make the annual Cutlers' Feast the successful and important function which it now is. Every succeeding Master when planning the arrangements for the great banquet seeks to avail himself of Mr. Pawson's wide experience, sound judgment and unfailing tactfulness, knowing that the risk of friction or failure will be avoided thereby.

Notes from Provincial Towns

[Under this heading we propose giving every week brief notes of book matters from the various provincial towns. We invite booksellers to send us any items likely to be of interest and use to the trade generally.]

GODALMING

This being a small town the general book trade is very limited, and nothing happens of sufficient interest to your readers to report.

NORWICH

M. Privet's Seventh Lecture on French Poets of the Nineteenth Century on Saturday last dealt with Rene Francois Armand (Sully Prud'homme Armand) 1839–1907, and Francis Capper, 1842–1906. The annual "Shakespearian Evening" was held on Tuesday last at the Norwich New City Assembly Rooms, Mr. E. J. Turner presided over a large and appreciative audience.

PORTSMOUTH

I am afraid that Portsmouth, so far as bookselling is concerned, is a dead city. A half-yearly report would be depressing reading, to say nothing of a monthly one. "Books which are selling well." I believe there is a little doing from time to time in well-bound Prayer Books, otherwise things are a little more dead than usual. Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son have managed to galvanise a few inhabitants into subscribing for some magazines. If some of them complete the series or volume there will probably be some business provided in binding or getting cases for them. That is about all I can report.

RAMSGATE

This is such a small, uneventful town and district that scarcely anything of interest to other booksellers happens that is worth reporting. There are few book buyers, and these buy chiefly the cheap series of books, as do the majority of visitors we get.

SALISBURY

Scarcely anything of sufficient interest to readers of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR happens here in a twelvemonth. No one changes, no one dies, no one is married, and no book sells well, we go on our way just awake and trusting in the future.

MESSRS. BOWES & BOWES, of 1, Trinity Street, Cambridge, have just issued a Catalogue (No. 329) of second-hand books, including Alpine and Climbing, Archæology, Art, Bibliography, Church History, Classical Languages and Literature, Economics and Social Questions, Education, English History and Literature, Eton, French Literature, Germany, Greece, History, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Law, Sciences, America, Africa, &c.

Messrs. Gale & Polden's Catalogues

BOOKSELLERS having customers for military books, &c., should apply to Messrs. Gale & Polden, Ltd., London, Aldershot and Portsmouth, for copies of their excellent and complete catalogues. Messrs. Gale & Polden have every description of handbook likely to be required by officers and men of the Territorial and Regular Forces. They are also publishers of athletic books.

The Twentieth Century New Testament

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY NEW TESTAMENT, published by Messrs. H. Marshall & Son, is a translation into modern English from the original Greek (Westcott and Hort's Text).

A handsome new edition in large print has just been published. It is done in the following editions:—Popular edition in green cloth; limp cloth, gilt top; leather gilt edges; green or black calf presentation edition, India paper, gilt edges, in box. It makes an appropriate Easter gift.

In view of the coming holiday season, Messrs. Greening have arranged to publish another volume written by Mr. A. G. Folliott Stokes, entitled "From the Land's End to the Lizard."

Messrs. Cassell & Co.'s Staff Dinner

THE staff dinner of Cassell & Company was held at the Trocadero Restaurant on Wednesday evening last. Previous to the dinner a reception was held by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Spurgeon in the Alexandra Room. There was a large company present, including the heads of the numerous departments and representatives of the Editorial staff. Great harmony prevailed, and this, no doubt, was in some measure due to the very successful launching last week of the New Magazine and the fact that the Directors were able to announce at the annual meeting the other day the payment of a dividend. Mr. Arthur Spurgeon, the General Manager, was in the chair, with Mrs. Spurgeon on his left. Amongst others present were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. Foster Fraser, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tibbits, Mr. and Mrs. Newman Flower, Mr. T. Young, and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Bartley. The toast of "The House of Cassell" was ably proposed by Mr. W. Smith, and was responded to by Mr. Arthur Spurgeon. In the course of a splendid speech he thanked the members of the staff for the manner in which they had helped and supported him duringthe critical period they had recently passed through, and hoped that this year, the Diamond Jubilee of the firm, would be a record one. He also took the opportunity of introducing Mr. Bain-Irvine, the new Manager of the Wholesale Subscribers Department, and Mr. Herbert Williams, who is to take charge of the Quiver. Mr. T. Young proposed the toast of "The Ladies," which was charmingly responded to by Mrs. J. Foster Fraser. Not the least interesting feature of a very enjoyable evening was the speech by Mr. J. Foster Fraser in which he detailed some of his exciting experiences whilst travelling (without a permit) through Manchuria. Each guest was presented with a copy of a special number of "The Cassellite," in which facetious references to the various members of the staff caused considerable amusement, while appreciation of this souvenir of so happy an evening was added to by the inclusion of a signed photograph of Mr. Arthur Spurgeon in each copy. An excellent musical programme was contributed to by Miss Edith Serpell, Mr. Alexander Webster, Mr. Harrison Hill, Mr. Walter Churcher, and Mr. Davidson Wilson.

Some Fiction in "Everyman's Library"

A CONSIDERABLE number of the 50 new volumes of "Everyman's Library" are novels. There are five by Anthony Trollope; Victor Hugo's masterpiece, "Les Misérables," in 2 vols.; Lytton's "Pilgrims of the Rhine"; Marryat's "Percival Keene" and "Settlers in Canada"; and three or more of Jules Verne's terribly thrilling and absolutely harmless, stories abundantly illustrated; and "Uncle Tom's Cabin," to which the Everyman reprint will, we hope, give a new lease of life.

Glasgow Book Trade Notes

BY "MUNGO"

BUSINESS still continues very flat, and the season of maps, guide books, and cheap reprints is at hand. Why is it that a man owning a handsome motor car, for which he must have paid or be owing several hundred pounds, usually grudges a few shillings for a good map; or the opulent city man, bent on going to Europe, demands a guide book for a shilling?

To those who are content to spend their holidays in the home country Scotland is full of pleasant surprises; and a little book just published in Paisley, though not a guide book, will open one's eyes to the possibilities of the West Highlands. This is "Literary Tours in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland," by D. T. Holmes.

When considering the matter of public libraries the name of Carnegie immediately comes before the mind, but among the outlying villages and hamlets in Scotland another power has been at work, though in a much quieter way, and Mr. James Coats, Junior, of Paisley, is the benefactor who has scattered libraries throughout the Hebrides, and from the Shetlands to Roxburghshire.

Not content with this he employed Mr. Holmes to visit these places, and by means of lectures act as guide, philosopher and friend to the reader. But it must not be assumed that because a village is off the beaten track that the natives are strangers to things intellectual. Mr. Holmes, in his delightfully discursive volume, tells us of tiny clachans possessing literary societies, and of a store keeper in Scalloway, in the Shetland Islands, who confessed to Homer being his favourite poet, and when asked which translation he read, surprised the author by saying he preferred to read him in the original Greek. Or listen to a Highland laird: "I am very fond of poetry, but I turn with very languid interest to modern poets. I do not know at what particular time literary nausea sets in, but Soloman had it when he said that of the making of books there was no end . . . and after the paternal psaltery he would turn wearily from the presentation copies of new verse sent by the rising poets of India."

It is, of course, natural to expect cases of bigotry cropping up in the more remote parts of the Highlands, where hymns and organs are looked on with distrust; and we are told of a teacher who refused to tell the class the story of Little Red Riding-Hood, on the ground that it was a lie, as "wolves do not speak; no animal speaks." The inspector unwisely referred to Balaam's ass, whereupon the dominie nearly swooned at the impiety of comparing that inspired animal with a secular beast like Grimm's wolf.

A story that contains a useful hint to those suffering from Sabbath drowsiness tells of a Liverpool sportsman of the name of Oath who shot a keeper in the right eye. "He gave him a handsome present and a fine new glass eye; we call that eye 'Oath's Memorial Window,' and the keeper can sleep during the sermon now without anybody knowing, provided he does not snore."

Baedeker Guides

FROM the booksellers' point of view these admirable guides have always been looked upon as one of their safest investments. It will interest them, therefore, to know that their publication in this country and the Colonies has now been taken over by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin; the arrangement between Mr. Unwin and Mr. Baedeker coming into force on April 1st this year. Considering the interests of the Trade generally, Mr. Unwin, during the early stages of the negotiations, took the opportunity of placing before Mr. Baedeker the desirability of making the Guides net publications. The result is that we have the great pleasure to announce that from April 1st onwards Baedeker's Guides will be net. In other words, the English published price will be the same as on the Continent and the world over, and therefore, in addition to being a safe investment, they will be a source of greater profit to the bookseller. Indeed, we understand that the trade terms on which Mr. Unwin will sell them will ensure even more substantial profits than are usual on ordinary net publications. Mr. Unwin is an ardent advocate of the net system, and it will be remembered that immediately on being appointed by the Government sole wholesale agent for the small scale Ordnance Survey Maps he took steps to induce the Government to have the sheets issued at net prices. The growth of Mr. Unwin's business may be marked by the fact that, in addition to his very general publishing business, he is now the publisher of—Baedeker Guides, Ordnance Survey Maps (small scale), Alf Cooke's Toy Books, and Indian Government Publications.

Captain Cook Memorial

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES has graciously consented to become Honorary Chairman of the General Committee formed to promote the erection in London of a memorial in honour of Captain Cook, the great navigator and explorer. The proposal was originated by a letter from Sir Joseph Carruthers, K.C.M.G., ex-Prime Minister of New South Wales, which appeared in the London Press last November, urging that the capital of the Empire should not be without a monument to the man who laid the foundation of the present greatness of Australia and New Zealand. The subject was brought before the executive committee of the British Empire League by Mr. Herbert Samuel, Member of Parliament for the Cleveland District of Yorkshire, of which Cook was a native. A provisional committee was appointed, and has organised an exceedingly influential general committee, of which Lord Brassey has consented to be the treasurer.

Nash's Magazine

Nash's Magazine, published to-day, contains, as Mr. Nash promised, contributions by a list of first-rate authors. There is little need to criticise or to praise the writings of Rudyard Kipling, Max Pemberton, "Rita," Mrs. C. N. Williamson, Rider Haggard, Anthony Hope, William Le Queux, H. A. Vachell, Barry Pain, J. J. Bell, Morley Roberts, Alice and Claude Askew, Frank Richardson, and Gilbert Littlestone. "Queen Sheba's Ring," a serial story by Rider Haggard, leaves the reader, like Oliver Twist, asking for more. Mr. William Le Queux's contribution, "The Mystery of the Fountain Pen," is all too short, but further exciting incidents in the amazing career of "Tibbie," alias Lady Sybil Sheringham, are promised. "Little Foxes," by Rudyard Kipling, grows more comical from page to page. The first half of "The Fight for Lord Arpenhoe," by Anthony Hope, gives promise of some very interesting reading in next month's issue. These and some ten other stories make up a splendid number. The matter for wonder is how the work of such writers can be sold in such attractive form at so small a price as 6d. net.

£1,085 for "Compleat Angler"

AT Messrs. Sotheby's rooms yesterday a perfect copy of the first edition of Izaak Walton's "Compleat Angler" realised £1,085. Though a high price, this is not a record, another copy having been sold for £1,290 in the Van Antwerp sale at the same rooms in 1907.—Daily Mail, March 20th, 1909.

Fairbairns' Book of Crests

MESSRS. T. C. & E. C. JACK have published the fourth edition, revised and enlarged of that standard work, Fairbairns' "Book of Crests of the Families of Great Britain and Ireland," 2 vols., ryl. 4to., at the reduced price of 25s. net; the work was originally published at £3 3s. net. It contains 43,000 entries of names of people who have a crest, with description of the same, and there are upwards of 4,000 engravings. It is a most valuable and interesting work.

A New Light on the Renaissance

MESSRS. J. M. DENT & Co. have just published "A New Light on The Renaissance Displayed in Contemporary Emblems," by Harold Bayley.

It is impossible in a short notice to give an adequate idea of the importance and charm of this handsome volume. It forms a comprehensive study of Mediæval Symbolism, gives us a new point of view about such legends as the Holy Grail and the Romaunt of the Rose, and demonstrates the persistence of certain emblems for century after century from the time when they first emerged from the civilisation of Provence. The first chapter deals with "Paper-making and the Albigenses," and we are reminded that the craft of paper-making is nearly 200 years older than that of printing, and that it was at first almost entirely in the hands of this industrious people. Watermarks first appeared in 1282, and until the latter half of the Eighteenth Century they form an unbroken chain of emblems enshrining the aspirations and traditions of the Middle Ages. Mr. Bayley concludes, after an exhaustive exposition of the evidence, that the Renaissance was the direct result of the influence exercised by paper-makers, printers, and other artisans, and that in consequence "the Nursing Mother of the Renaissance" was not Italy but the Provencal district of France. Chapters are also devoted to Religious Emblems, Emblems of Persecution and Preaching, The Kabbalah,—a deeply interesting one to "The Invention of Printing," others to Printers' Devices and the Transference of Woodblocks. There is much that is new in the book, much that will doubtless give rise to controversy, but the discriminating will find much delightful reading within its covers, and the artist will turn to it again and again for the sake of the 400 facsimiles of woodcuts, emblems, tail-pieces, devices, &c. The get up of the volume calls also for a word of praise, and the indexing has been carefully done.

ENGLISH BOOK-TRADE BIBLIOGRAPHY

DEAR SIR,—It may interest you to read, in connection with the article, "A Commonwealth Bookseller," in P.C., February 27th (p. 277), pages 21–34 in a book entitled "Three Centuries of English Book-Trade Bibliography," dedicated to Mr. Edward Marston, and published in 1903 in an English edition by Sampson Low, Marston & Co. In fact, that book might interest anyone who wished to write on English book trade bibliography.

Yours,
A. GROWOLL.

Office of The Publishers' Weekly,
298, Broadway, New York.
March 8th.

[We are much obliged to Mr. Growoll for this very considerate reminder that our calling William London of Newcastle "The First English Bibliographer" was a gross error as Andrew Maunsell over 60 years previously had published what was probably the first English book-trade catalogue. There were other catalogues before London's, including William Jaggard's (1619), and London was thus not entitled to claim as he did of his Catalogue (1658) that "The like work was never yet performed by any." We are glad that our blunder gives an opportunity to say a good word again for Mr. Growoll's excellent book, and to express our hope that he has quite recovered from his recent illness.—ED. P.C.]

SMITH'S CATALOGUE RAISONNÉ

DEAR SIR,—In your issue of to-day Messrs. Macmillan & Co. say that they are surprised that anyone has been found to take exception to the term "obsolete" being now applied to John Smith's celebrated Catalogue Raisonné.

In view of the fact that as yet only two volumes of Dr. de Groot's Catalogue Raisonné have appeared, the disparaging comparison with our reprint of John Smith's Catalogue contained in Messrs. Macmillan's long letter is, to say the least of it, premature; and in fairness to ourselves and to the members of the trade who have stocked our edition, we would draw the attention of Messrs. Macmillan and the numerous readers of their letter who may have thereby formed an erroneous opinion of the respective value of the two works, to an article signed by Mr. W. Roberts, whose authority on such matters is beyond dispute, which appeared in the Athenæum of March 6th. In it Mr. Roberts says —

"John Smith's Catalogue Raisonné of the works of the most eminent Dutch, Flemish and French painters, of which Messrs. Sands have just issued a literal reprint, is a remarkable book, and has maintained an undisputed authority as a work of reference for just eighty years. . . . . Dr. de Groot's Catalogue of Dutch Painters will not even when completed entirely supersede Smith's Catalogue, for Dr. de Groot has confined his scholarly attention entirely to Dutch painters, and has thrown overboard the Flemish and French painters, who find a place in Smith. . . . The appearance of this admirable reprint en bloc of nine volumes is a sort of retribution. A book in constant demand, it has of late years been the sport of the second-hand booksellers. . . . Picture dealers are usually well able to pay a good price for an indispensable work of reference; but there are others to be considered—people to whom such a book as Smith's Catalogue is absolutely essential and to whom thirty or forty pounds is a very serious outlay."

No one will dispute the value of Dr. de Groot's work; every year the records of picture sales and the libraries of art lovers require to be supplemented; but equally so no one can say that time and research will ever lessen the value of John Smith's invaluable appreciation of the great masters mentioned in his volumes, their methods and technique, and his masterly criticism of their paintings. It would be equally unfair to say that when the tenth volume of Dr. de Groot's work appears his earlier volumes will be obsolete. But the same argument might apply in the one case as in the other. In reality, both Smith and De Groot are indispensable, and there is room for both.—Yours, &c.,

THE BOOKING-FEE QUESTION

DEAR SIR,—In reply to "Moderate," I am well aware that the 2d. is a charge made by the carriers on each parcel received by them, but my contention is that the publishers getting their full profits—having no half book to allow, as a rule, on these small orders—are much better able to pay this 2d. than the booksellers are.

As to the suggested remedy, that the carriers be asked to forego the booking-fee, I understand on enquiry that this is altogether out of the question—to do so would simply mean higher contracts.

The amazing thing is that the booksellers are so apathetic on these matters affecting their vital interests. Why do we not strenuously and unitedly agitate for better terms? Any other body of business men would if working under similar conditions.

Yours faithfully,
HENRY R. FIRMIN.

BOOKSELLERS' BLUNDERS

DEAR SIR,—Mr. A. C. Madan is an Oxford scholar and Swaheli is an East African language. The Oxford scholar has written both a dictionary and grammar of the East African language. This is how they are advertised for on page 170 of your issue for January 30th (the last to reach us here).

Madam Swahili's Dictionary]]
——————— Grammar

Book blunders are often very amusing, and I have from time to time noticed some extraordinary specimens of classification. Of course titles are often misleading, and it is sometimes impossible to "place" a book without examining it. It is said that in the first half of last century the Royal Agricultural Society ordered several copies of Edgeworth's "Essay on Irish Bulls," and in the latter half repeated the performance with Ruskin's "Notes on the Construction of Sheepfolds."

I remember, when I was an assistant with a big firm in Cape Town many years ago, a young apprentice who perpetrated a couple of "howlers." Once he came hot-foot from a customer for Bishop Cocks and hen's (Oxenden's) "Earnest Communicant," and another time for Warne's "Moral (Model) Cookery." But his chef d'œuvre links him with history. In 1893 or 1894, not long after the pioneer column of occupation had reached Salisbury (Mashonaland) the late Mr. Rhodes was very keen on sending them books for their library. Just inside the door we had a set of Mr. Fisher Unwin's "Story of the Nations" Series. Mr. Rhodes came in one day, took a look at the set, turned to the lad (who happened to be nearest to

DURATION OF COPYRIGHT

DEAR SIR,—It is worthy of note that the duration of copyright of the late Mr. Albert Midlane's first hymn, "Hark! in the Presence of Our God," written in 1842, will upon its expiry in 1916 have extended over a period of seventy-four years. The jubilee of the hymn by which Mr. Midlane was best known, "There's a Friend for Little Children," was celebrated in February last, only a few weeks before the author's decease. Many of his writings will have enjoyed a copyright existence of between fifty and sixty years. Is not this a somewhat exceptional record?—Yours, &c.,

F. T. WATT.

Three Sumptuous Volumes

From Mr. J. W. Arrowsmith, Bristol, and Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Ltd.—"Faith Healing," by H. J. Wilkins, D.D. "In every heresy . . . . which makes headway, there must be an underlying or fundamental truth." Dr. Wilkins is by no means a worshipper in the Temple of Christian Science, but he confesses to a belief in some forms of Faith Healing. He himself has had personal and practical experience of the subject, and what he has to say is sensible if unorthodox.

Messrs. G. Bell & Sons have added to the other volumes of their "Queen's Treasures Series" another of Mrs. Ewing's books, "Jan of the Windmill." Beautifully printed, and with delicate coloured illustrations by M. V. Wheelhouse, it forms a delightful gift-book.

From Messrs. A. Brown & Sons, Ltd.—"Young Citizen Readers: Fellowship." This excellently arranged reader is intended for senior forms. It is divided into six parts, as follows: Mutual aid; character of the citizen; health of the citizen; the citizen's home and business; the citizen and the State; a citizen of the world. The volume is not overloaded with illustrations, but those it does contain are wisely chosen and well reproduced.

From Messrs. Cassell & Co.—"Everyday Japan," by Arthur Lloyd, M.A. The author has lived and worked twenty-five years in Japan, he is a former Fellow of Peterhouse, and now Lecturer at the Imperial University at Tokio. He is, therefore, well qualified to give us an accurate picture of the everyday life of the people. No detail escapes him, and none is too small to interest him; for he has that priceless gift of sympathy which makes his pages something more than mere records of observed facts. Be the subject what it will, police, markets, art, music, religion, wrestlers, students, women's work—on all he sheds light, and interests his readers. The photographs are numerous and good, and the eight full-page coloured plates are things of real beauty.

From the Same.—"The Yellow God," by H. Rider Haggard. The Yellow God was a kind of mask made of gold; its face was that of a woman, malevolent yet very beautiful; and it had strange occult powers. It came into the possession of a penniless young Englishman who, unacknowledged even by himself, had a superstitious reverence for its strange qualities. Records of immeasurable treasure led him to the West Coast of Africa, accompanied by a native servant, Jeekie, and by the mysterious Yellow God. Their adventures were of an amazing kind, and they are described by Mr. Rider Haggard with a luxuriance of imagination and a wealth of language which few writers can command. The story has a strong love interest, and the most elemental passions of human nature rule the various characters, and lead them to their destinies.

From Messrs. T. & T. Clark.—"The Tests of Life: a Study of the First Epistle of St. John; being the Kerr Lectures for 1909," by the Rev. Robert Law, D.D., Minister of Lauriston Place Church, Edinburgh. We recommend this volume, well thought out and well written as it is, to the consideration of that large and happily increasing class of people who prefer considered treatises to emotional pamphlets. The work, though naturally Protestant, is not controversial.

From Mr. Robert Culley.—"The New Testament: its authorship, date, and worth," by the Rev. Joseph Agar Beet, D.D. The object of this neat little volume is not so much to give information about the authorship, date and circumstances of the books of the New Testament, as to emphasise their value as the firm and broad historical foundation of the Christian faith and hope. The Gospels and Acts are not touched; but each of the other books is concisely dealt with, and the reasons for believing it to be a genuine apostolic work are fairly stated. The general tone is (very properly) conservative; but Dr. Beet agrees with most modern critics in doubting the authenticity of the Second Epistle of Peter.

From Messrs. Collier & Co.—"Snowbound:" The record of a theatrical touring party," by Mr. Bram Stoker. The company are snowed up in a Highland train, and enliven the time by a variety of tales, the accuracy of which (Mr. Stoker says) is not guaranteed, but which doubtless served their purpose, as they will serve the reader's, if he is snowbound in train or by his own fireside.

From the Same.—"The Heart of Monica." This painful and vivid "human document" is undeniably powerful as a study of a sensitive and refined woman tied to a hopeless drunkard. It is given in the form of a series of letters, and ends upon a happy note. Whether so realistic a treatment of a distressing situation is suitable in a novel may be doubted, but if it is to be done at all then we have no fault to find in the rendering before us. The book is anonymous.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—"New Things and Old in Saint Thomas Aquinas." We cordially recommend this translation of some of the many writings and treatises of the angelic doctor as providing an interesting insight into the realities of Scholasticism and Catholicism. The Introduction by H. C. O'Neill is masterly, and we think he is worthy of all praise for his attempt to introduce "one of the greatest intellects of history" to a generation which, whether it be modernist or worldly, is fast losing grip of the spirit, the strength and the truth of that Past whose key is the Catholic Faith.

From the Same.—"The Story of Pisa," by Janet Ross and Nelly Erichsen. After stating that this is one of the volumes in Messrs. Dent's admirable "Mediæval Town Series" one need not say much more in praise of this handsome, useful and interesting little work. Like its fellows it is a history as well as a guide book. And the history of that strange little city which was once a powerful maritime state is as various and eventful as almost any of the wondrous stories of Italian City States. The first hundred pages chronicling the career of Pisa are by Mrs. Ross, the last three hundred by Miss Erichsen, who is also artist of thirty pleasing pictures, of a character known to the possessors of "Assissi," "Rome," "Verona," and "Venice," in the same justly popular series. Three of them show different views of that most picturesque of groups—the duomo, baptistery, and leaning tower. Besides Miss Erichsen's sketches the book is ornamented by ten reproductions of ancient pictures, one showing the tower in which Dante's Ugolino della Gherardesia and his sons and grandsons died of famine. Bonanno's map of Pisa, about a thousand and ten years old, and a modern large-scale plan. Friends of the late Mr. C. F. Blackburn, who was for many years editor of the "English Catalogue of Books," and who used "Alla Giornata" as his motto and pen-name, will be interested in the description of Palazzo Uppezinghi on page 347. Strange to say that page is left out of the index, though pages 119, 135, 139, where the palace is casually mentioned, are given.

From Messrs. Henry J. Drane, Ltd.—"It Was not to Be." Translated from the German by F. M. Johnson. A sentimental story of unsatisfied love. It is written in the first person, and the hero's vanity and self-satisfaction are rather irritating. The characters are well drawn, though the writing is careless and amateurish.

From the Same.—"Under the Pink Chestnuts," by William Parrott. A story of the old-fashioned type, breezy and wholesome. The action takes place in the country, among the upper middle-classes; there is plenty of open-air exercise, hunting, &c., and most of the characters are plain, honest folk whose joys and sorrows are described with sympathy and understanding. There is a strong love interest, the characterisation is good, and the destinies of the more prominent personages are suitably rounded off.

From the Same.—"Helen Polska's Lover; or the Merchant Prince," by Adolphe Danziger. The scene of this novel is laid in Warsaw, and the author asks us to bear in mind that things Polish must not be judged by English standards. But no apology is needed, for the romance of the chivalrous shopkeeper who refuses to buy his aristocratic bride, and will only win her by sheer merit, is of a kind to appeal to human sympathies everywhere. The style, though not free from Americanisms, is idiomatic and direct, and the story is eminently readable.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., LTD., 100, SOUTHWARK STREET, LONDON, S.E.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—The English Review for March contains further instalments of Joseph Conrad's "Some Reminiscences," Granville Barker's "Georgiana," and H. G. Wells' "Tono-Bungay." Mr. Hilaire Belloc has a censored article on "The Source of Information," and there is a typical article entitled "The Homelessness of Jones," by Mr. G. K. Chesterton.

From the Same.—"Faith," by Mr. R. B. Cunninghame Graham. A score of short stories by a writer whose literary grace and charm are well-known. There is no pretension to any great plot or thrilling incident; but we are given a series of quiet picturesque vignettes portraying diverse lives in Spain and elsewhere. The nun, the old socialist, the priest, the blind Arab, and many other types confess themselves in Mr. Graham's sympathetic pages "strangers and pilgrims on the earth."

From Messrs. Everett & Co.—"Felix Stone," by Alice and Claude Askew. This is the story of a self-made millionaire, who marries for love when poor, goes to America and makes a huge fortune, returns and marries, or pretends to marry, a proud, cold, selfish aristocratic beauty, knowing his first wife to be alive. Driven insane for a time by his cruel treatment, the real wife loses her memory long enough for her husband and his wife in the eyes of the world to get to hate each other properly. He is wandering over London Bridge at midnight or near it, driven half mad by the callousness of the woman who has borne him a daughter, and who insists on going to a ball with an old lover the night her child is dying. On London Bridge he sees a woman throw herself into the icy river, he jumps in, saves her, and finds it is his real wife, Dorothy. While clinging to a barge chain in mid-Thames he recognises her, gets her to say she forgives him and loves him, and everything comes out fairly right in the end. Such clever weavers of stories of life and love and hate as Alice and Claude Askew may be relied on to provide plenty of fairly exciting reading, and this their latest story is not likely to disappoint their large public.

From Messrs. Gale & Polden, Ltd.—"Handbook for Drivers of the Mounted Services," by an Adjutant. This invaluable little book contains, among other things, Catechism for Recruits, Notes on Grooming, Care of Saddlery, Model Orders for Drivers when on Duty, Veterinary Hints for Common Ailments and Injuries, and Hygienic Notes, and should be of great use to Territorial recruits in the mounted forces as an aid to promotion, for it is the knowledge of these things that produces smartness, and smartness is what is required in both the Territorial and Regular Armies. Although this book is written by a soldier for soldiers, there is no reason why it should not also be used by those civilians who keep horses or have the care of horses, and we can safely recommend it to both.

From the Same.—"Why I should Join the Territorial Force of My Country," by "V. D.," setting forth in an interesting way the advantages of joining the Territorial Army, the benefits derived from it, and giving tables in answer to the questions, "What pay shall I receive while in camp?" and "What shall I have to do?" There seems every probability that it will be circulated widely, as it is published at the low rate of 7s. per hundred, and at special low rates for large quantities. Given the circulation, it will certainly be a success, and a great help to recruiting. A credit to its publishers in every way.

From The Gresham Publishing Co.—"The Modern Baker, Confectioner and Caterer," edited by John Kirkland. Divisional, Vol. 5. The publication of this practical and scientific work for the Baking and Allied Trades proceeds apace. Vol. 5 is divided into five sections dealing respectively with menu dishes, light refreshments, outside catering and bakery fixtures and fittings. There are many contributions from leading specialists and trade experts, and a very large number of first-class illustrations, some of which are coloured. The thoroughness, accuracy and good taste which we always find in the books of these publishers are evident throughout.

From Messrs. Harper & Brothers.—Two new volumes issued by Messrs. Harper in their "Library of Living Thought" are certain of a wide welcome. They are Professor Flinders Petrie's "Personal Religion in Egypt before Christianity," and Tolstoi's "The Teaching of Jesus."

In Messrs. T. C. and E. C. Jack's series of The World's Story Tellers "Stories from Balzac" and "Stories from Chateaubriand" are now to be found, both these latest volumes being provided with an introductory essay by Mr. Arthur Ransome.

From the Same.—"Merry Moments with Scholars," by Henry J. Barker. A collection of authentic anecdotes concerning the school life of children, with a number of short essays written by youngsters on various subjects. Most of them are very amusing, and the book is well calculated to while away an idle half-hour.

From the Same.—"Three Plays of Shakespeare," by Algernon Charles Swinburne. The three plays studied are—"Othello," "King Richard II.," and "King Lear." Mr. Swinburne, of course, is a fine and illuminating critic of Elizabethan drama, and he has many subtle things to say in these three short papers. The keynote of the book is to be found in its opening sentence: "If nothing were left of Shakespeare but the single tragedy of "King Lear," it would still be as plain as it is now that he was the greatest man that ever lived."

From Mr. William Heinemann.—The fifth volume of "The Greatness and Decline of Rome," by Guglielmo Ferrero (translated by the Rev. H. J. Chaytor). This volume deals with the Republic of Augustus, a momentous and an interesting period, which is ably treated by the author in his masterly manner. Those who have the former volumes will be anxious to add this to their shelves.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton two neat volumes of their "Useful Knowledge Series": (1) "Geographical Discovery," by Mr. Joseph Jacobs, with 24 maps; and (2) "Germ Life," by Mr. H. W. Conn, with 34 illustrations. These books are models of popular exposition of scientific subjects—clear, readable, and as little obscured by technicalities as the conditions permit. The illustrations of bacteria are clear and correct, and if some of the maps in Mr. Jacobs' volume are necessarily much reduced, he more than makes up for this by the admirable summaries of geographical discovery at the end of his volume. These alone are worth the modest shilling which is the price of each book.

From Messrs. William R. Jenkins & Co.—"Lectures et Conversations," par Dubois et De Geer. Following each lesson are a number of questions directly bearing upon it; the lessons are alternated with stories and anecdotes, many idioms and conversational expressions being introduced. Everything is arranged so naturally and logically that the student desiring to continue his French lessons by himself could not desire a more suitable book.

From Messrs. King, Sell & Olding, Ltd.—"Heat and Other Forces," by Colonel W. F. Badgley. The particular value of Colonel Badgley's book lies in its independence and outspokenness. He is no friend of the cock-sure scientist who selects and arranges facts to fit in with his latest theory, and he exposes many fallacies that have from time to time originated from, or received the support of, eminent scientists. The book will appeal to all educated men, for though it enters into questions of profound interest, it does so in non-technical language. There are thirty-three chapters in all, each of which is self-contained and independent of the rest; they deal with such subjects as the sun, atmosphere, vibrations, diffusion, cold and electricity.

From Mr. John Lane.—"The Prince's Pranks," by Charles Lowe. A happy-go-lucky story of an autographed fan, secret service agents, anarchists, a disguised Prince, a bomb covered with pineapple rind, journalism, and a hundred other seemingly disconnected subjects. Prince William of Prussia is the central character and his "pranks" are of an amazing description. The situations brought about by the ingenuity of Mr. Lowe are sometimes exceedingly comic and often unusually exciting, and the anarchist plot to murder four kings in Queen Victoria's Jubilee Procession provides a number of startling pages. Mr. Lowe has a ready and fluent pen, and his story is light, amusing and original in style.

From the Same.—"The Journal of John Mayne," edited by John Mayne Colles. The pages of this most readable volume consist of contemporary notes taken during a tour on the Continent, when it was re-opened to the English after the Revolution, immediately before "The Hundred Days." The author was twenty-three years old when he paid this visit to France and Italy. He did not penetrate into the high places of politics, nor does he recount interviews with important personages. His study was of the ordinary man, and of Continental views, manners, customs, and amusements generally; his descriptions and comments, expressed with kindly humour, evince shrewd powers of observation and criticism. Mr. Mayne had a well-informed mind and an insatiable intellectual curiosity concerning all matters that attract the attention of the cultured Englishman. His art criticism, whether of painting, sculpture, music or the drama, has the freshness and energy of original judgment. The book is illustrated by a number of reproductions of contemporary prints, and presents to the reader a definite picture of life and travel under conditions which have vanished as completely as those of a thousand years ago.

From the Same.—"El Greco: an Account of his Life and Works," by A. F. Calvert and C. Gasquoine Hartly, with 136 reproductions from his most celebrated pictures. We are glad to see an account of "El Greco" included in the Spanish Series, though he was not of Spanish origin. There is probably no painter about whom less is known, his very name is uncertain, and almost the only definite fact that can be relied on is the date of his death at Toledo in 1614, when Velazquez was fifteen years old. Mr. Calvert claims for him that "he was the inspirer of Velazquez, and the forerunner of modern art." The reader will be able, with the help of the large number of illustrations, to form a clear idea of "El Greco's powers, and his position in the history of Spanish art—for whatever his birth-place it is to Spain that he unquestionably belongs."

From Messrs. Macmillan.—"Peace and Happiness," by the Right Hon. Lord Avebury, P.C. As Lord Avebury says: "We all wish for peace and happiness; but how are they to be secured?" The veteran philosopher discusses the problem with all the easy grace and abundant quotation familiar to readers of his other kindred works; and concludes, like all the great ethical teachers, that "everyone can, if he chooses, keep his mind on the whole at peace, contented and cheerful. He can do it, but no one else can, though others may help." Many readers may find help, as well as enjoyment, in a perusal of these artless pages.

From the Same.—"Jimbo: a Fantasy," by Algernon Blackwood. Jimbo is a sensitive and highly imaginative lad who has for a father a well-meaning, but blundering Colonel. The boy "sees" things—things that have no objective existence; but these creations of his imagination are quite pleasant until his governess, with the best intentions, suggests that the Empty House contains something evil. Henceforth he suffers, and an accident rendering him unconscious, he journeys through space, and has a jumble of strange other-world adventures. There is real imagination and psychological insight in the "fantasy," and we can recommend its perusal to all who have children in their care.

From the Same.—A volume of their Illustrated Pocket Dickens, "Our Mutual Friend" with a Bibliographical Introduction by Charles Dickens the Younger, and a facsimile of the original wrapper.

From the Same.—"Social Life at Rome in the Age of Cicero," by W. Warde Fowler, Fellow and Lecturer of Lincoln College, Oxford. Those who know Mr. Fowler's previous books on "Roman Festivals" and "The City States of the Greeks and Romans" will take up his new book with lively and confident interest. Like those works it is concerned with matters of which the professed historian too seldom takes notice, though they are essential to a right understanding of men and events. Mr. Fowler describes Rome in the time of Cicero, and shows with remarkable fulness of knowledge how people of all classes lived, though naturally he has more ample information concerning the rich than the poor. Opening with a chapter on the topography of the Eternal City, he guides the reader on what may be called a personally conducted tour, in the course of which various scenes or objects famous in the history of Rome are visited. Then we have glimpses of the lower orders in their daily life, of the men of business and the governing aristocracy. Later chapters deal with marriage and education, slavery, amusements, town and country life and religion. Cicero is, of course, the central figure, and much of the information is derived from his letters, especially those addressed to his friend and financial adviser Atticus. But many and sometimes quite unexpected sources are drawn upon. Thus in the section on Slavery there is a reference to Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn," and such recent writers as Sir W. M. Ramsay and Dr. Q. B. Mayor are also quoted; while the Epilogue is devoted to a consideration of Mr. Balfour's recent lecture on "Decadence." These names give some indication of the wide field from which Mr. Fowler has draw his illustrations and the thoroughness with which he has done his work. Students will find his book a Compendium of the Social History of Rome at a time of unsurpassed interest, and the general reader a wonderfully fascinating and graphic story, full of absorbing detail and containing not a few admirable character sketches. A map and several illustrations enhance the value of the volume.

From Messrs. Horace Marshall & Son.—"The New Latin Delectus: Book II.," by W. Jenkyn Thomas, M.A., and E. P. Doughty, M.A. This Delectus is intended for the earlier reading of boys and girls who learn Latin, and especially for schools with a leaving age of about sixteen. The humanistic side of teaching has been insisted upon. The extracts contained in the volume present, so far as is possible through the medium of Latin, the Greek myths which have most influenced English literature. There is a complete vocabulary, and the notes are clear and to the point.

From the Same.—"A Primer of General History," by A. J. Evans, M.A. Of late years there has been a growing recognition of the necessity of teaching outlines of general history in our schools. "The Primer of General History," of which the present volume, dealing with the period from 1492 to 1870, forms the third part, is an inexpensive text-book dealing with the subject in a thorough and practical manner.

From the Same.—"The Heroes of the Hebrew Monarchy," by Mrs. F. S. Boas. Mrs. Boas has a sympathetic pen, and an intuitive understanding of the point of view of young people. Her slight but living and picturesque studies of the lives of Samuel, Saul, David, Solomon, Elijah and Elisha are exceedingly capable pieces of work. They have not been written for the purposes of religious instruction, but rather in order to touch the imagination of young students, so that they may be induced to inquire further for themselves.

From Masters & Co.—"Life After Death," by Rev. S. C. Gayford, M.A. The author treats of the subject of life after death in all its aspects—the intermediate state, the resurrection of the body, the last Judgment and Heaven. Much of the matter is necessarily speculative, but in the opening chapter the reader is referred to the sources of our knowledge on this solemn subject, and is thus able to see that little concerning our future life can be known with certainty.

From Messrs. Meiklejohn & Holden.—"A Map of South America," the first of a series of Oroscopic Maps, has just been issued by Messrs. Meiklejohn & Holden. It is printed in two colours, the land brown and the sea blue; the mountains are marked in black and white lines, and the rivers in the same colour but somewhat lighter than the sea. There are no superfluous names, and the map, which measures 29½ inches by 18¾ inches, is certainly an excellent one for school teaching.

From Mr. J. Milne.—"The Indian Criminal," by H. L. Adam. Mr. Adam has compiled his chatty volume principally from verbal and documentary information given him by officials engaged in India. His work is not a serious contribution to criminology or psychology, but simply a collection of stories, descriptions and anecdotes, which, because of their unusual nature, shed an unfamiliar light on sides of life which are not often revealed to the public. The Eastern poisoner is described, and there are two chapters of unusual convict stories; railway thieves seem to carry on a good trade, and cheating and gambling are evidently not confined to European scoundrels. The account of a modern gaol is interesting, and there are readable chapters on curious clues, military pension frauds, and the iron safe gang. The volume is well illustrated.

From the Same.—"Thou Shalt Not." This is the suggestive title of a story of Devonshire peasant life by Newman Harding. No one will be able to deny its interest or power. Steve, the hero, is a fine young fellow, whose temptation and other trials enlist the reader's sympathy. The author has a fine, strong style, and handles delicate situations with admirable skill. It seems impossible that brutes such as are described in this book are allowed to exist in the lovely West Country.

From Messrs. Moffat, Yard & Co., New York (London: Arthur F. Bird).—"The Maid's Forgiveness," a Play, by John Jay Chapman. This three-act play by an American dramatist is founded upon incidents connected with the career of King Sigmund, a German monarch of the Twelfth Century. His secret marriage, when a Prince and Crusader, with a Burgomaster's daughter leads to the usual complications, and forms the pivot upon which the skilful plot is developed. The drama is written throughout both in prose and blank verse. It strikes us as well adapted for stage representation, private or public.

From Messrs. Morgan & Scott, Ltd.—"A Handbook to Truth," by the Rev. John O. West. Mr. George Nicholls, M.P., who contributes a Preface to this little book does it no more than justice in saying that "it is a book for the times, and worth reading by all who have the welfare of our nation at heart." It tells the old old story of the power of Christ to regenerate the heart of an individual or of a nation, but tells it with freshness and simplicity, in earnest conviction that "for every need of mankind God has this remedy in Christ."

From the Same.—"Life in the Word," by Mr. Philip Mauro. An unpretending but by no means worthless endeavour to exhibit the Bible as the living and life-giving voice of God; and to prove that "there is not a single assertion of the Bible that is in conflict with any demonstrated fact of science."

From Messrs. A. R. Mowbray & Co., Ltd.—"Counsels and Precepts," a translation of selections from a French devotional book "De la vie et des Vertus Chrétiennes," by Mgr. Gay, Bishop of Authédon. Though modestly described as "Extracts," the English version forms a complete and continuous work. Its aim is to show that the conventual life is not a thing apart from, but rather an intensified form of, ordinary Christian life. It is recommended by Canon Body in a short Preface as likely to be of great practical value to members of religious communities.

From Mr. Eveleigh Nash.—"Hints on House Furnishing," by W. Shaw Sparrow. Mr. Shaw Sparrow is the author of many useful and interesting works, including The English House, The Modern Home, and the British Home of To-day; a new book therefore by this clever writer is likely to have an exceptional interest. Mr. Sparrow says the topic of this book is a problem or a set of problems, not in a vague something called decoration, but in a direct and tangible benefit to ourselves known as mother-wit or commonsense. The key-note of the whole book appears to be: get the best possible value for your money in house furnishing. As Mr. Sparrow says, a cottage can be furnished with fifty pounds or with five hundred thousand; no matter if the expenditure is small or large it should yield the highest possible interest in the way we expect. In the space at our disposal we cannot, unfortunately, do more than mention the subjects dealt with in this book. They include, taking the chapter headings:—House and Home, a Few Words on Cheapness, Systems or Methods of Furnishing, Taste, Character and Home Life, The English Tradition, On Colour, Walls and their Treatment, Floors and their Treatment, Ceilings, Windows, Blinds and Curtains, Textile Fabrics, Crockery, Furniture, Sanitary Appliances, &c. Apart from its value as a guide on the all-important subject of house furnishing, to those about to be married it is a highly entertaining book, full of hints and "tips" on what to expect and what to avoid, a mine of practical knowledge. The illustrations are many and good, and considerably enhance the value of the book, which is thoroughly sensible and most practical.

From The New Age Press, Ltd—"The Problem of Parliament: a Criticism and a Remedy," by Victor Grayson, M.P., and G. R. S. Taylor. The authors prove to their own satisfaction that the Liberal, Tory and Labour Parties have all failed in their attempts to deal with the problem of Reform. They then proceed to urge the need for the formation of a Socialist Party, which, we suppose, will do all that the other Parties have failed to do.

From Mr. David Nutt.—"Tommy and a Tower," by Fergus Graham. "Tommy" is a fascinating little lady, and the "Tower" is the unconventional dwelling-place of Mr. Cassilis, bachelor and misogynist. He rescues "Tommy" from a river in flood, carries her to his house, and most promptly falls in love. He is timid, however, and untoward events come in the way of consummation of his happiness, until the reader is thrilled by reading the description of a lady confessing her love! Curtain and subsequent happiness.

From Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Ltd.—"European Travellers in India," by Edward Farley Oaten, B.A., LL.B. The subject for the Le Bas Prize Essay of 1908 was as follows: "European travellers in India during the fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth centuries; the evidence afforded by them with respect to Indian social institutions, and the nature and influence of Indian Governments." Mr. Oaten has treated the subject from the human point of view, and he regards the various characters who flit across his pages in the light as much of adventurers and pioneers as of collectors of social and political facts. This method of treating the subject naturally tends to make the book wider in its appeal, though the period covered is so extensive that Mr. Oaten has not been able to enlarge on the more picturesque aspects of his subject.

From Messrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Ltd.—"The 'How does it Work' of Electricity," by Thomas W. Corbin. The title explains the nature of the book, which deals in an elementary yet accurate manner with such fascinating subjects as Dynamos, Electric Motors, Switches and Controllers, Switchboards, Transformers, Electric Heating and Lighting, Electric Tramways and Railways, &c. The information given is clear and easily understood, and many excellent half-tones and line drawings are given. It is an A1 book for any boy or man with a leaning towards things electric.

From Messrs. G. Philip & Son, Ltd.—"London to York: the great North Road." This is another of Messrs. G. Philip & Son's "Finger-post" Strip Maps. There is little, if any room for improvement in these maps, and they thoroughly deserve the large sale that they have. They are clearly printed, and further additions to this series will be welcome.

From The Premier Publishing Co., Ltd.—"The Licensed Victuallers' Year Book for 1909." The thirty-seventh issue of this valuable book is better than any of its predecessors, for various new features have been added, including special chapters advising the licensed victualler in the daily management of his business. All the old features are retained, and the book forms an admirable "remembrancer, record and calendar" for licensed victuallers, hotel-keepers, brewers, distillers, vintners, &c.

From Mr. Grant Richards.—"The Grip of Fear," by Maurice Level. Onesimus Coche, a Parisian journalist, late at night meets two men and a woman returning from a murder they have just committed. Losing sight of the murderess, he traces the habitat of their victim, and discovers the dead body of an old man in an empty house. The idea occurs to Coche that this is a splendid opportunity to give the public an object-lesson on the inefficiency of the police, so he purposely leaves behind him a few false clues, and during the next few days behaves in such a manner as to throw suspicion upon himself. But he gets entangled in his own web, and when arrested finds himself unable to prove his innocence. The nervous tension he undergoes breeds incipient insanity; he is condemned to death, but at the moment of execution he is saved. The book is strong and unusual; Mr. Level does not spare the reader in his descriptions of unpleasant scenes.

From Messrs. William Rider & Sons, Ltd.—"Psychic Philosophy," by V. C. Desertis. Mr. Desertis approaches the great mass of psychic phenomena recorded by recent investigators in a philosophic spirit, and deduces from it a religion of natural law. He is convinced of the objectivity of the soul of man, and has with much skill and clearness collated the evidence which led him to that conviction. The volume is, in reality, a reprint, the first edition having appeared twelve years ago; but the scheme of it, and the manner in which it has been carried out, are new enough to-day, and the concluding chapter brings it quite up to date. Dr. Alfred Russel Wallace contributes an approving introductory note.

From the Same.—"The Cloud upon the Sanctuary," is a translation by Madame Isabella de Steiger of letters written about 1795, by Karl von Eckartshausen, one of the group of German mystics contemporary with Lavater. The theory developed is that of an exoteric Divine Society of which the Christian Church is only an outward shell or symbol. With this view the "real value" of the rites and tenets of Catholic Christendom is explained for the benefit of the elect. The translator has added the elucidatory appendices, and there is an introduction by Mr. A. E. Waite. Those who desire to study occultism from a Christian standpoint will find much to attract them in this book.

From Messrs. Alston Rivers, Ltd.—"The Dartmoor House that Jack Built," by John Trevena. This clever book tells how the inhabitants of a Dartmoor parish, or many of them, join forces to bring a great big libel action against John Trevena for things "wrote about 'em" in his other "buke," and we do not wonder at it. Mr. Trevena must not imagine his readers have all got indiarubber patiences; we get mighty tired of so much of "Willum" and his dirty old mother, and the idiotic "man," and the rest of the unattractive inhabitants of the place. Beatrice is the redeeming feature of the story, and we shall be glad to meet her again—though she is rather too fond of telling yarns. If the rest of the characters all tumbled down one of their old disused mines nobody would shed a tear over them, and Mr. Trevena could start with a fresh lot.

From The Sanitary Publishing Co., Ltd.—"Modern Methods of Sewage Disposal," by W. H. Trentham and James Saunders. A practical handbook for the use of members of local authorities and their officials. The experience of twenty years in the design, construction, and practical management of sewage disposal has enabled the authors to place before the reader a book that is of the utmost practical value; it is simply written, well-illustrated, and not too technical.

From The Walter Scott Publishing Co., Ltd.—"A Short History of the English Stage from its Beginnings to the Summer of the year 1908," by R. Farquharson Sharp. This is an attempt to give within reasonable compass a connected history of the development of the English theatre from the days of miracle plays to the present time. English drama is dealt with only incidentally, the main subject being English theatres and English acting. An excellent index adds greatly to the value of this interesting and useful work.

From Messrs. Seeley & Co., Ltd.—"How Telegraphs and Telephones Work," by Charles R. Gibson. The author wrote this book in response to many requests from readers of his "Romance of Modern Electricity and Electricity of To-day," who wanted further details of interest to those studying the subjects. He has produced an interesting and useful book which, dealing with such subjects as The Electric Current, Telegrams, Cablegrams, Wireless Telephony and Telegraphy, Induction Coils, Lighting, &c., in a non-technical manner, is well adapted for perusal by non-scientific readers. The illustrations are good and numerous.

From Messrs. Sisleys, Ltd.—"Nightshade," by Roy Horniman. Four stories, each of them original and striking in its way. They are all rather painful, and one—of a white lady and her daughter and a negro, the sole survivors of a shipwreck, living on a desert island—deals with things which even if imaginable, are perhaps best left untold; but the tales have an undoubted attractiveness and gloomy power. The book is printed in a style worthy of the "makers of beautiful books."

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—"The Wander Years," by J. H. Yoxall, M.P. Mr. Yoxall has turned essayist, and he writes in this form as though to the manner born. Such ease, such charm, such frequent and felicitous allusion to art and letters are not often met with in the literature of to-day, and it is no exaggeration to say that the author has devised a new genre of essay. The book mingles individual views of life, literature, art and connoisseurship with brilliant sketches of associated places and persons; it is witty, gay, and full of the joy and sadness of life; and it has a real and unmistakable literary flavour. Such work as this will not go unnoticed and unacknowledged, and the volume will considerably enhance Mr. Yoxall's reputation.

From Mr. Elliot Stock.—"The Mystery of Seven," by E. M. Smith. Miss (?) Smith has already written a book entitled "The Mystery of Three," and there can be no question of her ability to deal with occult subjects. She maintains that the number seven is used throughout the Bible as a "catchword," and calls attention to many silent analogies, or parallelisms, between the Old and New Testaments. Many of her arguments are enforced with skill, and her grasp of the subject is firm and sure.

From the Same.—"Light on the Advent," by T. Nayler. Mr. Nayler has written a treatise that, with a good deal of plausibility and solid argument, tends to show that the Advent, or the Second Coming of Messiah, took place, in fulfilment of prophecy, at the end of the siege and destruction of Jerusalem and its magnificent Temple by the Romans (A.D. 70). His subject matter is based on the prophecies of the Messiah, recorded by some few of the Apostles in the Gospels and Epistles, and by St. John in his Book of Revelation, and comprises all that is vouchsafed touching the Second Coming.

From the Same.—"An Oxford Tutor: The Life of the Rev. Thomas Short, B.D.," by C. E. H. Edwards. A short, sympathetic account of a wise and good man whose name to generations of Oxford men has been and will be a household word. "Thoughts on Bible Teaching," by Constance Nankivell. Divided into three parts—the Old Testament, the New Testament, and the Church Catechism. Serious in aim, Miss Nankivell has done her utmost to make her little volume sound and useful. "Resurrection Life," by Rev. Nathaniel Jones, M.A. Introductory Note by Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D.D. Provides those who love the Prayer-book with some helpful suggestions as to how our Church services may be brought to bear upon the practical realities of the Christian life. "Golden Gates," compiled by F. E. Palin. Miss Palin has collected a number of moral precepts and thoughts in prose and verse from such varied writers as Geraldine Jewsbury and St. Augustine, Adelaide Procter and St. Cyril.

From the Same.—"Miracle and Infidelity," by Samuel Knaggs, M.R.C.S. Having reached his eightieth year, and being unable any longer to take part in professional life, Mr. Knaggs has set down some of the facts, and the conclusions founded upon them, which have brought him religious conviction. He is convinced of the truth of miracle, of its necessity, of its Divine origin, and of the general trustworthiness of Bible revelation.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—A new volume of their Sociology Series, "The Crowd:" A study of the Popular Mind, translated from the French of M. Gustav Le Bon. This is the sixth issue of this well-known and valuable, if somewhat depressing, book.
